

THE WORKS
OF
L O R D B Y R O N

WITH HIS LETTERS AND JOURNALS, AND HIS LIFE,
BY THOMAS MOORE, ESQ.

---

IN FOURTEEN VOLUMES.

VOL XI

---

LONDON:
JOHN MURRAY, ALBEMARLE STREET.

1832.

ADVERTISEMENT.

---

IN the contents of this Volume, together with the fourth Canto of "Childe Harold," the reader may trace the poetical, as well as personal, history of Lord Byron, from October, 1816, when he left Switzerland, down to the beginning of 1820, by which time he had taken up his residence at Ravenna.

It includes some example of almost every kind of poetical composition in which he ever excelled among others, the first, and perhaps greatest, of his dramatic efforts, and the earliest specimen of his comic narrative.

London, October 10 1832

CONTENTS OF VOL. XI

---

	Page
MANFRED, A DRAMATIC POEM - - -	1
THE LAMENT OF TASSO - - -	77
BEPPO, A VENETIAN STORY - - -	95
MAZEPPA - - -	143
ODE ON VENICE - - -	179
THE MORGANTE MAGGIORE OF PULCI -	187
Canto I - - -	200
THE PROPHECY OF DANTE - - -	259
Canto I - - -	269
Canto II - - -	279
Canto III - - -	285
Canto IV - - -	293
OCCASIONAL PIECES
Versicles - - -	307
Lines to Mr Murray ["To hook the Reader," &c] -	307
Epistle from Mr Murray to Dr Polidori ["Dear
Doctor, I have read your Play"] - - -	308
Epistle to Mr Murray ["My dear Mr Murray"] -	311

	Page
Lines to Mr Murray ["Strahan, Tonson, Lintot of the Times"]	313
To Thomas Moore ["What are you doing now?"]	314
Epitaph for William Pitt - - -	314
Sonnet to George the Fourth, on the Repeal of Lord Edward Fitzgerald's Forfeiture - - -	315
Epigram From the French of Rulhières - -	316
On my Wedding-Day - - -	316
Epigram ["In digging up your Bones, Tom Paine"]	316
Stanzas ["When a Man hath no Freedom," &c] -	317
Epigram ["The World is a Bundle of Hay"] -	317
The Irish Avatar - - -	317
On the Birth of John William Rizzo Hoppner -	324

M A N F R E D,

A

DRAMATIC POEM

“ There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,
Than are dreamt of in your philosophy ”

---

[The following extracts from Lord Byron's letters to Mr Murray, are all we have to offer respecting the history of the composition of Manfred —

Venice, Feb 15 1817 —“ I forgot to mention to you, that a kind of Poem in dialogue (in blank verse) or Drama, from which ‘ the Incantation ’ is an extract, begun last summer in Switzerland, is finished — it is in three acts, but of a very wild, metaphysical, and inexplicable kind. Almost all the persons — but two or three — are Spirits of the earth and air, or the waters, the scene is in the Alps, the hero a kind of magician, who is tormented by a species of remorse, the cause of which is left half unexplained. He wanders about invoking these Spirits, which appear to him, and are of no use, he at last goes to the very abode of the Evil Principle, in propria persona, to evocate a ghost, which appears, and gives him an ambiguous and disagreeable answer, and, in the third act, he is found by his attendants dying in a tower where he had studied his art. You may perceive, by this outline, that I have no great opinion of this piece of fantasy, but I have at least rendered it quite impossible for the stage, for which my intercourse with Drury Lane has given me the greatest contempt. I have not even copied it off, and feel too lazy at present to attempt the whole, but when I have, I will send it you, and you may either throw it into the fire or not ”

March 3 —“ I sent you the other day, in two covers, the first act of ‘ Manfred,’ a drama as mad as Nat Lee's Bedlam tragedy, which was in twenty-five acts and some odd scenes — mine is but in three acts ”

March 9 —“ In remitting the third act of the sort of dramatic poem of which you will by this time have received the two first, I have little to observe, except that you must not publish it (if it ever is published) without giving me previous notice. I have really and truly no notion whether it is good or bad, and as this was not the case with the principal of my for publications, I am, therefore, inclined to rank it very humbly. You will submit it to Mr Gifford, and to whomsoever you please besides. The thing, you will see at a glimpse, could never be attempted or thought of for the stage, I much doubt if for publication even. It is too much in my old style, but I composed it actually with a horror of the stage, and with a view to render the thought of it impracticable, knowing the zeal of my friends that I should try that for which I have an invincible repugnance, viz a representation. I certainly am a devil of a mannerist, and must leave off, but what could I do? Without exertion of some kind, I should have sunk under my imagination and reality ”

March 25 —“ With regard to the ‘ Witch Drama,’ I repeat, that I have not an idea if it is good or bad. If bad, it must, on no account, be risked in publication, if good, it is at your service. I value it at three hundred guineas, or less, if you like it. Perhaps, if published, the best way will be to add it to your winter volume, and not publish separately. The price will show you I don't pique myself upon it, so speak out. You may put it into the fire, if you like, and Gifford don't like.”

April 9 — “As for ‘Manfred,’ the two first acts are the best, the third so so, but I was blown with the first and second heats. You may call it ‘a Poem,’ for it is no Drama, and I do not choose to have it called by so d—d a name, — ‘a Poem in dialogue,’ or — Pantomime, if you will, any thing but a green room synonyme, and this is your motto —

‘There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,
Than are dreamt of in your philosophy.’”

The Third Act was re-written before publication, as to the particulars of which, the reader is referred to a subsequent note. To avoid overloading the margin, we may give here the most important paragraphs of the two ablest critiques that immediately followed the appearance of Manfred —

“In Manfred, we recognise at once the gloom and pæncy of that soul which burned and blasted and fed upon itself, in Harold, and Conrad, and Lara — and which comes again in this piece, more in sorrow than in anger — more proud, perhaps, and more awful than ever — but with the fiercer traits of its misanthropy subdued, as it were, and quenched in the gloom of a deeper despondency. Manfred does not, like Conrad and Lara, wreak the anguish of his burning heart in the dangers and daring of desperate and predatory war — nor seek to drown bitter thoughts in the tumult of perpetual contention, nor yet, like Harold, dash he sweep over the peopled scenes of the earth with high disdain and aversion, and make his survey of the business, and pleasures, and studies of man an occasion for taunts and sarcasms, and the food of an unmeasurable spleen. He is fixed by the genius of the poet in the majestic solitudes of the central Alps — where, from his youth up, he has lived in proud but calm seclusion from the ways of men, conversing only with the magnificent forms and aspects of nature by which he is surrounded, and with the Spirits of the Elements over whom he has acquired dominion, by the secret and unhallowed studies of sorcery and magic. He is averse, indeed, from mankind, and scorns the low and frivolous nature to which he belongs, but he cherishes no animosity or hostility to that feeble race. Their concerns excite no interest — their pursuits no sympathy — their joys no envy. It is irksome and vexatious for him to be crossed by them in his melancholy musings, — but he treats them with gentleness and pity, and, except when stung to impatience by too importunate an intrusion, is kind and considerate to the comforts of all around him. — This piece is properly entitled a dramatic poem — for it is merely poetical, and is not at all a drama or play in the modern acceptation of the term. It has no action, no plot, and no characters, Manfred merely muses and suffers from the beginning to the end. His distresses are the same at the opening of the scene and at its closing, and the temper in which they are borne is the same. A hunter and a priest, and some domestics, are indeed introduced, but they have no connection with the passions or sufferings on which the interest depends, and Manfred is substantially alone throughout the whole piece. He holds no communion but with the memory of the Being he had loved, and the immortal Spirits whom he evokes to reproach with his misery, and their inability to relieve it. These unearthly beings approach nearer to the cha-

acter of persons of the drama—but still they are but choral accompaniments to the performance, and Manfred is, in reality, the only actor and sufferer on the scene. To delineate his character indeed—to render conceivable his feelings—is plainly the whole scope and design of the poem, and the conception and execution are, in this respect, equally admirable. It is a grand and terrific vision of a being invested with superhuman attributes, in order that he may be capable of more than human sufferings, and be sustained under them by more than human force and pride. To object to the improbability of the fiction, is to mistake the end and aim of the author. Probabilities, we apprehend, did not enter at all into his consideration, his object was, to produce effect—to exalt and dilate the character through whom he was to interest or appal us—and to raise our conception of it, by all the helps that could be derived from the majesty of nature, or the dread of superstition. It is enough, therefore, if the situation in which he has placed him is conceivable, and if the supposition of its reality enhances our emotions and kindles our imagination,—for ~~that~~ Manfred only that we are required to fear, to pity, or admire. If we can once conceive of him as a real existence, and enter into the depth and the height of his pride and his sorrows, we may deal as we please with the means that have been used to furnish us with this impression, or to enable us to attain to this conception. We may regard them but as types, or metaphors, or allegories, but ~~no~~ is the thing to be expressed, and the feeling and the intellect of which all these are but shadows.”—JEFFERY

“In this very extraordinary poem, Lord Byron has pursued the same course as in the third canto of Childe Harold, and put out his strength upon the same objects. The action is laid among the mountains of the Alps—the characters are all, more or less, formed and swayed by the operations of the magnificent scenery around them, and every page of the poem teems with imagery and passion, though, at the same time, the mind of the poet is often overborne, as it were, by the strength and novelty of its own conceptions, and thus the composition, as a whole, is liable to many and fatal objections. But there is a still more novel exhibition of Lord Byron’s powers in this remarkable drama. He has here burst into the world of spirits, and, in the wild delight with which the elements of nature seem to have inspired him, he has endeavoured to embody and call up before him their ministering agents, and to employ these wild personifications, as he formerly employed the feelings and passions of man. We are not prepared to say, that, in this daring attempt, he has completely succeeded. We are inclined to think, that the plan he has conceived, and the principal character which he has wished to delineate, would require a fuller development than is here given to them, and, accordingly, a sense of imperfection, incompleteness, and confusion accompanies the mind throughout the perusal of the poem, owing either to some failure on the part of the poet, or to the inherent mystery of the subject. But though, on that account, it is difficult to comprehend distinctly the drift of the composition, it unquestionably exhibits many noble delineations of mountain scenery,—many impressive and terrible pictures of passion,—and many wild and awful visions of imaginary horror.”—PROFESSOR WILSON.]

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

C

---

MANFRED.
CHAMOIS HUNTER
ABBOT OF ST MAURICE MANUEL
HERMAN

WITCH OF THE ALPS
ARIMANES
NEMESIS
THE DESTINIES
SPIRITS, &c.

---

The Scene of the Drama is amongst the Higher Alps — partly in the Castle of Manfred, and partly in the Mountains.

MANFRED

---

ACT I

SCENE I

MANFRED alone — Scene, a Gothic Gallery — Time,
Midnight

Man. THE lamp must be replenish'd, but even then
It will not burn so long as I must watch
My slumbers,—if I slumber—are not sleep,
But a continuance of enduring thought,
Which then I can resist not in my heart
There is a vigil, and these eyes but close
To look within, and yet I live, and bear
The aspect and the form of breathing men
But grief should be the instructor of the wise, Sorrow is knowledge they who know the most Must turn the deepest o'er the fatal truth,
The Tree of Knowledge is not that of Life.
Philosophy and science, and the springs
Of wonder, and the wisdom of the world,
I have essay'd, and in my mind there is
A power to make these subject to itself—
But they avail not. I have done even good,

And I have met with good even among men --
 But this avail'd not I have had my foes,
 And none have baffled, any fallen before
 But this avail'd not — Good, or evil, life,
 Powers, passions, all I see in other beings,
 Have been to me as rain unto the sands,
 Since that all-nameless hour I have no dread,
 And feel the curse to have no natural fear,
 Nor fluttering throb, that beats with hopes or wishes,
 Or lurking love of something on the earth —
 Now to my task —

Mysterious Agency

Ye spirits of the unbounded Universe! <sup>(1)</sup>
 Whom I have sought in darkness and in light —
 Ye, who do compass earth about, and dwell
 In subtler essence—ye, to whom the tops
 Of mountains inaccessible are haunts, <sup>(2)</sup>
 And earth's and ocean's caves familiar things —
 I call upon ye by the written charm
 Which gives me power upon you      Rise ! appear !
[A pause.

They come not yet — Now by the voice of him
 Who is the first among you—by this sign
 Which makes you tremble—by the claims of him
 Who is undying, — Rise ! appear !      Appear !
[A pause

If it be so — Spirits of earth and air,
 Ye shall not thus elude me by a power,

(1) [Original MS —

“ Eternal Agency!

Ye spirits of the immortal Universe!” — E.]

(2) [MS. — “ Of inaccessible mountains are the haunts ” — E.]

Deeper than all yet urged, a tyrant-spell,
Which had its birthplace in a star condemn'd,
The burning wreck of a demolish'd world,
A wondering hell in the eternal space,
By the strong curse which is upon my soul,
The thought which is within me and around me,
I do compel thee to thy will — Appeal!

[A star is seen at the darker end of the gallery it is stationary, and a voice is heard singing.

FIRST SPIRIT.

Mortal! to thy bidding bow'd,
From thy mansion in the cloud,
Which the breath of twilight builds,
And the summer's sunset gilds
With the azure and vermilion,
Which is mix'd for my pavilion, (1)
Though thy quest may be forbidden,
On a star-beam I have ridden,
To thine adoration bow'd,
Mortal—be thy wish avow'd!

Voice of the SECOND SPIRIT

Mont Blanc is the monarch of mountains,
They crown'd him long ago
On a throne of rocks, in a robe of clouds,
With a diadem of snow
Around his waist are forests braced,
The Avalanche in his hand;
But ere it fall, that thundering ball
Must pause for my command

(1) [MS — “Which is fit for my pavilion” — E.]

The Glacier's cold and restless mass
 Moves onward day by day ,
 But I am he who bids it pass,
 Or with its ice delay (1)
 I am the spirit of the place,
 Could make the mountain bow
 And quiver to his cavern'd base —
 And what with me wouldst Thou ?

Voice of the THIRD SPIRIT.

In the blue depth of the waters,
 Where the wave hath no strife,
 Where the wind is a stranger,
 And the sea-snake hath life,
 Where the Mermaid is decking
 Her green hair with shells ,
 Like the storm on the surface
 Came the sound of thy spells,
 O'er my calm Hall of Coral
 The deep echo roll'd —
 To the Spirit of Ocean
 Thy wishes unfold !

FOURTH SPIRIT

Where the slumbering earthquake
 Lies pillow'd on fire,
 And the lakes of bitumen
 Rise boilingly higher ,
 Where the roots of the Andes
 Strike deep in the earth,

(1) [MS — “ Or makes its ice delay ” — E]

At then summits to heaven
Shoot soaringly forth,
I have quitted my birthplace,
Thy bidding to bide —
Thy spell hath subdued me,
Thy will be my guide !

FIFTH SPIRIT.

I am the Rider of the wind,
The Surer of the storm,
The hurricane I left behind
Is yet with lightning warm,
To speed to thee, o'er shore and sea
I swept upon the blast
The fleet I met sail'd well, and yet
'Twill sink ere night be past

SIXTH SPIRIT

My dwelling is the shadow of the night,
Why doth thy magic torture me with light ?

SEVENTH SPIRIT

The air which rules thy destiny
Was ruled, ere earth began, by me
It was a world as flesh and fan
As e'er revolved round sun in air,
Its course was free and regular,
Space bosom'd not a lovelier star
The hour arrived—and it became
A wandering mass of shapeless flame,
A pathless comet, and a cuse,
The menace of the universe,

Still rolling on with innate force,
 Without a sphere, without a course,
 A bright deformity on high,
 The monster of the upper sky !
 And thou ! beneath its influence born—
 Thou worm ! whom I obey and scorn—
 Forced by a power (which is not mine,
 And lent thee but to make thee mine)
 For this brief moment to descend—
 Where these weak spirits round thee bend
 And parley with a thing like thee—
 What wouldst thou, Child of Clay ! with me ?

The SEVEN SPIRITS

Earth, ocean, air, night, mountains, winds, thy star,
 Are at thy beck and bidding, Child of Clay !
 Before thee at thy quest their spirits are—
 What wouldst thou with us, son of mortals—say ?

Man Forgetfulness

First Spirit Of what—of whom—and why ?

Man Of that which is within me, read it there—
 Ye know it, and I cannot utter it [cess

Spirit We can but give thee that which we possess
 Ask of us subjects, sovereignty, the power
 O'er earth, the whole, or portion, or a sign
 Which shall control the elements, whereof
 We are the dominators, each and all,
 These shall be thine

Man Oblivion, self-oblivion—
 Can ye not wring from out the hidden realms
 Ye offer so profusely what I ask ?

Spirit It is not in our essence, in our skill;
But—thou mayst die.

Man Will death bestow it on me?

Spirit We are immortal, and do not forget,
We are eternal, and us the past
Is, as the future, present Art thou answer'd?

Man Ye mock me—but the power which brought ye here

Hath made you mine Slaves, scoff not at my will!
The mind, the spirit, the Promethean spark,
The lightning of my being, is as bright,
Pervading, and far darting as your own,
And shall not yield to yours, though coop'd in clay!
Answer, or I will teach you what I am

Spirit We answer as we answer'd, our reply
Is even in thine own words.

Man Why say ye so?

Spirit If, as thou say'st, thine essence be as ours,
We have replied in telling thee, the thing
Mortals call death hath nought to do with us.

Man. I then have call'd ye from your realms in vain,

Ye cannot, or ye will not, aid me

Spirit Say,

What we possess we offer, it is thine
Bethink thee thou dismiss us, ask again—
Kingdom, and sway, and strength, and length of days

Man Accursed! what have I to do with days?
They are too long already—Hence—begone!

Spirit Yet pause being here, our will would do thee service,

Bethink thee, is there then no other gift
Which we can make not worthless in thine, yes?

Man No, none yet stay—one moment, ere we part—

I would behold ye face to face I hear
Your voices, sweet and melancholy sounds,
As music on the waters, and I see
The steady aspect of a clear large star,
But nothing more Approach me as ye are,
O! one, or all, in your accustom'd forms

Spirit We have no forms, beyond the elements
Of which we are the mind and principle
But choose a form—in that we will appear

Man I have no choice, there is no form on earth
Hideous or beautiful to me Let him,
Who is most powerful of ye, take such aspect
As unto him may seem most fitting—Come!

Seventh Spirit (Appearing in the shape of a beautiful female figure) Behold!

Man Oh God! if it be thus, and thou Art not a madness and a mockery,
I yet might be most happy I will clasp thee,
And we again will be [The figure vanishes.
My heart is crush'd!
[MANFRED falls senseless.

(A Voice is heard in the Incantation which follows) (1)

When the moon is on the wave,
And the glow-worm in the grass,

(1) [These verses were written in Switzerland, in 1816, and transmitted to England for publication, with the third canto of Childe Harold. "As they were written," says Mr Moore, "immediately after the last fruitless

And the meteor on the grave,
And the wisp on the morass, <sup>(1)</sup>
When the falling stars are shooting,
And the answer'd owls are hooting,
And the silent leaves are still In the shadow of the hill,
Shall my soul be upon thine,
With a power and with a sign.

Though thy slumber may be deep,
Yet thy spirit shall not sleep,
There are shades which will not vanish,
There are thoughts thou canst not banish,
By a power to thee unknown,
Thou canst never be alone,
Thou art wrapt as with a shroud,
Thou art gather'd in a cloud,
And for ever shalt thou dwell
In the spirit of this spell

---

attempt at reconciliation, it is needless to say who was in the poet's thoughts while he penned some of the opening stanzas "— E ]

(1) [“ And the wisp on the morass ” — Hearing, in February, 1818, of a menaced version of Manfred by some Italian, Lord Byron wrote to his friend Mr Hoppner — “ If you have any means or communicating with the man, would you permit me to convey to him the offer of any price he may obtain, or think to obtain, for his project, provided he will throw his translation into the fire, and promise not to undertake any other of that, or any other of my things ? I will send him his money immediately, on this condition ” A negotiation was accordingly set on foot, and the translator, on receiving two hundred francs, delivered up his manuscript, and engaged never to translate any other of the poet's works Of his qualification for the task some notion may be formed from the fact, that he had turned the word “ wisp,” in this line, into “ a bundle of straw ” — E.]

Though thou seest me not pass by,
Thou shalt feel me with thine eye
As a thing that, though unseen,
Must be near thee, and hath been
And when in that secret dread
Thou hast turn'd around thy head,
Thou shalt marvel I am not
As thy shadow on the spot,
And the power which thou dost feel
Shall be what thou must conceal

And a magic voice and verse
Hath baptized thee with a curse ,
And a spirit of the air
Hath begirt thee with a snare ,
In the wind there is a voice
Shall forbid thee to rejoice ,
And to thee shall Night deny
All the quiet of her sky ,
And the day shall have a sun,
Which shall make thee wish it done.

From thy false tears I did distil
An essence which hath strength to kill ,
From thy own heart I then did wring
The black blood in its blackest spring,
From thy own smile I snatch'd the snake,
For there it coil'd as in a brake ,
From thy own lip I drew the charm
Which gave all these their chiefest harm ,
In proving every poison known,
I found the strongest was thine own

By thy cold breast and serpent smile,
By thy unfathom'd gulfs of guile,
By that most seeming virtuous eye,
By thy shut soul's hypocrisy,
By the perfection of thine art
Which pass'd for human thine own heart,
By thy delight in others' pain,
And by thy brotherhood of Cain,
I call upon thee! and compel<sup>(1)</sup>
Thyself to be thy proper Hell!

And on thy head I pour the vial
Which doth devote thee to this trial;
Not to slumber, not to die,
Shall be in thy destiny,
Though thy death shall still seem near
To thy wish, but as a fear,
Lo! the spell now works around thee,
And the clankless chain hath bound thee,
O'er thy heart and brain together
Hath the word been pass'd—now wither!

SCENE II

The Mountain of the Jungfrau.—Time, Morning.—
MANFRED alone upon the Cliffs

Man The spirits I have raised abandon me—
The spells which I have studied baffle me—
The remedy I reck'd of tortured me,
I lean no more on super-human aid,
It hath no power upon the past, and for

(1) [MS. — "I do adjure thee to this spell." — E.]

The future, till the past be gulf'd in darkness,
It is not of my search — My mother Earth !
And thou fresh breaking Day, and you, ye Mountams,
Why are ye beautiful ? I cannot love ye
And thou, the bright eye of the universe,
That openest over all, and unto all
Art a delight — thou shin'st not on my heart.
And you, ye crags, upon whose extreme edge
I stand, and on the torrent's brink beneath
Behold the tall pines dwindled as to shrubs
In dizziness of distance, when a leap,
A stir, a motion, even a breath, would bring
My breast upon its rocky bosom's bed
To rest for ever — wherefore do I pause ?
I feel the impulse — yet I do not plunge,
I see the peril — yet do not recede,
And my brain reels — and yet my foot is firm :
There is a power upon me which withholds,
And makes it my fatality to live,
If it be life to wear within myself
This barrenness of spirit, and to be
My own soul's sepulchre, for I have ceased
To justify my deeds unto myself —
The last infirmity of evil    Ay,
Thou winged and cloud-cleaving minister,

[An eagle passes

Whose happy flight is highest into heaven,
Well may'st thou swoop so near me — I should be Thy prey, and gorge thine eaglets, thou art gone
Where the eye cannot follow thee, but thine
Yet pierces downward, onward, or above,
With a pervading vision. — Beautiful !

How beautiful is all this visible world !
 How glorious in its action and itself !
 But we, who name ourselves its sovereigns, we,
 Half dust, half deity, alike unfit
 To sink or soar, with our mix'd essence make
 A conflict of its elements, and breathe
 The breath of degradation and of pride,
 Contending with low wants and lofty will,
 Till our mortality predominates,
 And men — what they name not to themselves,
 And trust not to each other Haik ! the note, "
     [The Shepherd's pipe in the distance is heard]
 The natural music of the mountain reed —
 For here the patriarchal days are not
 A pastoral fable — pipes in the liberal air,
 Mix'd with the sweet bells of the sauntering herd, (1)
 My soul would drink those echoes — Oh, that I were
 The viewless spirit of a lovely sound,

(1) [The germs of this, and of several other passages in Manfred, may be found in the Journal of his Swiss tour, which Lord Byron transmitted to his sister e.g. "Sept 19 — Arrived at a lake in the very bosom of the mountains, left our quadrupeds and ascended further, came to some snow in patches, upon which my forehead's perspiration fell like rain, making the same dents as in a sieve, the chill of the wind and the snow turned me giddy, but I scrambled on and upwards. Hohhouse went to the highest pinnacle. The whole of the mountains superb. A shepherd on a steep and very high cliff playing upon his pipe, very different from Arcadia. The music of the cows bells (for their wealth, like the patriarchs, is cattle) in the pastures, which reach to a height far above any mountains in Britain, and the shepherds shouting to us from crag to crag, and playing on their reeds where the steeps appeared almost inaccessible, with the surrounding scenery, realised all that I have ever heard or imagined of a pastoral existence — much more so than Greece or Asia Minor, for there we are a little too much of the sabre and musket order, and if there is a crook in one hand, you are sure to see a gun in the other — but this was pure and unmixed — solitary, savage, and patriarchal. As we went, they played the 'Ranz des Vaches' and other airs, by way of farewell. I have lately re-peopled my mind with nature" — E.]

A living voice, a breathing harmony,
 A bodiless enjoyment—born and dying
 With the blest tone which made me !

Enter from below a CHAMOIS HUNTER

Chamois Hunter

Even so

This way the chamois leapt her nimble feet
 Have baffled me, my gains to-day will scarce
 Repay my break-neck travail — What is here ?
 Who seems not of my trade, and yet hath reach'd
 A height which none even of our mountaineers,
 Save our best hunters, may attain his garb
 Is goodly, his mien manly, and his air
 Proud as a free-born peasant's, at this distance —
 I will approach him nearer

Man (not perceiving the other) To be thus — Grey-hair'd with anguish, <sup>(1)</sup> like these blasted pines, Wrecks of a single winter, barkless, branchless, <sup>(2)</sup>
 A blighted trunk upon a cursed root,
 Which but supplies a feeling to decay —
 And to be thus, eternally but thus,
 Having been otherwise ! Now furrow'd o'er

(1) [See the opening lines to the "Prisoner of Chillon," ante, Vol. X p 227 Speaking of Marie Antoinette, "I was struck," says Madame Campan, "with the astonishing change misfortune had wrought upon her features her whole head of hair had turned almost white, during her transit from Varennes to Paris" The same thing occurred to the unfortunate Queen Mary "With calm but undaunted fortitude," says her historian, "she laid her neck upon the block, and while one executioner held her hands, the other, at the second stroke, cut off her head, which, falling out of its attire, discovered her hair, already grown quite grey with cares and sorrows" The hair of Mary's grandson, Charles I, turned quite grey, in like manner, during his stay at Carisbrooke — E.]

(2) ["Passed whole woods of withered pines, all withered,—trunks stripped and barkless, branches lifeless, done by a single winter their appearance reminded me of me and my family" — Swiss Journal ]

With' wrinkles, plough'd by moments, not by years
 And hours—all tortured into ages—hours
 Which I outlive!—Ye toppling crags of ice!
 Ye avalanches, whom a breath draws down
 In mountainous o'erwhelming, come and crush me!
 I hear ye momentarily above, beneath,
 Crash with a frequent conflict, <sup>(1)</sup> but ye pass,
 And only fall on things that still would live,
 On the young flourishing forest, or the hut
 And hamlets of the harmless villager.

C Hun. Themists begin to rise from up the valley,
 I'll warn him to descend, or he may chance
 To lose at once his way and life together

Man Themists boil up around the glaciers, clouds
 Rise curling fast beneath me, white and sulphury,
 Like foam from the roused ocean of deep Hell, <sup>(2)</sup>
 Whose every wave breaks on a living shore,
 Heap'd with the damn'd like pebbles—I am giddy <sup>(3)</sup>

C Hun I must approach him cautiously, if near,
 A sudden step will startle him, and he Seems tottering already

(1) [“Ascended the Wengen mountain, left the horses, took off my coat, and went to the summit. On one side, our view comprised the Jungfrau, with all her glaciers, then the Dent d'Argent, shining like truth, then the Little Giant, and the Great Giant, and last, not least, the Wetterhorn. The height of the Jungfrau is thirteen thousand feet above the sea, and eleven thousand above the valley. Heard the avalanches falling every five minutes nearly.”—Swiss Journal]

(2) [MS.—“Like foam from the roused ocean of old Hell.”—E]

(3) [“The clouds rose from the opposite valley, curling up perpendicular precipices, like the foam of the ocean of hell during a spring tide—it was white and sulphury, and immeasurably deep in appearance. The side we ascended was not of so precipitous a nature, but, on arriving at the summit, we looked down upon the other side upon a boiling sea of cloud, dashing against the crags on which we stood—these crags on one side quite perpendicular. In passing the masses of snow, I made a snowball and pelted Hobhouse with it.”—Swiss Journal]

Man. Mountains have fallen,
 Leaving a gap in the clouds, and with the shock
 Rocking their Alpine biethren, filling up
 The ripe green valleys with destruction's splinters,
 Damming the rivers with a sudden dash,
 Which crush'd the waters into mist, and made
 Their fountains find another channel—thus,
 Thus, in its old age, did Mount Rosenberg—
 Why stood I not beneath it?

C. Hun. Friend! have a care,
 Your next step may be fatal!—for the love
 Of him who made you, stand not on that brink!

Man (not hearing him) Such would have been for me a fitting tomb,
 My bones had then been quiet in their depth,
 They had not then been strewn upon the rocks
 For the wind's pastime—as thus—thus they shall be—

In this one plunge—Farewell, ye opening heavens!
 Look not upon me thus reproachfully—

Ye were not meant for me—Earth! take these atoms!

[As MANFRED is in act to spring from the cliff, the CHAMOIS HUNTER seizes and retains him with a sudden grasp

C. Hun Hold, madman!—though aweary of thy life,

Stain not our pure vales with thy guilty blood—
 Away with me I will not quit my hold

Man. I am most sick at heart—nay, grasp me not—

I am all feebleness—the mountains whirl [thou?
 Spinning around e I grow blind What at t

C Hun I'll answer that anon — Away with me [me—
The clouds grow thicker there—now lean on Place your foot here—here, take this staff, and cling
A moment to that shrub—now give me your hand,
And hold fast by my girdle—softly—well—
The Chalet will be gain'd within an hour—
Come on, we'll quickly find a surer footing,
And something like a pathway, which the torrent
Hath wash'd since winter — Come, 'tis bravely done—
You should have been a hunter — Follow me
[ As they descend the rocks with difficulty, the scene closes

---

ACT II

SCENE I

A Cottage amongst the Bernese Alps

MANFRED and the CHAMOIS HUNTER

C Hun No, no—yet pause—thou must not yet go forth
Thy mind and body are alike unfit
To trust each other, for some hours, at least,
When thou art better, I will be thy guide—
But whither?

Man , It imports not I do know
My route full well, and need no further guidance.

C Hun Thy garb and gait bespeak thee of high lineage—

One of the many chiefs, whose castled ciags
Look o'er the lower valleys—which of these May call thee lord? I only know theñ portals,
My way of life leads me but rarely down
To bask by the huge hearths of those old halls,
Carousing with the vassals, but the paths,
Which step from out our mountains to theñ doors,
I know from childhood—which of these is thine?

Man No matter

C Hun. Well, su, pardon me the question,
And be of better cheer Come, taste my wine,
'Tis of an ancient vintage, many a day
'T has thawed my veins among our glaciers, now
Let it do thus for thine—Come, pledge me fairly.

Man Away, away! there's blood upon the brim!
Will it then never—never sink in the earth?

C Hun What dost thou mean? thy senses wander from thee

Man I say 'tis blood—my blood! the pure warm stream

Which ran in the veins of my fathers, and in ours
When we were in our youth, and had one heart,
And loved each other as we should not love,
And this was shed but still it rises up,
Colouring the clouds, that shut me out from heaven,
Where thou art not—and I shall never be

C Hun Man of strange words, and some half-maddening sin,
Which makes thee people vacancy, whate'er
Thy dread and sufferance be, there's comfort yet—
The aid of holy men, and heavenly patience

Man Patience and patience ! Hence—that word was made

For brutes of burthen, not for birds of prey,
Preach it to mortals of a dust like thine,—
I am not of thine order

C Hun Thanks to heaven !

I would not be of thine for the free fame
Of William Tell, but whatsoe'er thine ill,
It must be borne, and these wild starts are useless.

Man Do I not bear it ?—Look on me—I live

C Hun. This is convulsion, and no healthful life.

Man I tell thee, man ! I have lived many years,
Many long years, but they are nothing now
To those which I must number ages—ages—
Space and eternity—and consciousness,
With the fierce thirst of death—and still unslaked !

C Hun Why, on thy brow the seal of middle age Hath scarce been set, I am thine elder far.

Man Think'st thou existence doth depend on time ?

It doth, but actions are our epochs mine
Have made my days and nights imperishable,
Endless, and all alike, as sands on the shore,
Innumerable atoms, and one desert,
Barren and cold, on which the wild waves break,
But nothing rests, save carcasses and wrecks,
Rocks, and the salt-surf weeds of bitterness

C Hun Alas ! he's mad—but yet I must not leave him

Man I would I were—for then the things I see
Would be but a distemper'd dream.

C. Hun What is it
That thou dost see, or think thou look'st upon?

Man Myself, and thee—a peasant of the Alps—
Thy humble virtues, hospitable home,
And spirit patient, pious, proud, and free,
Thy self-respect, grafted on innocent thoughts,
Thy days of health, and nights of sleep, thy toils,
By danger dignified, yet guiltless, hopes
Of cheerful old age and a quiet grave,
With cross and garland over its green turf,
And thy grandchildren's love for epitaph,
This do I see—and then I look within—
It matters not—my soul was scorched already!

C. Hun. And would'st thou then exchange thy lot for mine?

Man No, friend! I would not wrong thee, nor exchange
My lot with living being I can bear—
However wretchedly, 'tis still to bear—
In life what others could not brook to dream,
But perish in their slumber.

C. Hun And with this—
This cautious feeling for another's pain,
Canst thou be black with evil?—say not so
Can one of gentle thoughts have wreak'd revenge
Upon his enemies?

Man. Oh! no, no, no!
My injuries came down on those who loved me—
On those whom I best loved I never quell'd
An enemy, save in my just defence—
But my embrace was fatal

C. Hun Heaven give thee rest!

And penitence restore thee to thyself,
My prayers shall be for thee.

Man

I need them not,

But can endure thy pity I depart—

Tis time—farewell!—Here's gold, and thanks for thee—

No words—it is thy due.—Follow me not—

I know my path—the mountain peril's past

And once again, I charge thee, follow not!

[Exit MANFRED.]

SCENE II

A lower Valley in the Alps — A Cataract (1)

Enter MANFRED.

It is not noon—the sunbow's rays (2) still arch

The torrent with the many hues of heaven,

And roll the sheeted silver's waving column

O'er the crag's headlong perpendicular,

And fling its lines of foaming light along,

And to and fro, like the pale courser's tail,

The Giant steed, to be bestrode by Death,

(1) [This scene is one of the most poetical and most sweetly written in the poem. There is a still and delicious witchery in the tranquillity and seclusion of the place, and the celestial beauty of the being who reveals herself in the midst of these visible enchantments — JEFFREY.]

(2) This iris is formed by the rays of the sun over the lower part of the Alpine torrents. It is exactly like a rainbow come down to pay a visit, and so close that you may walk into it. This effect lasts till noon — [“Before ascending the mountain, went to the torrent, the sun upon it, forming a rainbow of the lower part of all colours, but principally purple and gold, the bow moving as you move. I never saw anything like this, it is only in the sunshine” — Swiss Journal.]

As told in the Apocalypse.<sup>(1)</sup> No eyes
 But mine now drink this sight of loveliness,
 I should be sole in this sweet solitude,
 And with the Spirit of the place divide
 The homage of these wate — I will call her

[MANFRED takes some of the water into the palm of his hand, and flings it into the air, muttering the adjuration After a pause, the WITCH OF THE ALPS rises beneath the arch of the sun-bow of the torrent

Beautiful Spirit! with thy hair of light,
 And dazzling eyes of glory, in whose form
 The charms of earth's least mortal daughters grow
 To an unearthly stature, in an essence
 Of purer elements; while the hues of youth,—
 Carnation'd like a sleeping infant's cheek,
 Rock'd by the beating of her mother's heart,
 On the rose tints, which summer's twilight leaves
 Upon the lofty glacier's virgin snow,
 The blush of earth embracing with her heaven,— Tinge thy celestial aspect, and make tame
 The beauties of the sunbow which bends o'er thee.<sup>(2)</sup>

(1) [“ Arrived at the foot of the Jungfrau, glaciers, torrents one of these torrents nine hundred feet in height of visible descent, heard an avalanche fall, like thunder, glaciers enormous, storm came on—thunder, lightning, hail, all in perfection, and beautiful The torrent is in shape curving over the rock, like the tail of a white horse streaming in the wind, such as it might be conceived would be that of the ‘pale horse’ on which Death is mounted in the Apocalypse It is neither mist nor water, but a something between both, its immense height gives it a wave or curve, a spreading here or condensation there, wonderful and indescribable.”—Swiss Journal ]

(2) [In all Lord Byron's heroes we recognise, though with infinite modifications, the same great characteristics—a high and audacious conception of the power of the mind,—an intense sensibility of passion,—

Beautiful Spirit! in thy calm clear brow,
Wherein is glass'd serenity of soul,
Which of itself shows immortality,
I read that thou wilt pardon to a Son
Of Earth, whom the abstruser powers permit
At times to commune with them—if that he Avail him of his spells—to call thee thus,
And gaze on thee a moment

Witch

Son of Earth!

I know thee, and the powers which give thee power,
I know thee for a man of many thoughts,
And deeds of good and ill, extreme in both,
Fatal and fated in thy sufferings
I have expected this—what would'st thou with me?

---

an almost boundless capacity of tumultuous emotion,—a haunting admiration of the grandeur of disordered power,—and, above all, a soul-felt, blood-felt delight in beauty. Parisina is full of it to overflowing, it breathes from every page of the "Prisoner of Chillon," but it is in "Manfred" that it riots and revels among the streams, and waterfalls, and groves, and mountains, and heavens. There is in the character of Manfred more of the self-might of Byron than in all his previous productions. He has therein brought, with wonderful power, metaphysical conceptions into forms,—and we know of no poem in which the aspect of external nature is throughout lighted up with an expression at once so beautiful, solemn, and majestic. It is the poem, next to "Childe Harold," which we should give to a foreigner to read, that he might know something of Byron. Shakspeare has given to those abstractions of human life and being, which are truth in the intellect, forms as full, clear, glowing, as the idealised forms of visible nature. The very words of Ariel picture to us his beautiful being. In "Manfred" we see glorious but immature manifestations of similar power. The poet there creates, with delight, thoughts and feelings and fancies into visible forms, that he may cling and cleave to them, and clasp them in his passion. The beautiful Witch of the Alps seems exhaled from the luminous spray of the cataract,—as if the poet's eyes, unsated with the beauty of inanimate nature, gave spectral apparitions of loveliness to feed the pure passion of the poet's soul.—PROFESSOR WILSON.]

Man To look upon thy beauty—nothing further <sup>(1)</sup>
The face of the earth hath madden'd me, and I
Take refuge in her mysteries, and pierce
To the abodes of those who govern her—
But they can nothing aid me I have sought
From them what they could not bestow. and now
I search no further

Witch What could be the quest
Which is not in the power of the most powerful,
The rulers of the invisible?

Man A boon,
But why should I repeat it? 'twere in vain

Witch I know not that, let thy lips utter it

Man. Well, though it torture me, 'tis but the same,
My pang shall find a voice. From my youth upwards
My spirit walk'd not with the souls of men,
Nor look'd upon the earth with human eyes,
The thirst of their ambition was not mine,
The aim of their existence was not mine,
My joys, my griefs, my passions, and my powers,
Made me a stranger, though I wore the form,
I had no sympathy with breathing flesh,
Nor midst the creatures of clay that girded me
Was there but one who but of her anon
I said with men, and with the thoughts of men,
I held but slight communion, but instead,
My joy was in the Wilderness, to breathe

(1) [There is something exquisitely beautiful in all this passage, and both the apparition and the dialogue are so managed, that the sense of their improbability is swallowed up in that of their beauty, and, without actually believing that such spirits exist or communicate themselves, we feel for the moment as if we stood in their presence — JEFFREY ]

The difficult air of the iced mountain's top,
Where the birds dare not build, nor insect's wing
Flit o'er the heibless granite, or to plunge
Into the torrent, and to roll along
On the swift whirl of the new breaking wave
Of river-stream, or ocean, in then flow
In these my early strength exulted, or
To follow through the night the moving moon,
The stars and their development, or catch
The dazzling lightnings till my eyes grew dim,
Or to look, list'ning, on the scatter'd leaves,
While Autumn winds were at their evening song
These were my pastimes, and to be alone,
For if the beings, of whom I was one,— Hating to be so,—cross'd me in my path,
I felt myself degraded back to them,
And was all clay again And then I dived,
In my lone wanderings, to the caves of death,
Searching its cause in its effect, and drew
From wither'd bones, and skulls, and heap'd up dust,
Conclusions most forbidden Then I pass'd
The nights of years in sciences untaught,
Save in the old time, and with time and toil,
And terrible ordeal, and such penance
As in itself hath power upon the an,
And spirits that do compass an and earth,
Space, and the peopled infinite, I made
Mine eyes familiar with Eternity,
Such as, before me, did the Magi, and
He who from out their fountain dwellings raised
Eros and Anteros, (1) at Gadaia,

(1) The philosopher Jamblicus The story of the raising of Eros and

As I do thee,—and with my knowledge grew
The thirst of knowledge, and the power and joy
Of this most bright intelligence, until

Witch Proceed

Man Oh! I but ~~this~~ prolong'd my words, Boasting these idle attributes, because
As I approach the core of my heart's grief—
But to my task I have not named to thee
Father or mother, mistress, friend, or being,
With whom I wore the chain of human ties,
If I had such, they seem'd not such to me—
Yet there was one

Witch Spare not thyself—proceed

Man She was like me in lineaments—her eyes,
Her han, her features, all, to the very tone
Even of her voice, they said were like to mine,
But soften'd all, and temper'd into beauty,
She had the same lone thoughts and wanderings,
The quest of hidden knowledge, and a mind
To comprehend the universe nor these

Anteros may be found in his life by Eunapius. It is well told. —[“It is reported of him,” says Eunapius, “that while he and his scholars were bathing in the hot baths of Gadara in Syria, a dispute arising concerning the baths, he, smiling, ordered his disciples to ask the inhabitants by what names the two lesser springs, that were nearer and handsomer than the rest, were called. To which the inhabitants replied, that ‘the one was called Eros, and the other Anteros, but for what reason they knew not’ Upon which Jamblicus, sitting by one of the springs, put his hand in the water, and muttering some few words to himself, called up a fair complexioned boy, with gold coloured locks dangling from his back and breast, so that he looked like one that was washing and then, going to the other spring, and doing as he had done before, called up another Cupid, with darker and more dishevelled hair upon which both the Cupids clung about Jamblicus, but he presently sent them back to their proper places. After this, his friends submitted their belief to him in every thing.—E.]

Alone, but with them gentler powers than mine,
Pity, and smiles, and tears—which I had not,
And tenderness—but that I had for her,
Humility—and that I never had Her faults were mine—her virtues were her own—
I loved her, and destroy'd her!

Witch With thy hand?

Man Not with my hand, but heart—which broke her heart—

It gazed on mine, and wither'd I have shed
Blood, but not hers—and yet her blood was shed—
I saw—and could not stanch it

Witch And for this—

A being of the race thou dost despise,
The order which thine own would rise above,
Mingling with us and ours, thou dost forego
The gifts of our great knowledge, and shrink'st back
To recreant mortality——Away!

Man Daughter of An! I tell thee, since that hour—
But words are breath—look on me in my sleep,
Or watch my watchings—Come and sit by me!
My solitude is solitude no more,
But peopled with the Furies,—I have gnash'd
My teeth in darkness till returning morn,
Then cursed myself till sunset,—I have pray'd
For madness as a blessing—'tis denied me
I have affronted death—but in the war
Of elements the waters shrunk from me,
And fatal things pass'd harmless—the cold hand
Of an all-pitiless demon held me back,
Back by a single han, which would not break
In fantasy, imagination, all

The affluence of my soul—which one day was A Cræsus in creation—I plunged deep,
 But, like an ebbing wave, it dash'd me back
 Into the gulf of my unfathom'd thought
 I plunged amidst mankind—Forgetfulness
 I sought in all, save where 'tis to be found,
 And that I have to learn—my sciences;
 My long pursued and super-human art,
 Is mortal here—I dwell in my despair
 And live—and live for ever

Witch

It may be

That I can aid thee

Man.

To do this thy power

Must wake the dead, or lay me low with them
 Do so—in any shape—in any hour—
 With any torture—so it be the last.

Witch That is not in my province, but if thou Wilt swear obedience to my will, and do
 My bidding, it may help thee to thy wishes

Man. I will not swear—Obey! and whom? the spirits

Whose presence I command, and be the slave
 Of those who served me—Never!

Witch

Is this all?

Hast thou no gentler answer?—Yet bethink thee,
 And pause ere thou rejectest

Man

I have said it

Witch Enough!—I may retire then—say

Man

Retire

[The Witch disappears]

Man. (alone) We are the fools of time and terror
 Days

Steal on us and steal from us, yet we live,
Loathing our life, and dreading still to die
In all the days of this detested yoke—
This vital weight upon the struggling heart,
Which sinks with sorrow, or beats quick with pain,
Or joy that ends in agony or faintness—
In all the days of past and future, for
In life there is no present, we can number
How few—how less than few—wherein the soul
Forbears to pant for death, and yet draws back
As from a stream in winter, though the chill
Be but a moment's—I have one resource
Still in my science—I can call the dead,
And ask them what it is we dread to be
The sternest answer can but be the Grave.
And that is nothing—if they answer not—
The buried Prophet answered to the Hag
Of Endor <sup>(1)</sup>, and the Spartan Monarch drew
From the Byzantine maid's unsleeping spirit
An answer and his destiny—he slew
That which he loved, unknowing what he slew,
And died unpardon'd—though he call'd in aid
The Phrygian Jove, and in Phigalia roused
The Arcadian Evocatois to compel
The indignant shadow to depose her wrath,
Or fix her term of vengeance—she replied
In words of dubious import, but fulfill'd <sup>(2)</sup>

(1) [See ante, Vol. X. p. 87 n — E.]

(2) The story of Pausanias, king of Sparta (who commanded the Greeks at the battle of Plataea, and afterwards perished for an attempt to betray the Lacedæmonians), and Cleonice, is told in Plutarch's life of Cimon, and in the Lacœvics of Pausanias the sophist, in his description of Greece — [The following is the passage from Plutarch — “It is related, that when Pau-

If I had never lived, that which I love
 Had still been living, had I never loved,
 That which I love would still be beautiful — Happy and giving happiness. What is she?
 What is she now? — a sufferer for my sins —
 A thing I dare not think upon — or nothing.
 Within few hours I shall not call in vain —
 Yet in this hour I dread the thing I dare
 Until this hour I never shrink to gaze
 On spirit, good or evil — now I tremble,
 And feel a strange cold thaw upon my heart
 But I can act even what I most abhor,
 And champion human fears — The night approaches.
[Exit.]

sanias was at Byzantium, he cast his eyes upon a young virgin named Cleonice, of a noble family there, and insisted on having her for a mistress. The parents, intimidated by his power, were under the hard necessity of giving up their daughter. The young woman begged that the light might be taken out of his apartments, that she might go to his bed in secrecy and silence. When she entered he was asleep, and she unfortunately stumbled upon the candlestick, and threw it down. The noise waked him suddenly, and he, in his confusion, thinking it was an enemy coming to assassinate him, unsheathed a dagger that lay by him, and plunged it into the virgin's heart. After this he could never rest. Her image appeared to him every night, and with a menacing tone repeated this heroic verse, —

‘Go to the fate which pride and lust prepare!’

The allies, highly incensed at this infamous action, joined Cimon to besiege him in Byzantium. But he found means to escape thence, and, as he was still haunted by the spectre, he is said to have applied to a temple at Heraclea, where the manes of the dead were consulted. There he invoked the spirit of Cleonice, and entreated her pardon. She appeared, and told him ‘he would soon be delivered from all his troubles, after his return to Sparta. In which, it seems, his death was enigmatically foretold. These particulars we have from many historians’ — LANGHORN’S Plutarch, vol. iii. p. 279. “Thus we find,” adds the translator, “that it was a custom in the Pagan as well as in the Hebrew theology, to conjure up the spirits of the dead, and that the witch of Endor was not the only witch in the world.” — E]

SCENE III

The Summit of the Jungfrau MountainEnter FIRST DESTINY

The moon is rising broad, and round, and bright,
And here on snows, where never human foot
Of common mortal trod, we nightly tread,
And leave no traces, o'er the savage sea,
The glassy ocean of the mountain ice,
We skim its rugged breakers, which put on
The aspect of a tumbling tempest's foam,
Frozen in a moment<sup>(1)</sup>—a dead whirlpool's image
And this most steep fantastic pinnacle,
The network of some earthquake—where the clouds
Pause to repose themselves in passing by—
Is sacred to our revels, or our vigils,
Here do I wait my sisters, on our way
To the Hall of Almanes, for to-night
Is our great festival—'tis strange they come not

A Voice without, singing

The Captive Usurper,
Hurl'd down from the throne,
Lay buried in torpor,
Forgotten and lone,

(1) [“ Came to a morass, Hobhouse dismounted to get over well, I tried to pass my horse over, the horse sunk up to the chin, and of course he and I were in the mud together, bemired, but not hurt, laughed and rode on. Arrived at the Gündendwald, mounted again, and rode to the higher glacier—like a frozen hurricane ”—Swiss Journal —E]

I broke through his slumbers,
I shiver'd his cham,
I leagu'd him with numbers —
He's Tyrant again !
With the blood of a million he'll answer my care,
With a nation's destruction—his flight and despair.

Second Voice, without

The ship sail'd on, the ship sail'd fast,
But I left not a sail, and I left not a mast,
There is not a plank of the hull or the deck,
And there is not a wretch to lament o'er his wreck,
Save one, whom I held, as he swam, by the hand,
And he was a subject well worthy my care,
A traitor on land, and a pirate at sea —
But I saved him to wreak further havoc for me !

FIRST DESTINY, answering

The city lies sleeping,
The morn, to deplore it,
May dawn on it weeping
Sullenly, slowly,
The black plague flew o'er it —
Thousands lie lowly,
Tens of thousands shall perish —
The living shall fly from
The sick they should cherish,
But nothing can vanquish
The touch that they die from.
Sorrow and anguish,

And evil and dread,
Envelope a nation —
The blest are the dead,
Who see not the sight
Of their own desolation —
This work of a night —
This wreck of a realm — this deed of my doing —
For ages I've done, and shall still be renewing !

Enter the SECOND and THIRD DESTINIES

The Three

Our hands contain the hearts of men,
Our footsteps are then graves,
We only give to take again
The spirits of our slaves !

First Des Welcome ! — Where's Nemesis ?

Second Des At some great work ;
But what I know not, for my hands were full

Third Des Behold she cometh

Enter NEMESIS

First Des Say, where hast thou been ?
My sisters and thyself are slow to-night

Nem I was detain'd repairing shatter'd thrones, Marrying fools, restoring dynasties,
Avenging men upon their enemies,
And making them repent their own revenge,
Goading the wise to madness, from the dull
Shaping out oracles to rule the world
Afresh, for they were waxing out of date,

Enter the DESTINIES and NEMESIS.

First Des Glory to A11manes ! on the earth
His power increaseth—both my sisters did
His bidding, nor did I neglect my duty !

Second Des Glory to A11manes ! we who bow
The necks of men, bow down before his throne !

Third Des Glory to A11manes ! we await His nod !

Nem Sovereign of Sovereigns ! we are thine,
And all that liveth, more or less, is ours,
And most things wholly so, still to increase
Our power, increasing thine, demands our care,
And we are vigilant—Thy late commands
Have been fulfill'd to the utmost

Enter MANFRED

A Spirit What is here ?
A mortal !—Thou most rash and fatal wretch,
Bow down and worship !

Second Spirit I do know the man—
A Magian of great power, and fearful skill !

Third Spirit Bow down and worship, slave !—
What, know'st thou not

Thine and our Sovereign ?—Tremble, and obey !

All the Spirits Prostrate thyself, and thy condemned clay,
Child of the Earth ! or dead the worst

Man I know it,
And yet ye see I kneel not

Fourth Spirit 'Twill be taught thee

Man 'Tis taught already,—many a night on the earth,

Not breath from the worm upwards is exempt,
Have pierced his heart, and in their consequence
Made him a thing, which I, who pity not,
Yet pardon those who pity He is mine,
And thine, it may be—be it so, or not,
No other Spirit in this region hath
A soul like his—or power upon his soul

Nem What doth he here then?

First Des. Let him answer that.

Man Ye know what I have known, and without power

I could not be amongst ye but there are Powers deeper still beyond—I come in quest
Of such, to answer unto what I seek

Nem What would'st thou?

Man. Thou canst not reply to me

Call up the dead—my question is for them

Nem Great Aïmanes, doth thy will avouch
The wishes of this mortal?

Arz Yea.

Nem Whom would'st thou

Unchainel?

Man One without a tomb—call up Astarte

NEMESIS

Shadow! or Spirit!
Whatever thou art,
Which still doth inherit
The whole or a part
Of the form of thy birth,
Of the mould of thy clay,

Which return'd to the earth,
 Re-appear to the day !
 Bear what thou borest,
 The heart and the form,
 And the aspect thou worest
 Redeem from the worm
 Appear ! — Appeal ! — Appear !
 Who sent thee there requires thee here !
 [The Phantom of ASTARTE rises and stands in the midst]

Man Can this be death ? there's bloom upon her cheek ,

But now I see it is no living hue,
 But a strange hectic — like the unnatural red
 Which Autumn plants upon the perish'd leaf
 It is the same ! Oh, God ! that I should dread
 To look upon the same — Astarte ! — No,
 I cannot speak to her — but bid her speak —
 Forgive me or condemn me

NEMESIS

By the power which hath broken
 The grave which enthall'd thee,
 Speak to him who hath spoken,
 Or those who have call'd thee !

Man She is silent,
 And in that silence I am more than answer'd

Nem My power extends no further, Prince of air !
 It rests with thee alone — command her voice

Ari Spirit — obey this sceptre !

Nem

Silent still !

She is not of our order, but belongs
To the other powers Mortal ! thy quest is vain,
And we are baffled also

Man

Hear me, hear me —

Astarte ! my beloved ! speak to me
I have so much endured — so much endure —
Look on me ! the grave hath not changed thee more Than I am changed for thee Thou lovedst me
Too much, as I loved thee we were not made
To torture thus each other, though it were
The deadliest sin to love as we have loved
Say that thou loath'st me not — that I do bear
This punishment for both — that thou wilt be
One of the blessed — and that I shall die,
For hither to all hateful things conspire
To bind me in existence — in a life
Which makes me shrink from immortality —
A future like the past I cannot rest
I know not what I ask, nor what I seek
I feel but what thou art — and what I am,
And I would hear yet once before I perish
The voice which was my music — Speak to me !
For I have call'd on thee in the still night,
Startled the slumbering birds from the hush'd boughs,
And woke the mountain wolves, and made the caves
Acquainted with thy vainly echoed name,
Which answer'd me — many things answer'd me —
Spirits and men — but thou wert silent all
Yet speak to me ! I have outwatch'd the stars,
And gazed o'er heaven in vain in search of thee
Speak to me ! I have wander'd o'er the earth,
And never found thy likeness — Speak to me !

Look on the fiends around — they feel for me
 I fear them not, and feel for thee alone —
 Speak to me ! though it be in wrath, — but say —
 I reck not what — but let me hear thee once —
 This once — once more !

Phantom of Astarte Manfred !

Man Say on, say on —
 I live but in the sound — it is thy voice ! [sings.]

Phan Manfred ! To-morrow ends thine earthly Farewell !

Man Yet one word more — am I forgiven ?

Phan Farewell !

Man Say, shall we meet again ?

Phan Farewell !

Man One word for mercy ! Say, thou lovest me

Phan Manfred !

[The Spirit of ASTARTE disappears (1)]

Nem She's gone, and will not be recall'd,
 Her words will be fulfill'd Return to the earth

(1) [Over this fine drama, a moral feeling hangs like a sombrous thunder cloud. No other guilt but that so darkly shadowed out could have furnished so dreadful an illustration of the hideous aberrations of human nature, however noble and majestic, when left a prey to its desires, its passions, and its imagination. The beauty, at one time so innocently adored, is at last soiled, profaned, and violated. Affection, love, guilt, horror, remorse, and death, come in terrible succession, yet all darkly linked together. We think of Astarte as young, beautiful, innocent — guilty — lost — murdered — buried — judged — pardoned, but still, in her permitted visit to earth, speaking in a voice of sorrow, and with a countenance yet pale with mortal trouble. We had but a glimpse of her in her beauty and innocence, but, at last, she rises up before us in all the mortal silence of a ghost, with fixed, glazed, and passionless eyes, revealing death, judgment, and eternity. The moral breathes and burns in every word, — in sadness, misery, insanity, desolation, and death. The work is 'instinct with spirit,' — and in the agony and distraction, and all its dimly imagined causes, we behold, though broken up, confused, and shattered, the elements of a purer existence. — PROFESSOR WILSON.]

A Spirit He is convulsed — This is to be a mortal
And seek the things beyond mortality

Another Spirit Yet, see, he mastereth himself, and makes

His torture tributary to his will
Had he been one of us, he would have made
An awful spirit

Nem Hast thou further question
Of our great-sovereign, or his worshippers ?

Man None

Nem Then for a time farewell.

Man We meet then ! Where ? On the earth ? —
Even as thou wilt and for the grace accorded
I now depart a debtor Faie ye well !

[Exit MANFRED

(Scene closes)

---

ACT III (1)

SCENE I

A Hall in the Castle of Manfred

MANFRED and HERMAN

Man What is the hour ?

Her. It wants but one till sunset,
And promises a lovely twilight

Man Say,

(1) [The third Act, as originally written, being shown to the late Mr Gifford, he expressed his unfavourable opinion of it very distinctly, and Mr Murray transmitted this to Lord Byron. The result is told in the following extracts from his letters —

Are all things so disposed of in the tower
As I directed ?

Her All, my lord, are ready
Here is the key and casket

Man It is well
Thou may'st retire [Exit HERMAN.]

Man (alone) There is a calm upon me —
Inexplicable stillness ! which till now
Did not belong to what I knew of life,
If that I did not know philosophy
To be of all our vanities the motliest,
The merest word that ever fool'd the ear
From out the schoolman's jargon, I should deem
The golden secret, the sought "Kalon," found,
And seated in my soul It will not last,
But it is well to have known it, though but once

"Venice, April 14 1817 — The third Act is certainly d—d bad, and, like the Archbishop of Grenada's homily (which savoured of the pily), has the dregs of my fever, during which it was written. It must on no account be published in its present state. I will try and reform it, or re-write it altogether, but the impulse is gone, and I have no chance of making any thing out of it. The speech of Manfred to the Sun is the only part of this Act I thought good myself, the rest is certainly as bad as bad can be, and I wonder what the devil possessed me. I am very glad, indeed, that you sent me Mr Gifford's opinion without deduction. Do you suppose me such a booby as not to be very much obliged to him ? or that I was not, and am not, convinced and convicted in my conscience of this same overt act of nonsense ? I shall try at it again, in the mean time, lay it upon the shelf — the whole Drama I mean — Recollect not to publish, upon pain of I know not what, until I have tried again at the third act. I am not sure that I shall try, and still less that I shall succeed if I do."

"Rome, May 5 — I have re-written the greater part, and returned what is not altered in the proof you sent me. The Abbot is become a good man, and the Spirits are brought in at the death. You will find, I think, some good poetry in this new Act, here and there, and if so, print it, without sending me farther proofs, under Mr Gifford's correction, if he will have the goodness to overlook it." — E ]

It hath enlarged my thoughts with a new sense,
And I within my tablets would note down
That there is such a feeling    Who is there ?

Re-enter HERMAN

Her My lord, the abbot of St Maurice craves
To greet your presence

Enter the ABBOT OF ST MAURICE

Abbot                    Peace be with Count Manfred !

Man Thanks, holy father ! welcome to these walls, Thy presence honours them, and blesseth those Who dwell within them

Abbot                    Would it were so, Count ! —
But I would fain confer with thee alone

Man Herman retire — What would my reverend guest ?

Abbot Thus, without prelude — Age and zeal, my office,

And good intent, must plead my privilege,
Our near, though not acquainted neighbourhood,
May also be my herald    Rumours strange,
And of unholy nature, are abroad,
And busy with thy name, a noble name
For centuries    may he who bears it now
Transmit it unimpaired !

Man                                    Proceed,—I listen.

Abbot 'Tis said thou holdest converse with the things,

Which are forbidden to the search of man,
That with the dwellers of the dark abodes,
The many evil and unheavenly spirits

Which walk the valley of the shade of death,
 Thou communest I know that with mankind,
 Thy fellows in creation, thou dost rarely
 Exchange thy thoughts, and that thy solitude
 Is as an anchorite's, were it but holy

Man And what are they who do avouch these things ?

Abbot My pious brethren—the scared peasantry—
 Even thy own vassals—who do look on thee
 With most unquiet eyes Thy life's in peril

Man Take it

Abbot I come to save, and not destroy —
 I would not pry into thy secret soul,
 But if these things be sooth, there still is time
 For penitence and pity reconcile thee
 With the true church, and through the church to heaven

Man I hear thee This is my reply. whate'er
 I may have been, or am, doth rest between Heaven and myself — I shall not choose a mortal
 To be my mediator Have I sinn'd
 Against your ordinances ? prove and punish ! (1)

(1) [Thus far the text stands as originally penned we subjoin the sequel of the scene as given in the first MS —

“ Abbot Then, hear and tremble ! For the headstrong wretch
 Who in the mail of innate hardihood
 Would shield himself, and battle for his sins,
 There is the stake on earth, and beyond earth eternal

Man Charity, most reverend father,
 Becomes thy lips so much more than this menace,
 That I would call thee back to it but say,
 What wouldst thou with me ?

Abbot It may be there are Things that would shake thee—but I keep them back,
 And give thee till to morrow to repent
 Then if thou dost not all devote thyself

Abbot My son ! I did not speak of punishment,
But penitence and pardon, — with thyself

To penance, and with gift of all thy lands
To the monastery ———

Man I understand thee, — well !

Abbot Expect no mercy, I have warned thee

Man (opening the casket) Stop —

There is a gift for thee within this casket

[MANFRED opens the casket, strikes a light, and burns some incense]

Ho ! Ashtaroth !

The DEMON ASHTAROTH appears, singing as follows —

The raven sits
On the raven stone,
And his black wing flits
O'er the milk-white bone,
To and fro, as the night-winds blow,
The carcass of the assassin swings,
And there alone, on the raven-stone, <sup>(1)</sup>
The raven flaps his dusky wings

The fetters creak — and his ebon beak
Croaks to the close of the hollow sound,
And this is the tune, by the light of the moon,
To which the witches dance their round —
Merrily, merrily, cheerily, cheerily,
Merrily, speeds the ball
The dead in their shrouds, and the demons in clouds,
Flock to the witches' carnival

Abbot I fear thee not — hence — hence —

Avaunt thee, evil one ! — help, ho ! without there !

Man Convey this man to the Shreckhorn — to its peak —

To its extremest peak — watch with him there
From now till sunrise, let him gaze, and know
He ne'er again will be so near to heaven
But harm him not, and, when the morrow breaks,
Set him down safe in his cell — away with him !

Ash. Had I not better bring his brethren too, Convent and all, to bear him company ?

(1) "Raven stone (Rabenstein), a translation of the German word for the gabbet, which in Germany and Switzerland is permanent, and made of stone"

The choice of such remains — and for the last,
 Our institutions and our strong belief
 Have given me power to smoothe the path from sin
 To higher hope and better thoughts, the first
 I leave to heaven,—“ Vengeance is mine alone ! ”
 So saith the Lord, and with all humbleness
 His servant echoes back the awful word

Man Old man ! there is no power in holy men,
 Nor charm in prayer — nor purifying form
 Of penitence — nor outward look — nor fast —
 Nor agony — nor, greater than all these,
 The innate tortures of that deep despair,
 Which is remorse without the fear of hell,
 But all in all sufficient to itself
 Would make a hell of heaven — can exorcise
 From out the unbounded spirit the quick sense
 Of its own sins, wrongs, sufferance, and revenge

Man No, this will serve for the present Take him up
Ash Come, flial ! now an exorcism or two,
 And we shall fly the lighter

ASHTAROTH disappears with the ABBOT, singing as follows —

A prodigal son, and a maid undone,
 And a widow re-wedded within the year,
 And a worldly monk, and a pregnant nun,
 Are things which every day appear

MANFRED alone

Man Why would this fool break in on me, and force
 My art to pranks fantastical ? — no matter,
 It was not of my seeking My heart sickens,
 And weighs a fix'd foreboding on my soul
 But it is calm — calm as a sullen sea
 After the hurricane, the winds are still,
 But the cold waves swell high and heavily,
 And there is danger in them Such a rest
 Is no repose My life hath been a combat,
 And every thought a wound, till I am scarr'd
 In the immortal part of me — What now ?”]

Upon itself, there is no future pang
 Can deal that justice on the self-condemn'd
 He deals on his own soul

Abbot All this is well,
 For this will pass away, and be succeeded
 By an auspicious hope, which shall look up
 With calm assurance to that blessed place,
 Which all who seek may win, whatever be
 Their earth'y errors, so they be atoned
 And the commencement of atonement is
 The sense of its necessity — Say on —
 And all our church can teach thee shall be taught,
 And all we can absolve thee shall be pardon'd

Man When Rome's sixth emperor <sup>(1)</sup> was near his last,
 The victim of a self-inflicted wound,
 To shun the torments of a public death <sup>(2)</sup>
 From senates once his slaves, a certain soldier,
 With show of loyal pity, would have stanch'd
 The gushing throat with his officious robe,
 The dying Roman thrust him back, and said —
 Some empire still in his expiring glance,
 ' It is too late—is this fidelity ?'

(1) [Otho, being defeated in a general engagement near Brixellum, stabbed himself. Plutarch says, that, though he lived full as badly as Nero, his last moments were those of a philosopher. He comforted his soldiers who lamented his fortune, and expressed his concern for their safety, when they solicited to pay him the last friendly offices. Martial says

" Sit Cato, dum vivit, sane vel Cæsare major, Dum moritur, numquid major Othone fuit ?"—E.]

(2) MS —

" To shun {not loss of life, but } public death {the torments of a }
 Choose between them." ]

Abbot And what of this ?

Man I answer with the Roman —
 “ It is too late ! ”

Abbot It never can be so,
 To reconcile thyself with thy own soul,
 And thy own soul with heaven Hast thou no hope ?
 ’Tis strange—even those who do despair above,
 Yet shape themselves some fantasy on earth,
 To which frail twig they cling, like downy men.

Man Ay — father ! I have had those earthly

VISIONS

And noble aspirations in my youth,
 To make my own the mind of other men,
 The enlightener of nations, and to rise
 I knew not whither — it might be to fall,
 But fall, even as the mountain-cataract,
 Which having leapt from its more dazzling height,
 Even in the foaming strength of its abyss, (Which casts up misty columns that become Clouds raining from the re-ascended skies,)
 Lies low but mighty still — But this is past,
 My thoughts mistook themselves

Abbot And wherefore so ?

Man I could not tame my nature down, for he Must serve who fain would sway—and soothe — and sue —

And watch all time—and pry into all place—
 And be a living lie—who would become A mighty thing amongst the mean, and such
 The mass are, I disdain’d to mingle with A herd, though to be leader—and of wolves
 The lion is alone, and so am I.

Abbot And why not live and act with other men?

Man Because my nature was averse from life;
And yet not cruel, for I would not make,
But find a desolation —like the wind,
The red-hot breath of the most lone Simoom,
Which dwells but in the desert, and sweeps o'er
The barren sands which bear no shrubs to blast,
And revels o'er their wild and arid waves,
And seeketh not, so that it is not sought,
But being met is deadly, such hath been
The course of my existence, but there came Things in my path which are no more

Abbot

Alas!

I 'gin to fear that thou art past all aid
From me and from my calling, yet so young,
I still would

Man

Look on me! there is an order
Of mortals on the earth, who do become Old in their youth, and die ere middle age,
Without the violence of warlike death,
Some perishing of pleasure—some of study—
Some worn with toil—some of mere weariness—
Some of disease—and some insanity— (1)
And some of wither'd, or of broken hearts,

(1) [This speech has been quoted in more than one of the sketches of the poet's own life. Much earlier, when only twenty-three years of age, he had thus prophesied —“It seems as if I were to experience in my youth the greatest misery of old age. My friends fall around me, and I shall be left a lonely tree before I am withered. Other men can always take refuge in their families—I have no resource but my own reflections, and they present no prospect, here or hereafter, except the selfish satisfaction of surviving my betters. I am, indeed, very wretched. My days are listless, and my nights restless. I have very seldom any society, and when I have, I run out of it. I don't know that I shan't end with insanity.”—B Letters, 1811.]

For this last is a malady which slays
 More than are number'd in the lists of Fate,
 Taking all shapes, and bearing many names
 Look upon me! for even of all these things
 Have I partaken, and of all these things,
 One were enough, then wonder not that I Am what I am, but that I ever was,
 Or having been, that I am still on earth

Abbot Yet, hear me still

Man Old man! I do respect

Thine order, and revere thine years, I deem Thy purpose pious, but it is in vain
 Think me not churlish, I would spare thyself,
 Far more than me, in shunning at this time
 All further colloquy—and so—farewell (1)

[Exit MANFRED]

Abbot This should have been a noble creature<sup>(2)</sup>
 Hath all the energy which would have made [he

(1) ["Of the immortality of the soul, it appears to me that there can be little doubt—if we attend for a moment to the action of mind. It is in perpetual activity. I used to doubt of it—but reflection has taught me better. How far our future state will be individual, or, rather, how far it will at all resemble our present existence, is another question, but that the mind is eternal seems as probable as that the body is not so"—B. Diary, 1821—
 "I have no wish to reject Christianity without investigation, on the contrary, I am very desirous of believing, for I have no happiness in my present unsettled notions on religion"—B. Conversations with Kennedy, 1823]

(2) [There are three only, even among the great poets of modern times, who have chosen to depict, in their full shape and vigour, those agonies to which great and meditative intellects are, in the present progress of human history, exposed by the eternal recurrence of a deep and discontented scepticism. But there is only one who has dared to represent himself as the victim of those nameless and undefinable sufferings. Goethe chose for his doubts and his darkness the terrible disguise of the mysterious Faust. Schiller, with still greater boldness, planted the same anguish in the restless, haughty, and heroic bosom of Wallenstein. But Byron has sought no external symbol in which to embody the inquietudes of his soul. He takes the world, and all that it inheres, for his arena and his spectators, and he

A goodly frame of glorious elements,
Had they been wisely mingled, as it is,
It is an awful chaos—light and darkness—
And mind and dust—and passions and pure thoughts
Mix'd, and contending without end or order,
All dormant or destructive he will perish,
And yet he must not, I will try once more,
For such are worth redemption, and my duty
Is to dare all things for a righteous end
I'll follow him—but cautiously, though surely [Exit ABBOT.]

SCENE II

Another Chamber

MANFRED and HERMAN

Her My lord, you bade me wait on you at sunset.
He sinks behind the mountain

Man

Doth he so?

displays himself before their gaze, wrestling unceasingly and ineffectually with the demon that torments him. At times, there is something mournful and depressing in his scepticism, but oftener it is of a high and solemn character, approaching to the very verge of a confiding faith. Whatever the poet may believe, we, his readers, always feel ourselves too much ennobled and elevated, even by his melancholy, not to be confirmed in our own belief by the very doubts so majestically conceived and uttered. His scepticism, if it ever approaches to a creed, carries with it its refutation in its grandeur. There is neither philosophy nor religion in those bitter and savage taunts which have been cruelly thrown out, from many quarters, against those moods of mind which are involuntary, and will not pass away, the shadows and spectres which still haunt his imagination may once have disturbed our own,—through his gloom there are frequent flashes of illumination,—and the sublime sadness which to him is breathed from the mysteries of mortal existence, is always joined with a longing after immortality, and expressed in language that is itself divine.—PROFESSOR WILSON.]

I will look on him

[MANFRED advances to the Window of the Hall

Glorious Orb ! the idol

Of early nature, and the vigorous race
 Of undiseased mankind, the giant sons <sup>(1)</sup>
 Of the embrace of angels, with a sex
 More beautiful than they, which did draw down
 The erring spirits who can ne'er return —
 Most glorious orb ! that wert a worship-er
 The mystery of thy making was reveal'd !
 Thou earliest minister of the Almighty,
 Which gladden'd, on their mountain tops, the hearts
 Of the Chaldean shepherds, till they pour'd Themselves in orisons ! Thou material God !
 And representative of the Unknown —
 Who chose thee for his shadow ! Thou chief stair !
 Centre of many stairs ! which mak'st our earth
 Endurable, and temperest the hues
 And hearts of all who walk within thy rays !
 Sire of the seasons ! Monarch of the climes,
 And those who dwell in them ! for near or far,
 Our inborn spirits have a tint of thee
 Even as our outward aspects, — thou dost rise,
 And shine, and set in glory Fare thee well !
 I ne'er shall see thee more As my first glance
 Of love and wonder was for thee, then take
 My latest look thou wilt not beam on one

(1) " And it came to pass, that the Sons of God saw the daughters of men, that they were fair, ' &c — " There were giants in the earth in those days, and also after that, when the Sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown " — Genesis, ch vi verses 2 and 4

To whom the gifts of life and warmth have been
Of a more fatal nature (1) He is gone
I follow [Exit MANFRED.]

SCENE III

The Mountains—The Castle of Manfred at some distance—A Terrace before a Tower—Time, Twilight.

HERMAN, MANUEL, and other Dependants of
MANFRED

Her 'Tis strange enough, night after night, for years,
He hath pursued long vigils in this tower,
Without a witness I have been within it,—
So have we all been oft-times, but from it,
Or its contents, it were impossible
To draw conclusions absolute, of aught
His studies tend to To be sure, there is One chamber where none enter. I would give The fee of what I have to come these three years,
To pore upon its mysteries

Manuel 'Twere dangerous,
Content thyself with what thou know'st already

Her Ah! Manuel! thou art elderly and wise,
And couldst say much, thou hast dwelt within the castle—

How many years is't?

(1) ["Pray, was Manfred's speech to the Sun still retained in Act third?
I hope so it was one of the best in the thing, and better than the Coliseum."—B Letters, 1817]

Manuel. Ere Count Manfred's birth,
I served his father, whom he nought resembles

Her There be more sons in like predicament
But wherein do they differ ?

Manuel. I speak not
Of features or of form, but mind and habits,
Count Sigismund was proud,—but gay and free,—
A warrior and a reveller, he dwelt not
With books and solitude, nor made the night
A gloomy vigil, but a festal time,
Merrier than day, he did not walk the rocks
And forests like a wolf, nor turn aside
From men and their delights.

Her. Beshrew the hour,
But those were jocund times ! I would that such Would visit the old walls again, they look
As if they had forgotten them

Manuel These walls
Must change their chieftain first Oh ! I have seen
Some strange things in them, Herman <sup>(1)</sup>

Her Come, be friendly,
Relate me some to while away our watch.
I've heard thee darkly speak of an event
Which happen'd hereabouts, by this same tower

Manuel That was a night indeed ! I do remember
'Twas twilight, as it may be now, and such Another evening,—yon red cloud, which rests
On Eighei's pinnacle, so rested then,—
So like that it might be the same, the wind
Was faint and gusty, and the mountain snows
Began to glitter with the climbing moon,

(1) [MS — "Some strange things in these few years"—E]

Count Manfred was, as now, within his tower,—
 How occupied, we knew not, but with him
 The sole companion of his wanderings
 And watchings—he, whom of all earthly things
 That lived, the only thing he seem'd to love,—
 As he, indeed, by blood was bound to do,
 The lady Astarte, his (1)

Hush! who comes here?

(1) [The remainder of the third Act, in its original shape, ran thus —

Her Look — look — the tower —
 The tower 's on fire Oh, heavens and earth! what sound,
 What dreadful sound is that? [A crash like thunder]

Manuel Help, help, there! — to the rescue of the Count,—
 The Count 's in danger, — what ho! there! approach!

[The Servants, Passals, and Peasantry approach, stupefied with terror]

If there be any of you who have heart
 And love of human kind, and will to aid
 I lose in distress — pause not — but follow me —
 The portal 's open, follow

[MANUEL goes in]

Her Come — who follows?
 What, none of ye? — ye recreant! shiver then Without I will not see old Manuel risk
 His few remaining years unaided

[HERMAN goes in]

Passal Hark! —
 No — all is silent — not a breath — the flame
 Which shot forth such a blaze is also gone
 What may this mean? Let 's enter!

Peasant Faith, not I, —
 Not that, if one, or two, or more, will join,
 I then will stay behind, but, for my part,
 I do not see precisely to what end

Passal Cease your vain prating — come
Manuel (speaking within) 'Tis all in vain —
 He's dead

Her (within) Not so — even now methought he moved,
 But it is dark — so bear him gently out —
 Softly — how cold he is! take care of his temples
 In winding down the staircase

Re enter MANUEL and HERMAN, bearing MANFRED in their Arms

Manuel Hie to the castle, some of ye, and bring What aid you can Saddle the barb, and speed
 For the leech to the city — quick! some water there!

Enter the ABBOT

Abbot Where is your master ?

Her Yonder in the tower.

Abbot I must speak with him

Manuel 'Tis impossible,

He is most private, and must not be thus

Intruded on

Abbot Upon myself I take

The forfeit of my fault, if fault there be—

But I must see him

Her Thou hast seen him once

This eve already

Abbot Herman ! I command thee,

Knock, and apprize the Count of my approach

Her We dare not

Abbot Then it seems I must be herald

Of my own purpose

Manuel Reverend father, stop—

I pray you pause

Abbot Why so ?

Her His cheek is black — but there is a faint beat
Still lingering about the heart Some water

[They sprinkle MANFRED with water after a pause, he gives some signs of life]

Manuel He seems to strive to speak — come — cheerly, Count !
He moves his lips — canst hear him ? I am old,
And cannot catch faint sounds

[HERMAN inclining his head and listening]

Her I hear a word
Or two — but indistinctly — what is next ?

What's to be done ? let's bear him to the castle

[MANFRED motions with his hand not to remove him]

Manuel He disapproves — and 'twere of no avail —
He changes rapidly

Her 'Twill soon be over

Manuel But step this way,
And I will tell you further [ Exeunt. ]

SCENE IV (1)

*Interior of the Tower*MANFRED alone

The stars are forth, the moon above the tops
Of the snow-shining mountains — Beautiful!
I linger yet with Nature, for the night
Hath been to me a more familiar face
Than that of man, and in her starry shade
Of dim and solitary loveliness,
I learn'd the language of another world
I do remember me, that in my youth,
When I was wandering,—upon such a night
I stood within the Coliseum's wall,(2)
Midst the chief relics of almighty Rome,
The trees which grew along the broken arches
Waved dark in the blue midnight, and the stars
Shone through the rents of ruin, from afar
The watchdog bay'd beyond the Tiber, and

(1) [The opening of this scene is, perhaps, the finest passage in the drama, and its solemn, calm, and majestic character throws an air of grandeur over the catastrophe, which was in danger of appearing extravagant, and somewhat too much in the style of the "Devil and Dr Faustus"—WILSON]

(2) ["Drove at midnight to see the Coliseum by moonlight but what can I say of the Coliseum? It must be seen, to describe it I should have thought impossible, if I had not read 'Manfred.' To see it right, as the Poet of the North tells us of the fair Melrose, one 'must see it by the pale moonlight' The stillness of night, the whispering echoes, the moonlight shadows, and the awful grandeur of the impending ruins, form a scene of romantic sublimity, such as Byron alone could describe as it deserves His description is the very thing itself"—MARTINEAU'S Diary of an Invader]

More near from out the Cæsars' palace came
The owl's long cry, and, interruptedly,
Of distant sentinels the fitful song
Begun and died upon the gentle wind
Some cypresses beyond the time-worn breach Appear'd to skirt the horizon, yet they stood
Within a bowshot—Where the Cæsars dwelt,
And dwell the tuneless buds of night, amidst
A grove which springs through levell'd battlements,
And twines its roots with the imperial hearths,
Ivy usups the laurel's place of growth,—
But the gladiators' bloody Cucus stands,
A noble wreck in rumous perfection!
While Cæsar's chambers, and the Augustan halls,
Grovel on earth in indistinct decay—
And thou didst shine, thou rolling moon, upon
All this, and cast a wide and tender light,
Which soften'd down the hoar austerity
Of rugged desolation, and fill'd up,
As 'twere anew, the gaps of centuries,
Leaving that beautiful which still was so,
And making that which was not, till the place
Became religion, and the heart ran o'er
With silent worship of the great of old!—
The dead, but sceptred sovereigns, who still rule
Our spirits from their urns—

'Twas such a night!

'Tis strange that I recall it at this time,
But I have found our thoughts take wildest flight
Even at the moment when they should array Themselves in pensive order

Enter the ABBOT

Abbot

My good lord !

I crave a second grace for this approach ;
But yet let not my humble zeal offend
By its abruptness—all it hath of ill
Recoils on me, its good in the effect
May light upon your head—could I say heart—
Could I touch that, with words or prayers, I should Recall a noble spirit which hath wander'd,
But is not yet all lost.

Man.

Thou know'st me not,

My days are number'd, and my deeds recorded
Retire, or 'twill be dangerous—Away!

Abbot Thou dost not mean to menace me?

Man

Not I.

I simply tell thee peil is at hand,
And would picseive thee.

Abbot

What dost thou mean?

Man

Look there !

What dost thou see ?

Abbot

Nothing

Man.

Look there, I say,

And steadfastly,—now tell me what thou seest?

Abbot That which should shake me,—but I fear it not—

I see a dusk and awful figure rise,
Like an infernal god, from out the earth,
His face wrapt in a mantle, and his form
Robed as with angry clouds—he stands between Thyself and me—but I do fear him not

Man Thou hast no cause—he shall not harm thee—but

HIS sight may shock thine old limbs into palsy.

I say to thee—Retire!

Abbot And I reply—

Never—till I have battled with this fiend —

What doth he here?

Man Why—ay—what doth he here?—

I did not send for him,—he is unbidden.

Abbot Alas! lost mortal! what with guests like these Hast thou to do? I tremble for thy sake.

Why doth he gaze on thee, and thou on him?

Ah! he unveils his aspect on his brow

The thunder-scars are graven, from his eye

Glares forth the immortality of hell—

Avaunt!

Man Pronounce—what is thy mission?

Spirit Come!

Abbot What art thou, unknown being? answer!— speak!

Spirit The genius of this mortal—Come! 'tis time

Man. I am prepared for all things, but deny
The power which summons me Who sent thee here?

Spirit. Thou'lt know anon—Come! come!

Man I have commanded

Things of an essence greater far than thine,

And striven with thy masters Get thee hence!

Spirit Mortal! thine hour is come—Away!

I say.

Man I knew, and know my hour is come, but not
To render up my soul to such as thee:

Away! I'll die as I have lived—alone.

Spirit Then I must summon up my brethren —

Rise ! [ Other Spirits rise up.

Abbot Avaunt ! ye evil ones ! — Avaunt ! I say, —
Ye have no power where piety hath power,
And I do charge ye in the name

Spirit Old man !

We know ourselves, our mission, and thine order,
Waste not thy holy words on idle uses,
It were in vain : this man is forfeited.

Once more I summon him — Away ! away !

Man I do defy ye, — though I feel my soul
Is ebbing from me, yet I do defy ye,
Nor will I hence, while I have earthly breath
To breathe my scorn upon ye — earthly strength
To wrestle, though with spirits, what ye take Shall be ta'en limb by limb

Spirit Reluctant mortal !

Is this the Magian who would so pervade
The world invisible, and make himself
Almost our equal ? — Can it be that thou Art thus in love with life ? the very life
Which made thee wretched !

Man Thou false fiend, thou hest !

My life is in its last hour, — that I know,
Nor would redeem a moment of that hour,
I do not combat against death, but thee
And thy surrounding angels, my past power
Was purchased by no compact with thy crew,
But by superior science — penance — daring —
And length of watching — strength of mind — and skill

In knowledge of our fathers—when the earth
 Saw men and spirits walking side by side,
 And gave ye no supremacy I stand
 Upon my strength—I do defy—deny—
 Spurn back, and scorn ye!—

Spirit But thy many crimes
 Have made thee

Man What are they to such as thee?
 Must crimes be punish'd but by other crimes,
 And greater criminals?—Back to thy hell!
 Thou hast no power upon me, that I feel,
 Thou never shalt possess me, that I know:
 What I have done is done, I bear within
 A torture which could nothing gain from thine:
 The mind which is immortal makes itself
 Requital for its good or evil thoughts—
 Is its own origin of ill and end—
 And its own place and time—its innate sense,
 When stripp'd of this mortality, derives
 No colour from the fleeting things without,
 But is absorb'd in sufferance or in joy,
 Born from the knowledge of its own desert
Thou didst not tempt me, and thou couldst not tempt me,

I have not been thy dupe, nor am thy prey—
 But was my own destroyer, and will be
 My own hereafter—Back, ye baffled fiends!
 The hand of death is on me—but not yours!

[The Demons disappear]

Abbot. Alas! how pale thou art—thy lips are white—

And thy breast heaves—and in thy gasping throat

The accents rattle—Give thy prayers to Heaven—
Pray—albeit but in thought,—but die not thus.

Man 'Tis over—my dull eyes can fix thee not,
But all things swim around me, and the earth
Heaves as it were beneath me Fare thee well—
Give me thy hand

Abbot Cold—cold—even to the heart—
But yet one prayer—Alas! how fares it with thee?

Man Old man! 'tis not so difficult to die (1)

[MANFRED expires

Abbot He's gone—his soul hath ta'en its earthless flight—

Whither? I dread to think—but he is gone (2)

(1) [In the first Edition, this line was accidentally left out. On discovering the omission, Lord Byron wrote to Mr Murray — 'You have destroyed the whole effect and moral of the poem, by omitting the last line of Manfred's speaking' — E]

(2) [In June, 1820, Lord Byron thus writes to his publisher — "Enclosed is something which will interest you, to wit, the opinion of the greatest man in Germany — perhaps in Europe — upon one of the great men of your advertisements (all 'famous hands,' as Jacob Tonson used to say of his raggamuffins) — in short, a critique of Goethe's upon Manfred. There is the original, an English translation, and an Italian one keep them all in your archives, for the opinions of such a man as Goethe, whether favourable or not, are always interesting — and this is more so, as favourable. His Faust I never read, for I don't know German, but Matthew Monk Lewis, in 1816, at Coligny, translated most of it 'o me viva voce, and I was naturally much struck with it but it was the Steinbach and the Jungfrau, and something else, much more than Faustus, that made me write Manfred. The first scene, however, and that of Faustus are very similar."

The following is the extract from Goethe's Kunst und Altheithum (i.e. Art and Antiquity) (which the above letter enclosed) —

"Byron's tragedy, 'Manfred,' was to me a wonderful phenomenon, and one that closely touched me. This singularly intellectual poet has taken my Faustus to himself, and extracted from it the strongest nourishment for his hypochondriac humour. He has made use of the impelling principles in his own way, for his own purposes, so that no one of them remains the same, and it is particularly on this account that I cannot enough admire his genius. The whole is in this way so completely formed anew, that it would be an interesting task for the critic to point out, not only the alterations he has made, but their degree of resemblance with, or dissimilarity to, the original in the course of which I cannot deny, that the gloomy heat of an unbounded and exuberant despair becomes at last oppressive to us. Yet is the dissatisfaction we feel always connected with esteem and admiration.

"We find thus, in this tragedy, the quintessence of the most astonishing talent born to be its own tormentor. The character of Lord Byron's life and poetry hardly permits a just and equitable appreciation. He has often enough confessed what it is that torments him. He has repeatedly portrayed it, and scarcely any one feels compassion for this intolerable suffering, over which he is ever laboriously ruminating. There are, properly speaking, two females who are phantoms for ever haunt him, and which, in this piece also, perform principal parts — one under the name of Astarte, the other without form or actual presence, and merely a voice. Of the horrid occurrence which took place with the former, the following is related — When a bold and enterprising young man, he won the affections of a Florentine lady.* Her husband discovered the amour, and murdered his wife, but the murderer was the same night found dead in the street, and there was no one on whom any suspicion could be attached. Lord Byron removed from Florence, and these spirits haunted him all his life after.

"This romantic incident is rendered highly probable by innumerable allusions to it in his poems. As, for instance, when turning his sad contemplations inwards, he applies to himself the fatal history of the king of Sparta. It is as follows — Pausanias, a Lacedæmonian general, acquires glory by the important victory at Platæa, but afterwards forfeits the confidence of his countrymen through his arrogance, obstinacy, and secret intrigues with the enemies of his country. This man draws upon himself the heavy guilt of innocent blood, which attends him to his end, for, while commanding the fleet of the allied Greeks, in the Black Sea, he is inflamed with a violent passion for a Byzantine maiden. After long resistance, he at length obtains her from her parents, and she is to be delivered up to him at night. She modestly desires the servant to put out the lamp, and, while groping her way in the dark, she overturns it. Pausanias is awakened from his sleep—apprehensive of an attack from murderers, he seizes his sword, and destroys his mistress. The horrid sight never leaves him. Her shade pursues him unceasingly, and he implores for aid in vain from the gods and the exorcising priests.

* ["The grave confidence with which the venerable critic traces the fancies of his brother poet to real persons and events, making no difficulty even of a double murder at Florence to furnish grounds for his theory, affords an amusing instance of the disposition so prevalent throughout Europe, to picture Byron as a man of marvels and mysteries, as well in his life as his poetry. To these exaggerated, or wholly false notions of him, the numerous fictions palmed upon the world of his romantic tours and wonderful adventures, in places he never saw, and with persons that never existed, have, no doubt, considerably contributed, and the consequence is, so utterly out of truth and nature are the representations of his life and character long current upon the Continent, that it may be questioned whether the real 'flesh and blood' hero of these pages, — the social, practical-minded, and, with all his faults and eccentricities, English Lord Byron, — may not, to the over-exalted imaginations of most of his foreign admirers, appear but an ordinary, unromantic, and prosaic personage." — MOORE'S Life of Byron]

“That poet must have a lacerated heart who selects such a scene from antiquity, appropriates it to himself, and burdens his tragic image with it. The following soliloquy, which is overladen with gloom and a weariness of life, is, by this remark, rendered intelligible. We recommend it as an exercise to all friends of declamation. Hamlet’s soliloquy appears improved upon here.”—Goethe here subjoins Manfred’s soliloquy, beginning “We are the fools of time and terror,” in which the allusion to Pausanias occurs. The reader will not be sorry to pass from this German criticism to that of the Edinburgh Review on Manfred.—“This is, undoubtedly, a work of great genius and originality. Its worst fault, perhaps, is that it fatigues and overawes us by the uniformity of its terror and solemnity. Another, is the painful and offensive nature of the circumstance on which its distress is ultimately founded. The lyrical songs of the Spirits are too long, and not all excellent. There is something of pedantry in them now and then, and even Manfred deals in classical allusions a little too much. If we were to consider it as a proper drama, or even as a finished poem, we should be obliged to add, that it is far too indistinct and unsatisfactory. But this we take to be according to the design and conception of the author. He contemplated but a dim and magnificent sketch of a subject which did not admit of more accurate drawing or more brilliant colouring. Its obscurity is a part of its grandeur,—and the darkness that rests upon it, and the smoky distance in which it is lost, are all devices to increase its majesty, to stimulate our curiosity, and to impress us with deeper awe.—It is suggested, in an ingenious paper in a late number of the Edinburgh Magazine, that the general conception of this piece, and much of what is excellent in the manner of its execution, have been borrowed from ‘The Tragical History of Dr Faustus,’ of Marlow*, and a variety of passage are quoted, which the author considers as similar, and, in many respects, superior to others in the poem before us. We cannot agree in the general terms of the conclusion, but there is no doubt a certain resemblance, both in some of the topics that are suggested, and in the cast of the diction in which they are

* [On reading this, Lord Byron wrote from Venice.—“Jeffrey is very kind about Manfred, and defends its originality, which I did not know that any body had attacked. As to the germs of it, they may be found in the Journal which I sent to Mrs Leigh, shortly before I left Switzerland. I have the whole scene of Manfred before me, as if it was but yesterday, and could point it out, spot by spot, torrent and all.”—E.]

expressed Thus, to induce Faustus to persist in his unlawful studies, he is told that the Spirits of the Elements will serve him, —

‘ Sometimes like women, or unwedded maids,
Shadowing more beauty in their ayrie browes,
Than have the white breasts of the Queene of Love ’

And again, when the amorous sorcerer commands Helen of Troy to revive again to be his paramour, he addresses her, on her first appearance, in these rapturous lines —

‘ Was this the face that launcht a thousand ships,
And burn’d the topless towers of Ilium ?
Sweet Helen ! make me immortal with a kiss,
Her lips suck forth my soule — see where it flies
Come, Helen, come give me my soule againe,
Here will I dwell, for heaven is on that lip,
And all is dross that is not Helena
O ! thou art fairer than the evening ayre,
Clad in the beauty of a thousand staires,
More lovely than the monarch of the skyes,
In wanton Arethusa’s azure arms ! ’

The catastrophe, too, is bewailed in verses of great elegance and classical beauty —

‘ Cut is the branch that might have growne full straight,
And burn’d is Apollo’s laurel bough
That sometime grew within this learned man
Faustus is gone ! — regard his hellish fall,
Whose findful torture may exhort the wise,
Only to wonder at unlawful things ! ’

But these, and many other smooth and fanciful verses in this curious old drama, prove nothing, we think, against the originality of Manfred, for there is nothing to be found there of the pride, the abstraction, and the heart-rooted misery in which that originality consists. Faustus is a vulgar sorcerer, tempted to sell his soul to the devil for the ordinary price of sensual pleasure, and earthly power and glory, and who shrinks and shudders in agony when the forfeit comes to be exacted. The style, too, of Marlow, though elegant and scholarlike, is weak and childish compared with the depth and force of much of Lord Byron, and the disgusting buffoonery and low farce of which his piece is principally made up, place it more in contrast, than in any terms of comparison, with that of his noble successor. In the tone and pitch of the composition, as well as in the character of the diction in the more solemn parts, Manfred reminds us much more of the ‘ Prometheus ’ of Æschylus, * than of any more modern performance. The tremendous solitude of the principal person — the supernatural being, with whom alone he holds communion — the guilt — the firmness — the misery — are all points of resemblance, to which the grandeur of the poetic imagery only gives a more striking effect. The chief differences are, that the subject of the Greek poet was sanctified and exalted by the established belief of his country, and that his terrors are nowhere tempered with the sweetness which breathes from so many passages of his English rival." — JEFFREY ]

* [“ Of the ‘ Prometheus ’ of Æschylus I was passionately fond as a boy (it was one of the Greek plays we read thrice a year at Harrow), indeed, that and the ‘ Medea ’ were the only ones, except the ‘ Seven before

---

Thebes,' which ever much pleased me. The Prometheus, if not exactly in my plan, has always been so much in my head, that I can easily conceive its influence over all or any thing that I have written, but I deny Marlow and his progeny, and beg that you will do the same " — B Letters, 1817 ]

THE
LAMENT OF TASSO.

At Ferrara, in the Library, are preserved the original MSS of Tasso's Gerusalemme and of Guarini's Pastor Fido, with letters of Tasso, one from Titian to Ariosto, and the inkstand and chair, the tomb and the house of the latter. But, as misfortune has a greater interest for posterity, and little or none for the cotemporary, the cell where Tasso was confined in the hospital of St Anna attracts a more fixed attention, than the residence or the monument of Ariosto—at least it had this effect on me. There are two inscriptions, one on the outer gate, the second over the cell itself, inviting, unnecessarily, the wonder and the indignation of the spectator. Ferrara is much decayed, and depopulated: the castle still exists entire, and I saw the court where Parisina and Hugo were beheaded, according to the annal of Gibbon.—[The original MS of this poem is dated, “The Apennines, April 20 1817.” It was written in consequence of Lord Byron having visited Ferrara, for a single day, on his way to Florence. In a letter from Rome, he says—“The ‘Lament of Tasso,’ which I sent from Florence, has, I trust, arrived. I look upon it as a ‘These be good rhymes’” as Pope’s papa said to him when he was a boy.—E.]

[In a moment of dissatisfaction with himself, or during some melancholy mood, when his soul felt the worthlessness of fame and glory, Lord Byron told the world that his muse should, for a long season shroud herself in solitude (see ante, Vol. V. p. 5), and every true lover of genius lamented that her lofty music was to cease. But there was a tide in his spirit obeying the laws of its nature, and not to be controlled by any human will. When he said that he was to be silent, he looked, perhaps, into the inner region of his soul, and saw there a dim, hard, and cheerless waste, like the sand of the sea shore, but the ebbcd waves of passion in due course returned, and the scene was restored to its former beauty and magnificence, — its foam, its splendours, and its thunder. The mind of a mighty poet cannot submit even to chains of its own imposing when it feels most enslaved, even then, perhaps, is it about to become most free, and one sudden flash may ruse it from the darkness of its dependence up to the pure air of untroubled confidence. It required, therefore, but small knowledge of human nature, to assure ourselves that the obligation under which Lord Byron had laid himself could not bind, and that the potent spirit within him would l ough to scorn whatever dared to curb the frenzy of its own inspirations.

It was not long, therefore, till he again came forth in his perfect strength, and exercised that dominion over our spirits which is truly a power too noble to be possessed without being wielded. Though all his heroes are of one family, yet are they a noble band of brothers, whose countenances and whose souls are strongly distinguished by peculiar characteristics. Each personage, as he advances before us, reminds us of some other being, whose looks, thoughts, words and deeds had troubled us by their wild and perturbed grandeur. But though all the same, yet are they all strangely different. We hail each successive existence with a profounder sympathy, and we are lost in wonder, in fear, and in sorrow, at the infinitely varied struggles, the endless and agonising modifications of the human passions, as they drive along through every gate and avenue of the soul, darkening or brightening, elevating or laying prostrate.

From such agitating and terrific pictures, it is delightful to turn to those compositions in which Lord Byron has allowed his soul to sink down into gentler and more ordinary feelings. Many beautiful and pathetic strains have flowed from his heart, of which the tenderness is as touching as the grandeur of his nobler works is agitating and sublime. To those, indeed, who looked deeply into his poetry, there never was at any time a want of pathos, but it was a pathos so subduing and so profound, that even the poet himself seemed afraid of being delivered up unto it, nay, he seemed ashamed of being overcome by emotions, which the gloomy pride of his intellect often vainly strove to scorn, and he dashed the weakness from his heart, and the tear from his eyes, like a man suddenly assailed by feelings which he wished to hide, and which, though true to his nature, were inconsistent with the character which that mysterious nature had been forced, as in self defence, to assume.

But there is one poem in which he has almost wholly laid aside all remembrance of the darker and stormier passions, in which the tone of his spirit and his voice at once is changed, and where he who seemed to care only for agonies, and remorse, and despair, and death, and insanity, in all their most appalling forms, shows that he has a heart that can feed on the purest sympathies of our nature, and deliver itself up to the sorrows, the sadness, and the melancholy of humbler souls. The "Prisoner of Chillon" is a poem over which Infancy has shed its first mysterious tears for sorrows so alien to its own happy innocence, — over which the gentle, pure, and pious soul of Woman has brooded with ineffable, and yearning, and bursting tenderness of affection, — and over which old Age, almost loosened from this world, has bowed his hoary head in delighted approbation of that fraternal love, whose beauty and simplicity fling a radiance over the earth he is about to leave, and exhibit our fallen nature in near approximation to the glories of its ultimate destiny. The "Lament" possesses much of the tenderness and pathos of the "Prisoner of Chillon." Lord Byron has not delivered himself unto any one wild and fearful vision of the imprisoned Tasso, — he has not dared to allow himself to rush forward with headlong passion into the horrors of his dungeon, and to describe, as he could fearfully have done, the conflict and agony of his uttermost despair, — but he shows us the poet sitting in his cell, and singing there — a low, melancholy, wailing lament, sometimes, indeed, bordering on utter wretchedness, but oftener partaking of a settled grief, occasionally subdued into mournful resignation, cheered by delightful remembrances, and elevated by the confident hope of an immortal fame. His is the gathered grief of many years, over which his soul has brooded, till she has in some measure lost the power of misery, and this soliloquy is one which we can believe he might have uttered to himself any morning, or noon, or night of his solitude, as he seemed to be half communing with his own heart, and half addressing the ear of that human nature from which he was shut out, but of which he felt the continual and abiding presence within his imagination — WILSON.]

THE
LAMENT OF TASSO.

---

I

LONG years !—It tries the thrilling frame to bear
And eagle-spirit of a Child of Song
Long years of outrage, calumny, and wrong,
Imputed madness, prison'd solitude,<sup>(1)</sup>
And the mind's canker in its savage mood,
When the impatient thirst of light and air

(1) [Tasso's biographer, the Abate Serassi, has left it without doubt, that the first cause of the poet's punishment was his desire to be occasionally, or altogether, free from his servitude at the court of Alfonso. In 1575, Tasso resolved to visit Rome, and enjoy the indulgence of the jubilee, "and this error," says the Abate, "increasing the suspicion already entertained, that he was in search of another service, was the origin of his misfortunes. On his return to Ferrara, the Duke refused to admit him to an audience, and he was repulsed from the houses of all the dependants of the court, and not one of the promises which the Cardinal Albano had obtained for him were carried into effect. Then it was that Tasso—after having suffered these hardships for some time, seeing himself constantly discountenanced by the Duke and the Princesses, abandoned by his friends, and derided by his enemies—could no longer contain himself within the bounds of moderation, but, giving vent to his choler, publicly broke forth into the most injurious expressions imaginable, both against the Duke and all the house of Este, cursing his past service, and retracting all the praises he had ever given in his verses to those princes, or to any individual connected with them, declaring that they were all a gang of poltroons, ingrates, and scoundrels (poltroni, ingrati, e ribaldi). For this offence he was arrested, conducted to the hospital of St Anna, and confined in a solitary cell as a madman"—SERASSI, Vita del Tasso]

Parches the heart, and the abhorred grate,
 Marring the sunbeams with its hideous shade,
 Works through the throbbing eyeball to the brain
 With a hot sense of heaviness and pain,
 And bare, at once, Captivity display'd
 Stands scoffing through the never-open'd gate,
 Which nothing through its bars admits, save day,
 And tasteless food, which I have eat alone
 Till its unsocial bitterness is gone,
 And I can banquet like a beast of prey,
 Sullen and lonely, couching in the cave
 Which is my lair, and—it may be—my grave <sup>(1)</sup>
 All this hath somewhat worn me, and ay wear,
 But must be borne I stoop not to despair,
 For I have battled with mine agony,
 And made me wings wherewith to overfly
 The narrow cucus of my dungeon wall,
 And freed the Holy Sepulchre from thrall,

(1) [In the hospital of St Anna, at Ferrara, they show a cell, over the door of which is the following inscription — “ Rispettate, O posteri, la celebrità di questa stanza, dove Torquato Tasso, infermo più di tristezza che delirio, detenuto dimorò anni vii. mesi ii, scrisse verse e prose, e fu rimesso in libertà ad istanza della città di Bergamo, nel giorno vi Luglio, 1586 ” — The dungeon is below the ground floor of the hospital, and the light penetrates through its grated window from a small yard, which seems to have been common to other cells. It is nine paces long, between five and six wide, and about seven feet high. The bedstead, so they tell, has been carried off piecemeal, and the door half cut away by the devotion of those whom “ the verse and prose ” of the prisoner have brought to Ferrara. The poet was confined in this room from the middle of March 1579 to December 1580, when he was removed to a contiguous apartment much larger, in which, to use his own expressions, he could “ philosophise and walk about ” The inscription is incorrect as to the immediate cause of his enlargement, which was promised to the city of Bergamo, but was carried into effect at the intercession of Don Vincenzo Gonzaga, Prince of Mantua — HOBHOUSE.]

And revel'd among men and things divine,
 And pour'd my spirit over Palestine,
 In honour of the sacred war for Him,
 The God who was on earth and is in heaven,
 For he hath strengthen'd me in heart and limb.
 That through this sufferance I might be forgiven,
 I have employ'd my penance to record
 How Salem's shrine was won, and how adored

II

But this is o'er—my pleasant task is done.—<sup>(1)</sup>
 My long-sustaining friend of many years!
 If I do blot thy final page with tears,
 Know, that my sorrows have wrung from me none
 But thou, my young creation! my soul's child!
 Which ever playing round me came and smiled,
 And woo'd me from myself with thy sweet sight
 Thou too art gone—and so is my delight
 And therefore do I weep and only bleed
 With this last bruise upon a broken reed
 Thou too art ended—what is left me now?
 For I have anguish yet to bear—and how?
 I know not that—but in the innate force
 Of my own spirit shall be found resource.
 I have not sunk, for I had no remorse,

(1) [The opening lines bring the poet before us at once, as if the door of the dungeon was thrown open. From this bitter complaint, how nobly the unconquered bard rises into calm, and serene, and dignified exultation over the beauty of "that young creation, his soul's child," the Gierusalemme Liberata. The exultation of conscious genius then dies away, and we behold him, "bound between distraction and disease," no longer in an inspired mood, but sunk into the lowest prostration of human misery. There is something terrible in this transition from divine rapture to degraded agony.—WILSON.]

Nor cause for such they call'd me mad—and why?
 Oh Leonora! wilt not thou reply? <sup>(1)</sup> was indeed delirious in my heart
 To lift my love so lofty as thou art,
 But still my frenzy was not of the mind,
 I knew my fault, and feel my punishment
 Not less because I suffer it unbent
 That thou wert beautiful, and I not blind,
 Hath been the sin which shuts me from mankind,
 But let them go, or torture as they will,
 My heart can multiply thine image still,
 Successful love may sate itself away,
 The wretched are the faithful, 'tis then fate
 To have all feeling save the one decay,
 And every passion into one dilate,
 As rapid rivers into ocean pour,
 But ours is fathomless, and hath no shore

III

Above me, hark! the long and maniac cry
 Of minds and bodies in captivity

(1) [In a letter written to his friend Scipio Gonzaga, shortly after his confinement, Tasso exclaims—"Ah, wretched me! I had designed to write, besides two epic poems of most noble argument, four tragedies, of which I had formed the plan I had schemed, too, many works in prose, on subjects the most lofty, and most useful to human life, I had designed to write philosophy with eloquence, in such a manner that there might remain of me an eternal memory in the world Alas! I had expected to close my life with glory and renown, but now, oppressed by the burden of so many calamities, I have lost every prospect of reputation and of honour The fear of perpetual imprisonment increases my melancholy, the indignities which I suffer augment it, and the squalor of my beard, my hair, and habit, the sordidness and filth, exceedingly annoy me Sure am I, that, if she who so little has corresponded to my attachment—if she saw me in such a state, and in such affliction—she would have some compassion on me"—Opere, t. v. p. 387]

And hark ! the lash and the increasing howl,
 And the half-inarticulate blasphemy !
 There be some here with woe than fiend's foul,
 Some who do still goad on the o'er-labour'd mind,
 And dim the little light that's left behind
 With needless torture, as their tyrant will
 Is wound up to the lust of doing ill (1)
 With these and with their victims am I class'd,
 'Mid sounds and sights like these long years have pass'd,
 'Mid sights and sounds like these my life may close
 So let it be—for then I shall repose

IV

I have been patient, let me be so yet,
 I had forgotten half I would forget,
 But it revives—Oh ! would it were my lot
 To be forgetful as I am forgot !—
 Feel I not wroth with those who bade me dwell
 In this vast lazaret-house of many woes ?
 Where laughter is not mirth, nor thought the mind,
 Nor words a language, nor ev'n men mankind,
 Where cries reply to curses, shrieks to blows,
 And each is tortured in his separate hell—
 For we are crowded in our solitudes—
 Many, but each divided by the wall,
 Which echoes Madness in her babbling moods,—

(1) [For nearly the first year of his confinement Tasso endured all the horrors of a solitary cell, and was under the care of a gaoler whose chief virtue, although he was a poet and a man of letters, was a cruel obedience to the commands of his prince. His name was Agostino Mosti. Tasso says of him, in a letter to his sister, "ed usa meco ogni sorte di rigore ed inumanità" — HOBHOUSE.]

While all can hear, none heed his neighbour's call—
 None ! save that One, the veriest wretch of all, <sup>(1)</sup>
 Who was not made to be the mate of these,
 Nor bound between Distraction and Disease
 Feel I not wroth with those who placed me here ?
 Who have debased me in the minds of men,
 Debarring me the usage of my own,
 Blighting my life in best of its career,
 Branding my thoughts as things to shun and fear ?
 Would I not pay them back these pangs again,
 And teach them inward Sorrow's stifled groan ?
 The struggle to be calm, and cold distress,
 Which undermines our Stoical success ?
 No ! — still too proud to be vindictive, — I
 Have pardon'd princes' insults, and would die.
 Yes, Sister of my Sovereign ! for thy sake
 I weed all bitterness from out my breast,
 It hath no business where thou art a guest,
 Thy brother hates—but I can not detest, <sup>(2)</sup>
 Thou pitiest not—but I can not forsake

(1) [This fearful picture is finely contrasted with that which Tasso draws of himself in youth, when nature and meditation were forming his wild, romantic, and impassioned genius. Indeed, the great excellence of the "Lament" consists in the ebbing and flowing of the noble prisoner's soul, — his feelings often come suddenly from afar off, — sometimes gentle airs are breathing, and then all at once arise the storms and tempest, — the gloom, though black as night while it endures, gives way to frequent bursts of radiance, — and when the wild strain is closed, our pity and commiseration are blended with a sustaining and elevating sense of the grandeur and majesty of his character — WILSON ]

(2) [Not long after his imprisonment, Tasso appealed to the mercy of Alfonso, in a canzone of great beauty, couched in terms so respectful and pathetic, as must have moved, it might be thought, the severest bosom to relent. The heart of Alfonso was, however, impregnable to the appeal, and Tasso, in another ode to the princesses, whose pity he invoked in the name of their own mother, who had herself known, if not the like horrors,

V

Look on a love which knows not to despair, <sup>(1)</sup>
 But all unquench'd is still my better part,
 Dwelling deep in my shut and silent heart
 As dwells the gather'd lightning in its cloud,
 Encompass'd with its dark and rolling shroud,
 Till struck,—forth flies the all-ethereal dart!
 And thus at the collision of thy name
 The vivid thought still flashes through my frame,
 And for a moment all things as they were Flit by me,—they are gone—I am the same
 And yet my love without ambition grew,
 I knew thy state, my station, and I knew
 A Princess was no love-mate for a paid,
 I told it not, I breathed it not, it was Sufficient to itself, its own reward,
 And if my eyes reveal'd it, they, alas!
 Were punish'd by the silentness of thine
 And yet I did not venture to repine
 Thou wert to me a crystal-guided shrine,
 Worshipp'd at holy distance, and around
 Hallow'd and meekly kiss'd the saintly ground,

---

the like solitude of imprisonment, and bitterness of soul “Considered merely as poems,” says Black, “these canzoni are extremely beautiful, but, if we contemplate them as the productions of a mind diseased, they form important documents in the history of man”—Life of Tasso, vol. II p. 408.]

(1) [As to the indifference which the Princess is said to have exhibited for the misfortunes of Tasso, and the little effort she made to obtain his liberty, this is one of the negative arguments founded on an hypothesis that may be easily destroyed by a thousand others equally plausible. Was not the Princess anxious to avoid her own ruin. In taking too warm an interest for the poet, did she not risk destroying herself, without saving him?—FOSCOLO.]

Not for thou wert a princess, but that Love
 Had robed thee with a glory, and array'd
 Thy lineaments in beauty that dismay'd —
 Oh ! not dismay'd — but awed, like One above ,
 And in that sweet severity there was
 A something which all softness did surpass —
 I know not how — thy genius master'd mine —
 My star stood still before thee — if it were Presumptuous thus to love without design,
 That sad fatality hath cost me dear ,
 But thou art dearest still, and I should be Fit for this cell, which wrongs me — but for thee
 The very love which lock'd me to my chain
 Hath lighten'd half its weight , and for the rest,
 Though heavy, lent me vigour to sustain,
 And look to thee with undivided breast,
 And foil the ingenuity of Pain (1)

VI

It is no marvel—from my very birth
 My soul was drunk with love, — which did pervade
 And mingle with whate'er I saw on earth ,
 Of objects all inanimate I made
 Idols, and out of wild and lonely flowers,
 And rocks, whereby they grew, a paradise,
 Where I did lay me down within the shade
 Of waving trees, and dream'd uncounted hours,
 Though I was chid for wandering, and the Wise

(1) [Tasso's profound and unconquerable love for Leonora, sustaining itself without hope throughout years of darkness and solitude, breathes a moral dignity over all his sentiments, and we feel the strength and power of his noble spirit in the un-upbraiding devotedness of his passion —
 WILSON ]

Shook then white aged heads o'er me, and said
Of such materials wretched men were made,
And such a traitor boy would end in woe,
And that the only lesson was a blow, —
And then they smote me, and I did not weep,
But cursed them in my heart, and to my haunt
Return'd and wept alone, and dream'd again
The visions which arise without a sleep
And with my years my soul began to pant
With feelings of strange tumult and soft pain ,
And the whole heart exhaled into One Want,
But undefined and wandering, till the day
I found the thing I sought—and that was thee ,
And then I lost my being all to be Absorb'd in thine—the world was past away —
Thou didst annihilate the earth to me !

VII

I loved all Solitude—but little thought
To spend I know not what of life, remote
From all communion with existence, save
The maniac and his tyrant,—had I been Their fellow, many years ere this had seen
My mind like theirs corrupted to its grave, <sup>(1)</sup>
But who hath seen me wither, or heard me rave?
Perchance in such a cell we suffer more
Than the wreck'd sailor on his desert shore,
The world is all before him—mine is here,
Scarce twice the space they must accord my bier

(1) [MS — "My mind like theirs {corrupted or adapted} to its grave" — E]

What though he perish, he may lift his eye
 And with a dying glance upbraid the sky—
 I will not raise my own in such reproof,
 Although 'tis clouded by y dungeon roof

VIII

Yet do I feel at times my mind decline,<sup>(1)</sup>
 But with a sense of its decay — I see
 Unwonted lights along my prison shine,
 And a strange demon, who is vexing me
 With pilfering pranks and petty pains, below
 The feeling of the healthful and the free,
 But much to One, who long hath suffer'd so,
 Sickness of heart, and narrowness of place,
 And all that may be borne, or can debase
 I thought mine enemies had been but Man,
 But Spirits may be leagued with them—all Earth
 Abandons—Heaven forgets me,—in the dearth
 Of such defence the Powers of Evil can,
 It may be, tempt me further,—and prevail
 Against the outworn creature they assail
 Why in this furnace is my spirit proved
 Like steel in tempering fire? because I loved?

(1) ["Nor do I lament," wrote Tasso, shortly after his confinement, "that my heart is deluged with almost constant misery, that my head is always heavy and often painful, that my sight and hearing are much impaired, and that all my frame is become spare and meagre, but, passing all this with a short sigh, what I would bewail is the infirmity of my mind. My mind sleeps, not thinks, my fancy is chill, and forms no pictures, my negligent senses will no longer furnish the images of things, my hand is sluggish in writing, and my pen seems as if it shrunk from the office. I feel as if I were chained in all my operations, and as if I were overcome by an unwonted numbness and oppressive stupor"—Opere, t. viii p. 258.]

Because I loved what not to love, and see,
Was more or less than mortal, and than me

IX

I once was quick in feeling — that is o'er, —
My scars are callous, or I should have dash'd
My brain against these bars, as the sun flash'd
In mockery through them, — if I bear and bore
The much I have recounted, and the more
Which hath no words, — 'tis that I would not die
And sanction with self-slaughter the dull lie
Which snared me here, and with the brand of shame
Stamp Madness deep into my memory,
And woo Compassion to a blighted name,
Sealing the sentence which my foes proclaim
No — it shall be immortal! — and I make
A future temple of my present cell,
Which nations yet shall visit for my sake <sup>(1)</sup>
While thou, Ferrara! when no longer dwell
The ducal chiefs within thee, shalt fall down,
And crumbling piecemeal view thy heartless halls,
A poet's wreath shall be thine only crown, —
A poet's dungeon thy most far renown,
While strangers wonder o'er thy unpeopled walls <sup>(2)</sup>

(1) [MS — “ Which { nations yet } shall visit for my sake ” — E.]

(2) [Those who indulge in the dreams of earthly retribution will observe, that the cruelty of Alfonso was not left without its recompense, even in his own person. He survived the affliction of his subjects and of his dependants, who deserted him at his death, and suffered his body to be interred without princely or decent honours. His last wishes were neglected, his testament cancelled. His kinsman, Don Caesar, shrunk from the excommunication of the Vatican, and, after a short struggle, or rather suspense, Ferrara passed away for ever from the dominion of the house of Este. — HOBHOUSE.]

And thou, Leonora ! — thou — who wert ashamed
 That such as I could love — who blush'd to hear
 To less than monarchs that thou couldst be dear,
 Go ! tell thy brother, that my heart, untamed
 By grief, years, weariness — and it may be A taint of that he would impute to me —
 From long infection of a den like this,
 Where the mind rots congenial with the abyss,
 Adores thee still, — and add — that when the towers
 And battlements which guard his joyous hours
 Of banquet, dance, and revel, are forgot,
 Or left untended in a dull repose,
 This — this — shall be a consecrated spot !
 But Thou — when all that Birth and Beauty throws
 Of magic round thee is extinct — shalt have
 One half the laurel which o'er shades my grave (1)

(1) [In July, 1586, after a confinement of more than seven years, Tasso was released from his dungeon. In the hope of receiving his mother's dowry, and of again beholding his sister Cornelia, he shortly after visited Naples, where his presence was welcomed with every demonstration of esteem and admiration. Being on a visit at Mola di Gaeta, he received the following remarkable tribute of respect. Marco di Scirra, the notorious captain of a numerous troop of banditti, hearing where the great poet was, sent to compliment him, and offered him not only a free passage, but protection by the way, and assured him that he and his followers would be proud to execute his orders. See Manso, Vita del Tasso, p. 219. Mr Rogers thus introduces the incident into his description of the life, "fearful and full of change," of the mountain robber —

"Time was, the trade was nobler, if not honest,
 When they that robb'd were men of better faith
 Than kings or pontiffs, when, such reverence
 The poet drew among the woods and wilds,
 A voice was heard, that never bade to spare,
 Crying aloud, 'Hence to the distant hills'
 Tasso approaches, he, whose song beguiles
 The day of half its hours, whose sorcery
 Dazzles the sense, turning our forest glades
 To lists that blaze with gorgeous armoury,

No power in death can tear our names apart,
 As none in life could rend thee from my heart <sup>(1)</sup>
 Yes, Leonora! it shall be our fate
 To be entwined for ever — but too late! <sup>(2)</sup>

Our mountain caves to regal palaces
 Hence, nor descend till he and his are gone
 Let him fear nothing! — E]

(1) [MS — “As none in life could  $\left\{ \begin{smallmatrix} \text{wring} \\ \text{wrench} \\ \text{rend} \end{smallmatrix} \right\}$  thee from my heart” — E]

(2) [The “pleasures of imagination” have been explained and justified by Addison in prose, and by Akenside in verse but there are moments of real life when its miseries and its necessities seem to overpower and destroy them. The history of mankind, however, furnishes proofs, that no bodily suffering, no adverse circumstances, operating on our material nature, will extinguish the spirit of imagination. Perhaps there is no instance of this so very affecting and so very sublime as the case of Tasso. They who have seen the dark, horror striking dungeon hole at Ferrara, in which he was confined seven years under the imputation of madness, will have had this truth impressed upon their hearts in a manner never to be erased. In this vault, of which the sight makes the hardest heart shudder, the poet employed himself in finishing and correcting his immortal epic poem. Lord Byron’s “Lament” on this subject is as sublime and profound a lesson in morality, and in the pictures of the recesses of the human soul, as it is a production most eloquent, most pathetic, most vigorous, and most elevating among the gifts of the Muse. The bosom which is not touched with it — the fancy which is not warmed, — the understanding which is not enlightened and exalted by it, is not fit for human intercourse. If Lord Byron had written nothing but this, to deny him the praise of a grand poet would have been flagrant injustice or gross stupidity. — SIR EGERTON BRIDGES.]

BEPPPO,
A VENETIAN STORY.

Rosalind Farewell, Monsieur Traveller Look, you lisp, and wear strange suits visible all the benefits of your own country, be out of love with your Nativity, and almost chide God for making you that countenance you are, or I will scarce think that you have swam in a Gondola

As You Like It, Act IV Sc 1

Annotation of the Commentators

That is, been at Venice, which was much visited by the young English gentlemen of those times, and was then what Paris is now — the seat of all dissoluteness S A (1)

(1) [Roger Ascham, Queen Elizabeth's tutor, says, in his "School-master" — "Although I was only nine days at Venice, I saw, in that little time, more liberty to sin, than ever I heard tell of in the city of London in nine years" — E]

[Beppo was written at Venice, in October, 1817, and acquired great popularity immediately on its publication in the May of the following year. Lord Byron's letters show that he attached very little importance to it at the time. He was not aware that he had opened a new vein, in which his genius was destined to work out some of its brightest triumphs. "I have written," he says to Mr Murray, "a poem humorous, in or after the excellent manner of Mr Whistlecraft, and founded on a Venetian anecdote which amused me. It is called Beppo — the short name for Giuseppe, — that is, the Joe of the Italian Joseph. It has politics and ferocity." Again — "Whistlecraft is my immediate model, but Berni is the father of that kind of writing, which, I think, suits our language, too, very well. We shall see by this experiment. It will, at any rate, show that I can write cheerfully, and repel the charge of monotony and mannerism." He wished Mr Murray to accept of Beppo as a free gift, or, as he chose to express it, "as part of the contract for Canto Fourth of Childe Harold," adding, however, — "if it pleases, you shall have more in the same mood, for I know the Italian way of life, and, as for the verse and the passions, I have them still in tolerable vigour."

The Right Honourable John Hookham Frere has, then, by Lord Byron's confession, the merit of having first introduced the Bernesque style into our language, but his performance, entitled "Prospectus and Specimen of an intended National Work, by William and Robert Whistlecraft, of Stowmarket, in Suffolk, Harness and Collar Makers, intended to comprise the most interesting Particulars relating to King Arthur and his Round Table," though it delighted all elegant and learned readers, obtained at the time little notice from the public at large, and is already almost forgotten. For the causes of this failure, about which Mr Rose and others have written at some length, it appears needless to look further than the last sentence we have been quoting from the letters of the author of the more successful Beppo. Whistlecraft had the verse — it had also the humour, the wit, and even the poetry of the Italian model, but it wanted the life of actual manners, and the strength of stirring passions. Mr Frere had forgot, or was, with all his genius, unfit to profit by remembering, that the poets, whose style he was adopting, always made their style appear a secondary matter. They never failed to embroider their merriment on the texture of a really interesting story. Lord Byron perceived this, and avoiding his immediate master's one fatal error, and at least equalling him in the excellences which he did display, engaged at once the sympathy of readers of every class, and became substantially the founder of a new species of English poetry.

In justice to Mr Frere, however, whose "Specimen" has long been out of print, we must take this opportunity of showing how completely, as to style and versification, he had anticipated Beppo and Don Juan. In the introductions to his cantos, and in various detached passages of mere description, he had produced precisely the sort of effect at which Lord Byron aimed in what we may call the secondary, or merely ornamental, parts of his Comic Epic. For example, this is the beginning of Whistlecraft's first canto —

" I've often wish'd that I could write a book,
Such as all English people might peruse,
I never should regret the pains it took,
That's just the sort of fame that I should choose
To sail about the world like Captain Cook,
I'd sling a cot up for my favourite Muse,
And we'd take verses out to Demarara,
To New South Wales, and up to Niagara.

" Poets consume exciseable commodities,
They raise the nation's spirit when victorious,
They drive an export trade in whims and oddities,
Making our commerce and revenue glorious,
As an industrious and pains taking body 'tis
That Poets should be reckon'd mentorious
And therefore I submissively propose
To erect one Board for Verse and one for Prose

" Princes protecting Sciences and Art
I've often seen, in copper plate and print,
I never saw them elsewhere, for my part,
And therefore I conclude there's nothing in 't

But every body knows the Regent's heart,
 I trust he won't reject a well-meant hint,
 Each Board to have twelve members, with a seat
 To bring them in per ann five hundred neat —

“ From Princes I descend to the Nobility
 In former times all persons of high stations,
 Lords, Baronets, and Persons of gentility,
 Paid twenty guineas for the dedications
 This practice was attended with utility,
 The patrons lived to future generations,
 The poets lived by their industrious earning, —
 So men alive and dead could live by Learning

“ Then, twenty guineas was a little fortune,
 Now, we must starve unless the times should mend
 Our poets now-a days are deem'd importune
 If their addresses are diffusely penn'd,
 Most fashionable authors make a short one
 To their own wife, or child, or private friend,
 To show their independence, I suppose,
 And they may do for Gentlemen like those

“ Lastly, the common people I beseech —
 Dear People! if you think my verses clever,
 Preserve with care your noble Parts of speech,
 And take it as a maxim to endeavour
 To talk as your good mothers used to teach,
 And then these lines of mine may last for ever,
 And don't confound the language of the nation
 With long tail'd words in osity and ation

“ I think that Poets (whether Whig or Tory)
 (Whether they go to meeting or to church)
 Should study to promote their country's glory
 With patriotic, diligent research,
 That children yet unborn may learn the story,
 With grammars, dictionaries, canes, and birch
 It stands to reason — This was Homer's plan,
 And we must do — like him — the best we can “ Madoc and Marmion, and many more,

 Are out in print, and most of them have sold
 Perhaps together they may make a score,
 Richard the First has had his story told,
 But there were Lords and Princes long before,
 That had behaved themselves like warriors bold
 Among the rest there was the great KING ARTHUR,
 What hero's fame was ever carried farther ?”

The following description of King Arthur's Christmas at Carlisle is equally meritorious —

“THE GREAT KING ARTHUR made a sumptuous Feast,
And held his Royal Christmas at Carlisle,
And thither came the Vassals, most and least,
From every corner of this British Isle,
And all were entertain'd, both man and beast,
According to their rank, in proper style,
The steeds were fed and litter'd in the stable,
The ladies and the knights sat down to table

“The bill of fare (as you may well suppose)
Was suited to those plentiful old times,
Before our modern luxuries arose,
With truffles and ragouts, and various crimes,
And therefore, from the original in prose
I shall arrange the catalogue in rhymes
They served up salmon, venison, and wild boars
By hundreds, and by dozens, and by scores

“Hogsheads of honey, kilderkins of mustard, <sup>n</sup>
Muttons, and fatted beeves, and bacon swine,
Herons and bitterns, peacock, swan and bustard,
Teal, mallard, pigeons, widgeons, and in fine
Plum puddings, pancakes, apple pies and custard
And therewithal they drank good Gascon wine,
With mead, and ale, and cyder of our own,
For porter, punch, and negus were not known

“The noise and uproar of the scullery tribe,
All pilfering and scrambling in their calling,
Was past all powers of language to describe —
The din of manful oaths and female squalling
The sturdy porter, huddling up his bibe,
And then at random breaking heads and bawling,
Outcries, and cries of order, and confusions,
Made a confusion beyond all confusions,

“Beggars and vagabonds, blind, lame, and sturdy,
Minstrels and singers with their various airs,
The pipe, the tabor, and the hurdy gurdy,
Jugglers and mountebanks with apes and bears,
Continued from the first day to the third day,
An uproar like ten thousand Smithfield fairs,
There were wild beasts and foreign birds and creatures,
And Jews and Foreigners with foreign features

- “ All sorts of people there were seen together,
 All sorts of characters, all sorts of dresses,
 The fool with fox's tail and peacock's feather,
 Pilgrims, and penitents, and grave burgesses,
 The country people with their coats of leather,
 Vintners and victuallers with cans and mescas,
 Grooms, archers, varlets, falconers and yeomen,
 Damsels and waiting maids, and waiting women
- “ But the profane, indelicate amours,
 The vulgar, unenlighten'd conversation
 Of minstrels, menials, courtizans, and boors,
 (Although appropriate to their meaner station)
 Would certainly revolt a taste like yours,
 Therefore I shall omit the calculation
 Of all the curses, oaths, and cuts, and stabs,
 Occasion'd by their dice, and drink, and drabs
- “ We must take care in our poetic cruise,
 And never hold a single tack too long,
 Therefore my versatile, ingenious Muse,
 Take leave of this illiterate, low bred throng,
 Intending to present superior view,
 Which to genteeler company belong,
 And show the higher orders of society
 Behaving with politeness and propriety
- “ And certainly they say, for fine behaving
 King Arthur's Court has never had its match,
 True point of honour, without pride or braving,
 Strict etiquette for ever on the watch
 Their manners were refined and perfect — saving
 Some modern graces, which they could not catch,
 As spitting through the teeth, and driving stages,
 Accomplishments reserved for distant ages
- “ They look'd a manly, generous generation,
 Beards, shoulders, eyebrows, broad, and square, and thick,
 Their accents firm and loud in conversation,
 Their eyes and gestures eager, sharp, and quick,
 Showed them prepared, on proper provocation,
 To give the lie, pull noses, stab, and kick,
 And for that very reason, it is said,
 They were so very courteous and well bred.
- “ The ladies look'd of an heroic race —
 At first a general likeness struck your eye,
 Tall figures, open features, oval face,
 Large eyes, with ample eyebrows arch'd and high,

Their manners had an odd, peculiar grace,
 Neither repulsive, affable, nor shy,
 Majestical, reserved, and somewhat sullen,
 Their dresses partly silk, and partly woollen ”

The little snatches of critical quizzing introduced in Whistlecraft are perfect in their way. Take, for example, this good humoured parody on one of the most magnificent passages in Wordsworth —

“ In castles and in courts Ambition dwells,
 But not in castles or in courts alone,
 She breathed a wish, throughout those sacred cells,
 For bells of larger size, and louder tone,
 Giants abominate the sound of bells,
 And soon the fierce antipathy was shown,
 The tinkling and the jingling, and the clangor,
 Roused their irrational, gigantic anger

“ Unhappy mortals ! ever blind to fate !        6
 Unhappy Monks ! you see no danger nigh,
 Exulting in their sound, and size, and weight,
 From morn till noon the merry peal you ply
 The belfry rocks, your bosoms are elate,
 Your spirits with the ropes and pulleys fly,
 Tired, but transported, panting, pulling, hauling,
 Ramping and stamping, overjoy'd and hawling

“ Meanwhile the solemn mountains that surrounded
 The silent valley where the convent lay,
 With tintinnabular uproar were astounded,
 When the first peal burst forth at break of day
 Feeling their granite ears severely wounded,
 They scarce knew what to think, or what to say,
 And (though large mountains commonly conceal
 Their sentiments, dissembling what they feel,

“ Yet) Cader-Gibbin from his cloudy throne
 To huge Loblommon gave an intimation
 Of this strange rumour, with an awful tone,
 Thund'ring his deep surprise and indignation,
 The lesser hills, in language of their own,
 Discuss'd the topic by reverberation,
 Discoursing with their echoes all day long,
 Their only conversation was, ‘ ding-dong ’ ”

Mr Rose has a very elegant essay on Whistlecraft, in his "Thoughts and Recollections by One of the last Century," which thus concludes —

"Beppo, which had a story, and which pointed but one way, met with signal and universal success, while 'The Monks and the Giants' have been little appreciated, by the majority of readers. Yet those who will only laugh upon a sufficient warrant, may, on analysing this bravura poem, find legitimate matter for their mirth. The want of meaning cannot certainly be objected to it, with reason, for it contains a deep substratum of sense, and does not exhibit a character which has not, or might not, have its parallel in nature. I remember at the time this poem was published, (which was, when the French monarchy seemed endangered by the vacillating conduct of Louis XVIII, who, under the guidance of successive ministers, was trimming between the loyalists and the liberals, apparently thinking that civility and conciliation was a remedy for all evils,) a friend dared me to prove my assertion, and, by way of a text, referred me to the character of the crippled abbot, under whose direction,

'The convent was all going to the devil,
While he, poor creature, thought himself beloved
For saying handsome things, and being civil,
Wheeling about as he was pull'd and shov'd.'

"The obvious application of this was made by me to Louis XVIII and if it was not the intention of the author to designate him in particular, the applicability of the passage to the then state of France, and her ruler, shows, at least, the intrinsic truth of the description. Take, in the same way, the character of Sir Tristram, and we shall find its elements, if not in one, in different living persons

'Songs, music, languages, and many a lay
Asturian, or Armoric, Irish, Basque,
His ready memory seized and bore away,
And ever when the ladies chose to ask,
Sir Tristram was prepared to sing and play,
Not like a minstrel, earnest at his task,
But with a sportive, careless, easy style,
As if he seem'd to mock himself the while

'His ready wit, and rambling education,
With the congenial influence of his stars,
Had taught him all the arts of conversation,
All games of skill, and stratagems of wars,
His birth, it seems, by Merlin's calculation,
Was under Venus, Mercury, and Mars
His mind with all their attributes was mix'd,
And, like those planets, wand'ring and unfix'd.'

“ Who can read this description, without recognising in it the portraits (flattering portraits, perhaps) of two military characters well known in society ? ”

The reader will find a copious criticism on Whistlecraft, from the pen of Ugo Foscolo, in the Quarterly Review, vol xxi — E ]

B E P P O

I

'Tis known, at least it should be, that throughout
All countries of the Catholic persuasion,
Some weeks before Shrove Tuesday comes about,
The people take their fill of recreation,
And buy repentance, ere they grow devout,
However high then rank, or low then station,
With fiddling, feasting, dancing, drinking, masquing,
And other things which may be had for asking

II

The moment night with dusky mantle covers
The skies (and the more duskily the better),
The time less liked by husbands than by lovers
Begins, and prudery flings aside her fetter,
And gaiety on restless tiptoe hovers,
Giggling with all the gallants who beset her,
And there are songs and quavers, roaring, humming,
Guitars, and every other sort of summing.

III

And there are dresses splendid, but fantastical,
 Masks of all times and nations, Turks and Jews,
 And harlequins and clowns, with feats gymnastical,
 Greeks, Romans, Yankee-doodles, and Hindoos,
 All kinds of dress, except the ecclesiastical,
 All people, as their fancies hit, may choose,
 But no one in these parts may quiz the clergy,— Therefore take heed, ye Freethinkers ! I charge ye

IV

You'd better walk about begut with briars,
 Instead of coat and smallclothes, than put on
 A single stitch reflecting upon friars,
 Although you swore it only was in fun,
 They'd haul you o'er the coals, and stir the fires
 Of Phlegethon with every mother's son,
 Nor say one mass to cool the caldron's bubble
 That boil'd your bones, unless you paid them double

V

But saving this, you may put on whate'er
 You like by way of doublet, cape, or cloak,
 Such as in Monmouth-street, or in Rag Fair,
 Would rig you out in seriousness or joke,
 And even in Italy such places are,
 With prettier name in softer accents spoke,
 For, bating Covent Garden, I can hit on
 No place that's call'd "Piazza" in Great Britain (1)

(1) [MS—"For, bating Covent Garden, I can't hit on A place," &c.]

VI

This feast is named the Carnival, <sup>(1)</sup> which being Interpreted implies "farewell to flesh"
 So call'd, because the name and thing agreeing,
 Through Lent they live on fish both salt and fresh
 But why they usher Lent with so much glee in,
 Is more than I can tell, although I guess
 'Tis as we take a glass with friends at parting,
 In the stage-coach or packet, just at starting

VII

And thus they bid farewell to canal dishes,
 And solid meats, and highly spiced ragouts,
 To live for forty days on ill-dress'd fishes,
 Because they have no sauces to their stews,

(1) ["The Carnival," says Mr. Rose, "though it is gay or duller, according to the genius of the nations which celebrate it, is, in its general character, nearly the same all over the peninsula. The beginning is like any other season, towards the middle you begin to meet masques and mummers in sunshine in the last fifteen days the plot thickens, and during the three last all is hurly burly. But to paint these, which may be almost considered as a separate festival, I must avail myself of the words of Messrs. William and Thomas Whistlecraft, in whose 'Prospectus and Specimen of an intended National Work' I find the description ready made to my hand, observing that, besides the ordinary dramatic persons,—

'Beggars and vagabonds, blind, lame, and sturdy,
 Minstrels and singers, with their various airs,
 The pipe, the tabor, and the hurdy-gurdy,
 Jugglers and mountebanks, with apes and bears,
 Continue, from the first day to the third day,
 An uproar like ten thousand Smithfield fairs'

The shops are shut, all business is at a stand, and the drunken cries heard at night afford a clear proof of the pleasures to which these days of leisure are dedicated. These holidays may surely be reckoned amongst the secondary causes which contribute to the indolence of the Italian, since they reconcile this to his conscience, as being of religious institution. Now there is, perhaps, no offence which is so unproportionably punished by conscience as that of indolence. With the wicked man, it is an intermittent disease, with the idle man, it is a chronic one"—Letters from the North of Italy vol. ii. p. 171.]

A thing which causes many "poohs" and "pishes,"
 And several oaths (which would not suit the Muse),

From travellers accustom'd from a boy
 To eat their salmon, at the least, with soy,

VIII

And therefore humbly I would recommend
 "The curious in fish-sauce," before they cross
 The sea to bid their cook, or wife, or friend,
 Walk or ride to the Strand, and buy in gross (Or if set out beforehand, these may send By any means least liable to loss),
 Ketchup, Soy, Chili-vinegar, and Harvey,
 Or, by the Lord! a Lent will well nigh starve ye,

IX

That is to say, if your religion's Roman,
 And you at Rome would do as Romans do,
 According to the proverb,—although no man,
 If foreign, is obliged to fast, and you,
 If Protestant, or sickly, or a woman,
 Would rather dine in sin on a ragout—
 Dine and be d—d! I dont mean to be coarse,
 But that's the penalty, to say no worse.

X

Of all the places where the Carnival
 Was most facetious in the days of yore,
 For dance, and song, and serenade, and ball,
 And masque, and mime, and mystery, and more

Than I have time to tell now, or at all,
 Venice the bell from every city bore,—
 And at the moment when I fix my story,
 That sea-born city was in all her glory.

XI

They've pretty faces yet, those same Venetians, Black eyes, arch'd brows, and sweet expressions still,
 Such as of old were copied from the Grecians,
 In ancient arts by moderns mimick'd ill,
 And like so many Venuses of Titian's (The best's at Florence<sup>(1)</sup>)—see it, if ye will,)
 They look when leaning over the balcony,
 Or stepp'd from out a picture by Gioigione,<sup>(2)</sup>

XII

Whose tints are truth and beauty at then best,
 And when you to Manfimi's palace go,<sup>(3)</sup>
 That picture (howsoever fine the rest)
 Is loveliest to my mind of all the show,

(1) [“ At Florence I remained but a day, having a hurry for Rome. However, I went to the two galleries, from which one returns drunk with beauty, but there are sculpture and painting, which, for the first time, gave me an idea of what people mean by their cant, about those two most artificial of the arts. What struck me most were,—the mistress of Raphael, a portrait, the mistress of Titian, a portrait, a Venus of Titian, in the Medici gallery—the Venus, Canova's Venus, also in the other gallery,” &c — B Letters, 1817 ]

(2) [“ I know nothing of pictures myself, and care almost as little, but to me there are none like the Venetian—above all, Gioigione. I remember well his Judgment of Solomon, in the Mari culchi gallery in Bologna. The real mother is beautiful, exquisitely beautiful.” — B Letters, 1820 ]

(3) [The following is Lord Byron's account of his visit to this palace, in April, 1817 — “ To day, I have been over the Manfimi palace, famous for

It may perhaps be also to your zest,
 And that's the cause I rhyme upon it so
 'Tis but a portrait of his son, and wife,
 And self, but such a woman ! love in life !<sup>(1)</sup>

XIII

Love in full life and length, not love ideal,
 No, nor ideal beauty, that fine name,
 But something better still, so very real,
 That the sweet model must have been the same,
 A thing that you would purchase, beg, or steal,
 Wer't not impossible, besides a shame
 The face recalls some face, as 'twere with pain,
 You once have seen, but ne'er will see again,

its pictures Amongst them, there is a portrait of Ariosto, by Titian, surpassing all my anticipation of the power of painting or human expression it is the poetry of portrait, and the portrait of poetry There was also one of some learned lady centuries old, whose name I forget, but whose features must always be remembered I never saw greater beauty, or sweetness, or wisdom, — it is the kind of face to go mad for, because it cannot walk out of its frame There is also a famous dead Christ and live Apostles, for which Bonaparte offered in vain five thousand louis, and of which, though it is a capo d'opera of Titian, as I am no connoisseur, I saw little, and thought less, except of one figure in it There are ten thousand others, and some very fine Giorgiones amongst them There is an original Laura and Petrarch, very hideous both Petrarch has not only the dress, but the features and air of an old woman, and Laura looks by no means like a young one, or a pretty one What struck most in the general collection, was the extreme resemblance of the style of the female faces in the mass of pictures, so many centuries or generations old, to those you see and meet every day among the existing Italians The Queen of Cyprus and Giorgione's wife, particularly the latter, are Venetians as it were of yesterday, the same eyes and expression, and, to my mind, there is none finer You must recollect, however, that I know nothing of painting, and that I detest it, unless it reminds me of something I have seen, or think it possible to see"]

(1) [This appears to be an incorrect description of the picture, as, according to Vasari and others, Giorgione never was married, and died young — E.]

XIV

One of those forms which flit by us, when we Are young, and fix our eyes on every face,
And, oh! the loveliness at times we see
In momentary gliding, the soft grace,
The youth, the bloom, the beauty which agree,
In many a nameless being we retrace,
Whose course and home we knew not, nor shall know,
Like the lost Pleiad (1) seen no more below

XV

I said that like a picture by Giorgione
Venetian women were, and so they are,
Particularly seen from a balcony,
(For beauty's sometimes best set off afar)
And there, just like a heroine of Goldoni,
They peep from out the blind, or o'er the bar,
And truth to say they're mostly very pretty,
And rather like to show it, more's the pity!

XVI

For glances beget ogles, ogles sighs,
Sighs wishes, wishes words, and words a letter,
Which flies on wings of light-heel'd Mercuries,
Who do such things because they know no better,
And then, God knows, what mischief may arise,
When love links two young people in one fetter,
Vile assignations, and adulterous beds,
Elopements, broken vows, and hearts, and heads

(1) "Quæ septem dici sæ tamen esse solent" — OVID

XVII.

Shakspeare described the sex in Desdemona

As very fair, but yet suspect in fame, <sup>(1)</sup>

And to this day from Venice to Verona

Such matters may be probably the same,

Except that since those times was never known a

Husband whom mere suspicion could inflame

To suffocate a wife no more than twenty,

Because she had a "cavalier servente"

XVIII

Their jealousy (if they are ever jealous)

Is of a fair complexion altogether,

Not like that sooty devil of Othello's

Which smothers women in a bed of feather,

But worthier of these much more jolly fellows,

When weary of the matrimonial tether

His head for such a wife no mortal bothers,

But takes at once another, or another's <sup>(2)</sup>

XIX

Didst ever see a Gondola? For fear

You should not, I'll describe it you exactly

'Tis a long cover'd boat that's common here,

Carved at the prow, built lightly, but compactly,

(1)

[ "Look to t

In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks

They dare not show their husbands, their best conscience

Is — not to leave undone, but keep unknown" — Othello ]

(2) [ "Jealousy is not the order of the day in Venice, and daggers are out of fashion, while duels on love matters are unknown — at least, with the husband. " — B Letters ]

Row'd by two rowers, each call'd "Gondolier,"

It glides along the water looking blackly,
Just like a coffin clapt in a canoe,
Where none can make out what you say or do

XX

And up and down the long canals they go,
And under the Rialto <sup>(1)</sup> shoot along,
By night and day, all paces, swift or slow,
And round the theatres, a sable throng,
They wait in their dusk liveries of woe, —
But not to them do woful things belong,
For sometimes they contain a deal of fun,
Like mourning-coaches when the funeral's done

XXI

But to my story — 'Twas some years ago,
It may be thirty, forty, more or less,
The carnival was at its height, and so
Were all kinds of buffoonery and dress,

(1) [An English abbreviation. Rialto is the name not of the bridge, but of the island from which it is called, and the Venetians say, il ponte di Rialto, as we say Westminster Bridge. In that island is the Exchange, and I have often walked there as on classic ground. In the days of Antonio and Bassanio it was second to none. "I sotto portuchi," says Sansovino, writing in 1580, "sono ogni giorno frequentati da i mercatanti Fiorentini, Genovesi, Milanesi, Spagnuoli, Turchi, e d'altre nationi diverse del mondo, i quali vi concorrono in tant copia, che questa piazza è annoverata fra le prime dell' universo." It was there that the Christian held discourse with the Jew, and Shylock refers to it, when he says,

"Signor Antonio, many a time and oft,
In the Rialto, you have rated me"

'Andr'amo à Rialto' — 'I ora di Rialto' — were on every tongue, and continue so to the present day — ROGER.]

A certain lady went to see the show,
Her real name I know not, nor can guess,
And so we'll call her Laura, if you please,
Because it slips into my verse with ease

XXII

She was not old, nor young, nor at the years
Which certain people call a "certain age,"
Which yet the most uncertain age appears,
Because I never heard, nor could engage
A person yet by prayers, or bribes, or tears,
To name, define by speech, or write on page,
The period meant precisely by that word,—
Which surely is exceedingly absurd .

XXIII

Laura was blooming still, had made the best
Of time, and time return'd the compliment,
And treated her genteelly, so that, dress'd,
She look'd extremely well where'er she went,
A pretty woman is a welcome guest,
And Laura's brow a frown had rarely bent,
Indeed she shone all smiles, and seem'd to flatter
Mankind with her black eyes for looking at her

XXIV

She was a married woman, 'tis convenient,
Because in Christian countries 'tis a rule
To view their little slips with eyes more lenient,
Whereas if single ladies play the fool,

(Unless within the period intervenient

A well-timed wedding makes the scandal cool)
I don't know how they ever can get over it,
Except they manage never to discover it

XXV

Her husband sail'd upon the Adriatic,
And made some voyages, too, in other seas,
And when he lay in quarantine for pratique
(A forty days' precaution 'gainst disease),
His wife would mount, at times, her highest attic,
For thence she could discern the ship with ease
He was a merchant trading to Aleppo,
His name Giuseppe, call'd more briefly, Beppo

XXVI

He was a man as dusky as a Spaniard,
Sunburnt with travel, yet a portly figure,
Though colour'd, as it were, within a tanyard,
He was a person both of sense and vigour —
A better seaman never yet did man yard.
And she, although her manners show'd no rigour,
Was deem'd a woman of the strictest principle,
So much as to be thought almost invincible <sup>(1)</sup>

(1) [“ The general state of morals here is much the same as in the Doges’ time: a woman is virtuous (according to the code) who limits herself to her husband and one lover, those who have two, three, or more, are a little wild, but it is only those who are indiscriminately diffuse, and form a low connection, who are considered as overstepping the modesty of marriage. There is no convincing woman here, that she is in the smallest degree deviating from the rule of right or the fitness of things, in having an amorous. The great sin seems to lie in concealing it, or having more than one, that is, unless such an extension of the prerogative is understood and approved of by the prior clurunt ” — B. Letters, 1817 ]

XXVII

But several years elapsed since they had met ,
Some people thought the ship was lost, and some
That he had somehow blunder'd into debt,
And did not like the thought of steering home ,
And there were several offer'd any bet,
Or that he would, or that he would not come,
For most men (till by losing render'd sage)
Will back their own opinions with a wager

XXVIII

'Tis said that their last parting was pathetic,
As partings often are, or ought to be,
And then presentiment was quite prophetic
That they should never more each other see,
(A sort of morbid feeling, half poetic,
Which I have known occur in two or three,)
When kneeling on the shore upon her sad knee,
He left this Adriatic Ariadne

XXIX

And Laura waited long, and wept a little,
And thought of wearing weeds, as well she might ,
She almost lost all appetite for victual,
And could not sleep with ease alone at night ,
She deem'd the window-frames and shutters brittle
Against a daring housebreaker or spite,
And so she thought it prudent to connect her
With a vice-husband, chiefly to protect her

XXX.

She chose, (and what is there they will not choose,
 If only you will but oppose their choice ?)
 Till Beppo should return from his long cruise,
 And bid once more her faithful heart rejoice,
 A man some women like, and yet abuse —
 A coxcomb was he by the public voice,
 A Count of wealth, they said, as well as quality,
 And in his pleasures of great liberality (1)

XXXI

And then he was a Count, and then he knew
 Music, and dancing, fiddling, French and Tuscan,
 The last not easy, be it known to you,
 For few Italians speak the right Etuscan
 He was a critic upon operas, too,
 And knew all niceties of the sock and buskin,
 And no Venetian audience could endure a Song, scene, or all, when he cried "seccatura!"

XXXII

His "bravo" was decisive, for that sound
 Hush'd "Academie" sigh'd in silent awe,
 The fiddlers trembled as he look'd around,
 For fear of some false note's detected flaw.
 The "prima donna's" tuneful heart would bound,
 Dreading the deep damnation of his "bah!"
 Soprano, basso, even the contra-alto,
 Wish'd him five fathom under the Rialto

(1) [MS — "A Count of wealth inferior to his quality, Which somewhat limited his liberality"]

XXXIII

He patronised the Improvisatori,

Nay, could himself extemporise some stanzas,
Wrote rhymes, sang songs, could also tell a story,

Sold pictures, and was skilful in the dance as Italians can be, though in this their glory [has,

Must surely yield the palm to that which Fiance
In short, he was a perfect cavaliero,
And to his very valet seem'd a hero

XXXIV.

Then he was faithful too, as well as amorous,

So that no sort of female could complain,
Although they're now and then a little clamorous,

He never put the pretty souls in pain,
His heart was one of those which most enamour us,
Wax to receive, and marble to retain.

He was a lover of the good old school,
Who still become more constant as they cool

XXXV

No wonder such accomplishments should turn

A female head, however sage and steady —
With scarce a hope that Beppo could return,

In law he was almost as good as dead, he Nor sent, nor wrote, nor show'd the least concern,

And she had waited several years already,
And really if a man won't let us know
That he's alive, he's dead, or should be so.

XXXVI

Besides, within the Alps, to every woman,
 (Although, God knows, it is a grievous sin,)
 'Tis, I may say, permitted to have two men,
 I can't tell who first brought the custom in,
 But "Cavalier Serventes" are quite common,
 And no one notices nor cares a pin,
 And we may call this (not to say the worst)
 A second marriage which corrupts the first

XXXVII

The word was formerly a "Cicisbeo,"
 But that is now grown vulgar and indecent,
 The Spaniards call the person a "Cortejo,"<sup>(1)</sup>
 For the same mode subsists in Spain, though recent,
 In short it reaches from the Po to Tejo,
 And may perhaps at last be o'er the sea sent
 But Heaven preserve Old England from such courses!
 Or what becomes of damage and divorces?

XXXVIII

However, I still think, with all due deference
 To the fair single part of the Creation,
 That married ladies should preserve the preference
 In tête-à-tête or general conversation —
 And this I say without peculiar reference
 To England, France, or any other nation —
 Because they know the world, and are at ease,
 And being natural, naturally please

(1) Cortejo is pronounced Cortejo, with an aspirate, according to the Arabesque guttural. It means what there is as yet no precise name for in England, though the practice is as common as in any tramontane country whatever

XXXIX

'Tis true, your budding Miss is very charming,
 But shy and awkward at first coming out,
 So much alarm'd, that she is quite alarming,
 All Giggle, Blush, half Pertness, and half Pout,
 And glancing at Mamma, for fear there's harm in What you, she, it, or they, may be about,
 The Nursery still lisps out in all they utter — Besides, they always smell of bread and butter

XL

But "Cavalier Servente" is the phrase
 Used in politest circles to express
 This supernumerary slave, who stays
 Close to the lady as a part of dress,
 Her word the only law which he obeys
 His is no sinecure, as you may guess,
 Coach, servants, gondola, he goes to call,
 And carries fan and tippet, gloves and shawl

XLI

With all its sinful doings, I must say,
 That Italy's a pleasant place to me,
 Who love to see the Sun shine every day,
 And vines (not nail'd to walls) from tree to tree
 Festoon'd, much like the back scene of a play,
 Or melodrame, which people flock to see,
 When the first act is ended by a dance
 In vineyards copied from the south of France

XLII

I like on Autumn evenings to ride out,
Without being forced to bid my groom be sure
My cloak is round his middle strapp'd about,
Because the skies are not the most secure,
I know too that, if stopp'd upon my route,
Where the green alleys windingly allure,
Reeling with grapes red waggons choke the way,—
In England 'twould be dung, dust, or a dray

XLIII

I also like to dine on becaficas,
To see the Sun set, sure he'll rise to-morrow,
Not through a misty morning twinkling weak as
A drunken man's dead eye in maudlin sorrow,
But with all Heaven t'himself, that day will break as Beauteous as cloudless, nor be forced to borrow
That sort of faithful candlelight which glimmers
Where reeking London's smoky caldron simmers

XLIV

I love the language, that soft bastard Latin,
Which melts like kisses from a female mouth,
And sounds as if it should be writ on satin,
With syllables which breathe of the sweet South
And gentle liquids gliding all so pat in,
That not a single accent seems uncouth,
Like our harsh northern whistling, grunting guttural
Which we are obliged to hiss, and spit, and sputter all

XLV

I like the women too (forgive my folly),
 From the rich peasant cheek of ruddy bionze, <sup>(1)</sup>
 And large black eyes that flash on you a volley
 Of rays that say a thousand things at once,
 To the high dama's brow, more melancholy,
 But clear, and with a wild and liquid glance,
 Heart on her lips, and soul within her eyes,
 Soft as her clime, <sup>(2)</sup> and sunny as her skies. <sup>(3)</sup>

XLVI

Eve of the land which still is Paradise !
 Italian beauty ! didst thou not inspire
 Raphael, <sup>(4)</sup> who died in thy embrace, and vies
 With all we know of Heaven, or can desire,
 In what he hath bequeath'd us ? — in what guise,
 Though flashing from the feivour of the lyre,
 Would words describe thy past and present glow,
 While yet Canova can create below ? <sup>(5)</sup>

(1) [MS — “ From the tall peasant with her ruddy bronze ”]

(2) [MS — “ Like her own clime, all sun, and bloom, and skies ”]

(3) [In these lines the author rises above the usual and appropriate pitch of his composition, and is betrayed into something too like enthusiasm and deep feeling for the light and fantastic strain of his poetry. Neither does the fit go off, for he rises quite into rapture in the succeeding stanza. This is, however, the only slip of the kind in the whole work — the only passage in which the author betrays the secret (which might, however, have been suspected) of his own genius, and his affinity to a higher order of poets than those to whom he has here been pleased to hold out a model” — JEFFREY.]

(4) For the received accounts of the cause of Raphael's death, see his lives

(5) (In talking thus, the writer, more especially Of women, would be understood to say,
 He speaks as a spectator, not officially,
 And always, reader, in a modest way,

XLVII

"England ' with all thy faults I love thee still,"
 I said at Calais, and have not forgot it,
 I like to speak and lucubrate my fill,
 I like the government (but that is not it),
 I like the freedom of the press and quill,
 I like the Habeas Corpus (when we've got it),
 I like a parliamentary debate,
 Particularly when 'tis not too late,

XLVIII

I like the taxes, when they're not too many,
 I like a seacoal fire, when not too dear,
 I like a beef-steak, too, as well as any,
 Have no objection to a pot of beer,
 I like the weather, when it is not ramy,
 That is, I like two months of every year
 And so God save the Regent, Church, and King '
 Which means that I like all and every thing

XLIX

Our standing army, and disbanded seamen,
 Poor's rate, Reform, my own, the nation's debt,
 Our little riots just to show we are free men,
 Our tiffing bankruptcies in the Gazette,
 Our cloudy climate, and our chilly women,
 All these I can forgive, and those forget,
 And greatly venerate our recent glories,
 And wish they were not owing to the Tories

---

Perhaps, too, in no very great degree shall he Appear to have offended in this lay,
 Since, as all know, without the sex, our sonnets
 Would seem untimish'd, like their untimish'd bonnets

(S. M. D.)

PRINTER'S DEVIL

L

But to my tale of Laura, — for I find

Digression is a sin, that by degrees
Becomes exceeding tedious to my mind,

And, therefore, may the reader too displease —
The gentle reader, who may wax unkind,

And caring little for the author's ease,
Insist on knowing what he means, a hard
And hapless situation for a bard

LI.

Oh that I had the art of easy writing

What should be easy reading! could I scale
Parnassus, where the Muses sit inditing

Those pretty poems never known to fail,
How quickly would I print (the world delighting)

A Grecian, Syrian, or Assyrian tale,
And sell you, mix'd with western sentimentalism,
Some samples of the finest Orientalism

LII

But I am but a nameless sort of person,

(A broken Dandy <sup>(1)</sup> lately on my travels)
And take for rhyme, to hook my rambling verse on,

The first that Walker's Lexicon unravels,
And when I can't find that, I put a worse on,

Not caring as I ought for critics' cavils,
I've half a mind to tumble down to prose,
But verse is more in fashion — so here goes

(1) ["The expressions 'blue stocking' and 'dandy' may furnish matter for the learning of a commentator at some future period. At this moment, every English reader will understand them. Our present ephemeral dandy is akin to the macaroni of my earlier days. The first of those expressions has become classical, by Mrs Hannah More's poem of 'Bas Bleu,' and the other by the use of it in one of Lord Byron's

LIII

The Count and Laura made their new arrangement,
Which lasted, as arrangements sometimes do,
For half a dozen years without estrangement,
They had their little differences, too,
Those jealous whiffs, which never any change meant.

In such affairs there probably are few
Who have not had this pouting sort of squabble,
From sinners of high station to the rabble

LIV

But, on the whole, they were a happy pair,
As happy as unlawful love could make them,
The gentleman was fond, the lady fan,
Their chains so slight, 'twas not worth while to break them

The world beheld them with indulgent air,
The pious only wished "the devil take them!"
He took them not, he very often waits,
And leaves old sinners to be young ones' baits

LV

But they were young Oh! what without our youth
Would love be! What would youth be without love?
Youth lends it joy, and sweetness, vigour, truth,
Heart, soul, and all that seems as from above,
But, languishing with years, it grows uncouth—
One of few things experience don't improve,
Which is, perhaps, the reason why old fellows
Are always so preposterously jealous poems Though now become familiar and trite, their day may not be long

—— 'Cadentque

Quæ nunc sunt in honoris vericula "'

LORD GLENBERVIE, Ricciardetto, 1822 ]

LVI

It was the Carnival, as I have said

Some six and thirty stanzas back, and so
Laura the usual preparations made,

Which you do when your mind's made up to go
To-night to Mrs Boehm's masquerade,

Spectator, or partaker in the show,
The only difference known between the cases
Is—here, we have six weeks of “varnish'd faces.”

LVII

Laura, when dress'd, was (as I sang before)

A pretty woman as was ever seen,
Fresh as the Angel o'er a new inn door,

Or frontispiece of a new Magazine,
With all the fashions which the last month wore,
Colour'd, and silver paper leaved between
That and the title-page, for fear the press
Should soil with parts of speech the parts of dress

LVIII

They went to the Ridotto,—'tis a hall

Where people dance, and sup, and dance again,
Its proper name, perhaps, were a masqued ball,

But that's of no importance to my strain,
'Tis (on a smaller scale) like our Vauxhall

Excepting that it can't be spoilt by rain
The company is “mix'd” (the phrase I quote is As much as saying, they're below your notice),

LIX

For a "mix'd company" implies that, save
 Yourself and friends, and half a hundred more,
 Whom you may bow to without looking grave
 The rest are but a vulgar set, the bore
 Of public places, where they basely bave
 The fashionable stare of twenty score
 Of well-bred persons, call'd "the World," but I,
 Although I know them, really don't know why.

LX.

This is the case in England, at least was During the dynasty of Dandies, <sup>(1)</sup> now
 Perchance succeeded by some other class
 Of imitated imitators — how Irreparably soon decline, alas!
 The demagogues of fashion all below
 Is frail, how easily the world is lost
 By love, or war, and now and then by frost!

LXI

Crush'd was Napoleon by the northern Thor,
 Who knock'd his army down with icy hammer,
 Stopp'd by the elements, <sup>(2)</sup> like a whale, or A blundering novice in his new French grammar,

(1) ["I liked the Dandies — they were always very civil to me, though, in general, they disliked literary people, and persecuted and mystified Madame de Stael, Lewis, Horace Walpole, and the like. The truth is, that though I gave up the business early, I had a tinge of Dandyism in my minority, and probably retained enough of it to conciliate the great ones, at four and twenty" — B. Diary, 1821.]

(2) ["When Brummell was obliged to retire to France, he knew no French, and having obtained a grammar for the purpose of study, our friend Scrope Davies was asked what progress Brummell had made in French — he responded, 'that Brummell had been stopped, like Bonaparte in Russia, by the elements' — I have put this pun into Beppo, which is 'a

Good cause had he to doubt the chance of war,
 And as for Fortune—but I dare not d—n her,
 Because, were I to ponder to infinity,
 The more I should believe in her divinity (1)

LXII.

She rules the present, past, and all to be yet,
 She gives us luck in lotteries, love, and marriage,
 I cannot say that she's done much for me yet,
 Not that I mean her bounties to disparage,
 We've not yet closed accounts, and we shall see yet
 How much she'll make amends for past miscarriage,
 Meantime the goddess I'll no more importune,
 Unless to thank her when she's made my fortune

LXIII

To turn,—and to return,—the devil take it!
 This story slips for ever through my fingers,
 Because, just as the stanza likes to make it,
 It needs must be—and so it rather lingers,
 This form of verse began, I can't well break it,
 But must keep time and tune like public singers,
 But if I once get through my present measure,
 I'll take another when I'm next at leisure.

---

fan exchange and no robbery,' for Scrope made his fortune at several dinners (as he owned himself), by repeating occasionally, as his own, some of the buffooneries with which I had encountered him in the morning" — B Diary, 1821 ]

(1) ["Like Sylla, I have always believed that all things depend upon Fortune, and nothing upon ourselves. I am not aware of any one thought or action, worthy of being called good to myself or others, which is not to be attributed to the good goddess — Fortune!" — MS Diary, 1821 ]

LXIV

They went to the Ridotto ('tis a place
 To which I mean to go myself to-morrow, (1)
 Just to divert my thoughts a little space,
 Because I'm rather hippish, and may borrow
 Some sprits, guessing at what kind of face
 May lurk beneath each mask, and as my sorrow
 Slackens its pace sometimes, I'll make, or find Something shall leave it half an hour behind )

LXV

Now Laura moves along the joyous crowd,
 Smiles in her eyes, and simpers on her lips
 To some she whispers, others speaks aloud,
 To some she curtsies, and to some she dips,
 Complains of warmth, and this complaint avow'd,
 Her lover brings the lemonade, she sips,
 She then surveys, condemns, but pities still Her dearest friends for being dress'd so ill

LXVI

One has false curls, another too much paint,
 A third—where did she buy that frightful turban?
 A fourth's so pale she fears she's going to faint,
 A fifth's look's vulgar, dowdyish, and suburban,
 A sixth's white silk has got a yellow taint,
 A seventh's thin muslin surely will be her bane,
 And lo! an eighth appears,—"I'll see no more!"
 For fear, like Banquo's kings, they reach a score

(1) In the margin of the original MS Lord Byron has written—"January 19th, 1815 To-morrow will be a Sunday, and full Ridotto"—E.]

LXVII

Meantime, while she was thus at others gazing,
Others were levelling then looks at her,
She heard the men's half-whisper'd mode of praising,
And, till 'twas done, determined not to stir,
The women only thought it quite amazing
That, at her time of life, so many were Admirers still,—but men are so debased,
Those brazen creatures always suit their taste

LXVIII

For my part, now, I ne'er could understand
Why naughty women—but I won't discuss
A thing which is a scandal to the land,
I only don't see why it should be thus,
And if I were but in a gown and band,
Just to entitle me to make a fuss,
I'd preach on this till Wilberforce and Romilly
Should quote in their next speeches from my homily

LXIX

While Laura thus was seen and seeing, smiling, Talking, she knew not why and cared not what,
So that her female friends, with envy broiling,
Beheld her airs and triumph, and all that,
And well dress'd males still kept before her filing,
And passing bow'd and mingled with her chat,
More than the rest one person seem'd to stare
With pertinacity that's rather rare

LXX

He was a Turk, the colour of mahogany,
 And Laura saw him, and at first was glad,
 Because the Turks so much admire philogyny,
 Although their usage of their wives is sad,
 'Tis said they use no better than a dog any Poor woman, whom they purchase like a pad
 They have a number, though they ne'er exhibit 'em,
 Four wives by law, and concubines "ad libitum"

LXXI

They lock them up, and veil, and guard them daily
 They scarcely can behold their male relations,
 So that their moments do not pass so gaily
 As is supposed the case with northern nations,
 Confinement, too, must make them look quite palely
 And as the Turks abhor long conversations,
 Their days are either pass'd in doing nothing,
 Or bathing, nursing, making love, and clothing

LXXII

They cannot read, and so don't lisp in criticism,
 Nor write, and so they don't affect the muse,
 Were never caught in epigram or witticism,
 Have no romances, sermons, plays, reviews,—
 In harams learning soon would make a pretty schism'
 But luckily these beauties are no "Blues,"
 No bustling Botherbys have they to show 'em
 "That charming passage in the last new poem"

LXXIII

No solemn, antique gentleman of rhyme,
 Who having angled all his life for fame,
 And getting but a nibble at a time,
 Still fussily keeps fishing on, the same
 Small "Triton of the minnows," the sublime
 Of mediocrity, the furious tame,
 The echo's echo, usher of the school
 Of female wits, boy bards—in short, a fool!

LXXIV

A stalking oracle of awful phrase, [law)
 The approving "Good!" (by no means good in Humming like flies around the newest blaze,
 The bluest of bluebottles you e'er saw,
 Teasing with blame, excruciating with praise,
 Gorging the little fame he gets all raw,
 Translating tongues he knows not even by letter,
 And sweating plays so middling, bad were better

LXXV

One hates an author that's all author, fellow
 In foolscap uniforms turn'd up with ink,
 So very anxious, clever, fine, and jealous,
 One don't know what to say to them, or think,
 Unless to puff them with a pan of bellows,
 Of coxcombry's worst coxcombs e'en the pink
 Are preferable to these shreds of paper,
 These unquench'd snuffings of the midnight taper

LXXVI

Of these same we see several, and of others,
 Men of the world, who know the world like men,
 Scott, Rogers, Moore, and all the better brothers,
 Who think of something else besides the pen,
 But for the children of the "mighty mother's,"
 The would-be wits and can't-be gentlemen,
 I leave them to their daily "tea is ready,"
 Smug coterie, and literary lady (1)

LXXVII

The poor dear Mussulwomen whom I mention
 Have none of these instructive pleasant people,
 And one would seem to them a new invention,
 Unknown as bells within a Turkish steeple,
 I think 'twould almost be worth while to pension
 (Though best-sown projects very often reap ill)
 A missionary author, just to preach
 Our Christian usage of the parts of speech

LXXVIII

No chemistry for them unfolds her gasses,
 No metaphysics are let loose in lectures,
 No circulating library amasses
 Religious novels, moral tales, and strictures
 Upon the living manners, as they pass us,
 No exhibition glares with annual pictures,
 They stare not on the stars from out their attics,
 Nor deal (thank God for that!) in mathematics

(1) [Nothing can be cleverer than this caustic little dithyramb, introduced à propos of the life of Turkish ladies in their harems — JEFFREY]

LXXIX.

Why I thank God for that is no great matter,
 I have my reasons, you no doubt suppose,
 And as, perhaps, they would not highly flatter,
 I'll keep them for my life (to come) in prose,
 I fear I have a little turn for satire,
 And yet methinks the older that one grows
 Inclines us more to laugh than scold, though laughter
 Leaves us so doubly serious shortly after

LXXX

Oh, Mirth and Innocence! Oh, Milk and Water!
 Ye happy mixtures of more happy days!
 In these sad centuries of sin and slaughter,
 Abominable Man no more allays
 His thirst with such pure beverage. No matter,
 I love you both, and both shall have my praise
 Oh, for old Saturn's reign of sugar-candy! —
 Meantime I drink to your return in brandy

LXXXI

Our Laura's Turk still kept his eyes upon her,
 Less in the Mussulman than Christian way,
 Which seems to say, "Madam, I do you honour,
 "And while I please to stare, you'll please to stay"
 Could staring win a woman, this had won her,
 But Laura could not thus be led astray,
 She had stood fire too long and well, to boggle
 Even at this stranger's most outlandish ogle.

LXXXII

The morning now was on the point of breaking,
A turn of time at which I would advise
Ladies who have been dancing, or partaking
In any other kind of exercise,
To make their preparations for forsaking
The ball-room ere the sun begins to rise,
Because when once the lamps and candles fail,
His blushes make them look a little pale

LXXXIII

I've seen some balls and revels in my time,
And stay'd them over for some silly reason,
And then I look'd (I hope it was no crime)
To see what lady best stood out the season,
And though I've seen some thousands in their prime,
Lovely and pleasing, and who still may please on,
I never saw but one (the stars withdrawn),
Whose bloom could after dancing dare the dawn

LXXXIV

The name of this Aurora I'll not mention,
Although I might, for she was nought to me
More than that patent work of God's invention,
A charming woman, whom we like to see,
But writing names would merit reprehension,
Yet if you like to find out this fair she,
At the next London or Parisian ball
You still may mark her cheek, out-blooming all

LXXXV.

Laura, who knew it would not do at all

To meet the daylight after seven hours sitting
Among three thousand people at a ball,

To make her cuntsy thought it right and fitting,
The Count was at her elbow with her shawl,

And they the room were on the point of quitting,
When lo! those cursed gondoliers had got Just in the very place where they should not

LXXXVI

In this they're like our coachmen, and the cause

Is much the same—the crowd, and pulling, hauling,
With blasphemies enough to break their jaws,

They make a never intermitting bawling
At home, our Bow-street gemmen keep the laws,

And here a sentry stands within your calling,
But for all that, there is a deal of swearing,
And nauseous words past mentioning or bearing

LXXXVII

The Count and Laura found their boat at last,

And homeward floated o'er the silent tide,
Discussing all the dances gone and past,

The dancers and their dresses, too, beside,
Some little scandals eke but all aghast

(As to their palace stairs the rowers glide)
Sate Laura by the side of her Adoier, <sup>(1)</sup>
When lo! the Mussulman was there before her

(1) [MS — “ Sate Laura with a kind of comic horror ”]

LXXXVIII

“ Sir,” said the Count, with brow exceeding grave, ‘ Your unexpected presence here will make “ It necessary for myself to crave
 “ Its import? But perhaps ’tis a mistake , “ I hope it is so , and at once to wave
 “ All compliment, I hope so for your sake , “ You understand my meaning, or you shall” “ Sir,” (quoth the Turk) “ ’tis no mistake at all

LXXXIX.

‘ That lady is my wife!’” Much wonder paints
 The lady’s changing cheek, as well it might ,
 But where an Englishwoman sometimes faints,
 Italian females don’t do so outright ,
 They only call a little on their saints,
 And then come to themselves, almost or quite ,
 Which saves much hartshorn, salts, and sprinkling faces,
 And cutting stays, as usual in such cases

XC

She said,—what could she say? Why, not a word
 But the Count courteously invited in
 The stranger, much appeased by what he heard “ Such things, perhaps, we’d best discuss within’
 Said he , “ don’t let us make ourselves absurd
 “ In public, by a scene, nor raise a din,
 For then the chief and only satisfaction
 Will be much quizzing on the whole transaction”

XCI.

They enter'd, and for coffee call'd—it came,
A beverage for Turks and Christians both,
Although the way they make it's not the same
Now Laura, much recover'd, or less loth
To speak, cries “Beppo! what's your pagan name?
Bless me! your beard is of amazing growth!
And how came you to keep away so long?
Are you not sensible 'twas very wrong?”

XCII.

And are you really, truly, now a Turk?
With any other women did you wive?
Is't true they use their fingers for a fork?
Well, that's the prettiest shawl—as I'm alive!
You'll give it me? They say you eat no pork
And how so many years did you contrive
To—Bless me! did I ever? No, I never Saw a man grown so yellow! How's your liver?

XCIII.

Beppo! that beard of yours becomes you not,
It shall be shaved before you're a day older
Why do you wear it? Oh! I had forgot—
Pray don't you think the weather here is colder?
How do I look? You shan't stir from this spot
In that queer dress, for fear that some beholder
Should find you out, and make the story known How short your hair is! Lord! how grey it's grown!”

XCIV

What answer Beppo made to these demands
Is more than I know He was cast away
About where Troy stood once, and nothing stands ,
Became a slave of course, and for his pay
Had bread and bastinadoes, till some bands
Of pirates landing in a neighbouring bay,
He join'd the rogues and prosper'd, and became ,
A renegado of indifferent fame

XCV

But he grew rich, and with his riches grew so
Keen the desire to see his home again,
He thought himself in duty bound to do so,
And not be always thieving on the main ,
Lonely he felt, at times, as Robin Crusoe,
And so he hired a vessel come from Spain,
Bound for Corfu she was a fine polacca,
Mann'd with twelve hands, and laden with tobacco

XCVI

Himself, and much (heaven knows how gotten') cash,
He then embark'd with risk of life and limb,
And got clear off, although the attempt was rash ,
He said that Providence protected him —
For my part, I say nothing—lest we clash '
In our opinions — well, the ship was trim,
Set sail, and kept her reckoning fairly on,
Except three days of calm when off Cape Bonn

XCVII

They reach'd the island, he transferr'd his lading,
 And self and live stock, to another bottom,
 And pass'd for a true Turkey-merchant, trading
 With goods of various names, but I've forgot 'em
 However, he got off by this evading,
 Or else the people would perhaps have shot him,
 And thus at Venice (1) landed to reclaim
 His wife, religion, house, and Christian name

XCVIII

His wife received, the patriarch re-baptized him,
 (He made the church a present, by the way),
 He then threw off the garments which disguised him,
 And borrow'd the Count's smallclothes for a day
 His friends the more for his long absence prized him,
 Finding he'd wherewithal to make them gay,
 With dinners, where he oft became the laugh of them,
 For stories—but I don't believe the half of them

(1) ["You ask me," says Lord Byron, in a letter written in 1820, "for a volume of Manners, &c on Italy Perhaps I am in the case to know more of them than most Englishmen, because I have lived among the natives, and in parts of the country where Englishmen never resided before (I speak of Romagna and this place particularly), but there are many reasons why I do not choose to treat in print on such a subject Their moral is not your moral, their life is not your life, you would not understand it it is not English, nor French, nor German, which you would all understand The conventual education, the cavalier servitude, the habits of thought and living, are so entirely different, and the difference becomes so much more striking the more you live intimately with them, that I know not how to make you comprehend a people who are at once temperate and profligate, serious in their characters and buffoons in their amusements, capable of impressions and passions, which are at once sudden and durable (what you find in no other nation), and who actually have no society (what we would call so), as you may see by their comedies, they have no real comedy, not even in Goldoni, and the

XCIX

Whate'er his youth had suffer'd, his old age
 With wealth and talking make him some amends.
 Though Laura sometimes put him in a rage,
 I've heard the Count and he were always friends
 My pen is at the bottom of a page,
 Which being finish'd, here the story ends,
 'Tis to be wish'd it had been sooner done,
 But stories somehow lengthen when begun (1)

is because they have no society to draw it from. Their conversations are not society at all. They go to the theatre to talk, and into company to hold their tongues. The women sit in a circle, and the men gather into groups, or they play at dreary faro, or 'lotto reale,' for small sums. Their ademes are concerts like our own, with better music and more form. Their best things are the carnival balls and masquerades, when every body runs in and for six weeks. After their dinners and suppers they make ex tempore verses and buffoon one another, but it is in a humour which you would not enter into, ye of the north. — "In their houses it is better. As for the women, from the fisherman's wife up to the noble donna, their system has its rules, and its fitness, and its decorums, so as to be reduced to a kind of discipline or game at hearts, which admits few deviations, unless you wish to lose it. They are extremely tenacious, and jealous as furies, not permitting their lovers even to marry if they can help it, and keeping them always close to them in public as in private, whenever they can. In short, they transfer marriage to adultery, and strike the not out of that commandment. The reason is, that they marry for their parents, and love for themselves. They exact fidelity from a lover as a debt of honour, while they pay the husband as a tradesman, that is, not at all. You hear a person's character, male or female, canvassed not as depending on their conduct to their husbands or wives, but to their mistresses or lover. If I wrote a quarto, I don't know that I could do more than a splitt what I have here noted."]

(1) [This extremely clever and amusing performance affords a very curious and complete specimen of a kind of diction and composition of which our English literature has hitherto presented very few examples. It is, in itself, absolutely a thing of nothing — without story, characters, sentiments, or intelligible object, — a mere piece of lively and loquacious prattling, in short, upon all kinds of frivolous subjects, — a sort of gay and desultory babbling about Italy and England, Luicks, bulls, literature, and fish sauces. But still there is something very engaging in the uniform gaiety, politeness, and good humour of the author, and something still more striking and admirable in the matchless facility with which he has cast into regular, and even difficult, versification the unmingled, unstrained, and unselected language of the most light, familiar, and ordinary conversation. With great skill and felicity, he has furnished us with an example of about one hundred stanzas of good verse, entirely composed of common words, in their common places, never presenting us with one sprig of what is called poetical diction, or even making use of a single inversion, either to raise the style or assist the rhyme — but running on in an inexhaustible series of good easy colloquial phrases, and finding them fall into verse by some unaccountable and happy fatality. In this great and characteristic quality it is almost invariably excellent. In some other respects, it is more unequal. About one half is as good as possible, in the style to which it belongs, the other half bears, perhaps, too many marks of that haste with which such a work must necessarily be written. Some passages are rather too snappish, and some run too much on the cheap and rather plebeian humour of out-of-the-way rhymes, and strange sounding words and epithets. But the greater part is extremely pleasant, amiable, and gentlemanlike — JEFFREY.]

МАЗЕППА.

[THE following "lively, spirited, and pleasant tale," as Mr Gifford calls it, on the margin of the MS, was written in the autumn of 1818, at Ravenna. We extract the following from a review of the time — "MAZEPPA is a very fine and spirited sketch of a very noble story, and is every way worthy of its author. The story is a well known one, namely, that of the young Pole, who, being bound naked on the back of a wild horse on account of an intrigue with the lady of a certain great noble of his country, was carried by his steed into the heart of the Ukraine, and being there picked up by some Cossacks, in a state apparently of utter hopelessness and exhaustion, recovered, and lived to be long after the prince and leader of the nation among whom he had arrived in this extraordinary manner. Lord Byron has represented the strange and wild incidents of this adventure, as being related in a half serious, half sportive way, by Mazeppa himself, to some person than Charles the Twelfth of Sweden in some of whose last campaigns the Cossack Hetman took a distinguished part. He tells it during the desolate bivouac of Charles and the few friends who fled with him towards Turkey, after the bloody overthrow of Pultowa. There is not a little of beauty and gracefulness in this way of setting the picture, — the age of Mazeppa — the calm, practised indifference with which he now submits to the worst of fortune's deeds — the heroic, unflinching coldness of the royal madman to whom he speaks — the dreary and perilous accompaniments of the scene around the speaker and the audience, — all contribute to throw a very striking charm both of preparation and of contrast over the wild story of the Hetman. Nothing can be more beautiful, in like manner, than the account of the love — the gentle love — the fruits of which had been so marvellous" — E.]

ADVERTISEMENT.

---

“ CELUI qui remplissait alors cette place était un gentilhomme Polonais, nommé Mazeppa, né dans le palatinat de Padolie il avait été élevé page de Jean Casimir, et avait pris à sa cour quelque teinture des belles-lettres. Une intrigue qu’il eut dans sa jeunesse avec la femme d’un gentilhomme Polonais ayant été découverte, le mari le fit hier tout nu sur un cheval farouche, et le laissa aller en cet état. Le cheval, qui était du pays de l’Ukraine, y retourna, et y porta Mazeppa, demi-mort de fatigue et de faim. Quelques paysans le secoururent il resta longtems parmi eux, et se signala dans plusieurs courses contre les Tartares. La supériorité de ses lumières lui donna une grande considération parmi les Cosaques sa réputation s’augmentant de jour en jour, obligea le Czar à le faire Prince de l’Ukraine.”—VOLTAIRE, Hist de Charles XII p 196

“ Le 101 fuyant, et poursuivi, eut son cheval tué sous lui, le Colonel Gieta, blessé, et perdant tout son sang, lui donna le sien. Ainsi on remit deux fois à cheval, dans la fuite, ce conquérant qui n’avait pu y monter pendant la bataille ”—p 216

“ Le roi alla par un autre chemin avec quelques cavaliers Le cairosse, où il était, rompit dans la marche, on le remit à cheval Pour comble de disgrâce, il s'égara pendant la nuit dans un bois, là, son courage ne pouvant plus suppléer à ses forces épuisées, les douleurs de sa blessure devenues plus insupportables par la fatigue, son cheval étant tombé de lassitude, il se coucha quelques heures au pied d'un arbre, en danger d'être surpris à tout moment par les vainqueurs, qui le cherchaient de tous côtés ” — p 218 (1)

(1) [For some authentic and interesting particulars concerning the Hetman MAZEPPA, see Mr Barrow's delightful “ Memoir of the Life of Peter the Great ” FAMILY LIBRARY, No XXXV — F.]

M A Z E P P A.

I

TWAS after dread Pultowa's day,
 When fortune left the royal Swede,
 Around a slaughter'd army lay,
 No more to combat and to bleed
 The power and glory of the war,
 Faithless, as then vain votaries, men,
 Had pass'd to the triumphant Czar,
 And Moscow's walls were safe again,
 Until a day more dark and dear,
 And a more memorable year,
 Should give to slaughter and to shame
 A mightier host and haughtier name,
 A greater wreck, a deeper fall,
 A shock to one — a thunderbolt to all

II.

Such was the hazard of the die,
 The wounded Charles was taught to fly
 By day and night through field and flood,
 Stain'd with his own and subjects' blood,
 For thousands fell that flight to aid
 And not a voice was heard t' upbraid
 Ambition in his humbled hour,
 When truth had nought to dread from power

His horse was slain, and Gieta gave
 His own — and died the Russians' slave.
 This too sinks after many a league
 Of well sustain'd, but vain fatigue,
 And in the depth of forests, darkling
 The watch-fires in the distance sparkling —
     The beacons of surrounding foes —
 A king must lay his limbs at length
     Are these the laurels and repose
 For which the nations strain their strength?
 They laid him by a savage tree,
 In outworn nature's agony,
 His wounds were stiff — his limbs were stark —
 The heavy hour was chill and dark,
 The fever in his blood forbade
 A transient slumber's fitful aid
 And thus it was, but yet through all,
 Kinglike the monarch bore his fall,
 And made, in this extreme of ill,
 His pangs the vassals of his will
 All silent and subdued were they,
 As once the nations round him lay.

III.

A band of chiefs! — alas! how few,
     Since but the fleeting of a day
 Had thinn'd it, but this wreck was true
     And chivalrous upon the clay
 Each sate him down, all sad and mute,
     Beside his monarch and his steed,
 For danger levels an and brute,
     And all are fellows in their need.

Among the rest, Mazeppa made
His pillow in an old oak's shade —
Himself as rough, and scarce less old,
The Ukraine's hetman, calm and bold,
But first, outspent with this long course,
The Cossack prince rubb'd down his horse,
And made for him a leafy bed,
    And smooth'd his fetlocks and his mane,
    And slack'd his girth, and stripp'd his rein,
And joy'd to see how well he fed,
For until now he had the dread
His wearied courser might refuse
To browse beneath the midnight dews
But he was hardy as his lord,
And little cared for bed and board,
But spirited and docile too,
Whate'er was to be done, would do
Shaggy and swift, and strong of limb,
All Tartar-like he carried him,
Obey'd his voice, and came to call,
And knew him in the midst of all.
Though thousands were around, — and Night,
Without a star, pursued her flight, —
That steed from sunset until dawn
His chief would follow like a fawn

IV.

This done, Mazeppa spread his cloak,
And laid his lance beneath his oak,
Felt if his arms in order good
The long day's march had well withstood —

If still the powder fill'd the pan,
And flints unloosen'd kept then lock —
His sabre's hilt and scabbard felt,
And whether they had chafed his belt —
And next the venerable man,
From out his haviesack and can,
Prepared and spread his slender stock,
And to the monarch and his men
The whole or portion offer'd then
With far less of inquietude
Than courtiers at a banquet would
And Charles of this his slender share
With smiles partook a moment there,
To force of cheer a greater show,
And seem above both wounds and woe, —
And then he said — “ Of all our band,
Though firm of heart and strong of hand,
In skirmish, march, or forage, none
Can less have said or more have done
Than thee, Mazeppa ! On the earth
So fit a pan had never birth,
Since Alexander's days till now,
As thy Bucephalus and thou
All Scythia's fame to thine should yield
For pricking on o'er flood and field ”
Mazeppa answer'd — “ Ill betide
The school wherein I learn'd to ride ! ”
Quoth Charles — “ Old Hetman, wherefore so, Since thou hast learn'd the art so well ? ”
Mazeppa said — “ 'Twere long to tell,
And we have many a league to go,
With every now and then a blow,

And ten to one at least the foe,
Before our steeds may graze at ease,
Beyond the swift Boiysthenes
And, sue, your limbs have need of rest,
And I will be the sentinel
Of this your troop"—"But I request,"
Said Sweden's monarch, "thou wilt tell
This tale of thine, and I may reap,
Perchance, from this the boon of sleep,
For at this moment from my eyes
The hope of present slumber flies"

"Well, sire, with such a hope, I'll track
My seventy years of memory back
I think 'twas in my twentieth spring,—
Ay, 'twas,—when Casimir was king—
John Casimir,—I was his page
Six summers, in my earlier age
A learned monarch, faith! was he,
And most unlike your majesty
He made no wars, and did not gain
New realms to lose them back again,
And (save debates in Warsaw's diet)
He reign'd in most unseemly quiet,
Not that he had no cares to vex,
He loved the muses and the sex,
And sometimes these so fioward are,
They made him wish himself at war,
But soon his wrath being o'er, he took Another mistress, or new book
And then he gave prodigious fêtes—
All Warsaw gather'd round his gates

To gaze upon his splendid court,
And dames, and chiefs, of princely port
He was the Polish Solomon,
So sung his poets, all but one,
Who, being unpension'd, made a satire,
And boasted that he could not flatter.
It was a court of jousts and mimes,
Where every courtier tried at rhymes,
Even I for once produced some verses,
And sign'd my odes ' Despairing Thyrsis '
There was a certain Palatine,

A count of far and high descent,
Rich as a salt or silver mine, <sup>(1)</sup>

And he was proud, ye may divine,
As if from heaven he had been sent
He had such wealth in blood and ore

As few could match beneath the throne,
And he would gaze upon his store,
And o'er his pedigree would pore,
Until by some confusion led,
Which almost look'd like want of head,

He thought their merits were his own
His wife was not of his opinion—

His junior she by thirty years—
Grew daily tired of his dominion,

And, after wishes, hopes, and fears,
To virtue a few farewell tears,
A restless dream or two, some glances
At Warsaw's youth, some songs, and dances,
Awaited but the usual chances,

(1) This comparison of a "salt mine" may, perhaps, be permitted to a Pole, as the wealth of the country consists greatly in the salt mines

Those happy accidents which render
The coldest dames so very tender,
To deck her Count with titles given,
'Tis said, as passports into heaven,
But, strange to say, they rarely boast
Of these, who have deserved them most

V

“ I was a goodly stripling then,
At seventy years I so may say,
That there were few, or boys or men,
Who, in my dawning time of day,
Of vassal or of knight's degree,
Could vie in vanities with me,
For I had strength, youth, gaiety,
A port, not like to this ye see,
But smooth, as all is rugged now,
For time, and care, and woe, have plough'd
My very soul from out my brow,
And thus I should be disavow'd
By all my kind and kin, could they Compare my day and yesterday,
This change was wrought, too, long ere age
Had ta'en my features for his page
With years, ye know, have not declined
My strength, my courage, or my mind,
Or at this hour I should not be Telling old tales beneath a tree,
With starless skies my canopy
But let me on Theresa's form—
Methinks it glides before me now,
Between me and yon chestnut's bough,
The memory is so quick and woe,

And yet I find no words to tell
 The shape of her I loved so well
 She had the Asiatic eye,
     Such as our Turkish neighbourhood,
     Hath mingled with our Polish blood,
 Dark as above us is the sky,
 But though it stole a tender light,
 Like the first moonrise of midnight,
 Large, dark, and swimming in the stream,
 Which seem'd to melt to its own beam,
 All love, half languor, and half fire,
 Like saints that at the stake expire,
 And lift their raptured looks on high,
 As though it were a joy to die <sup>(1)</sup> —
 A brow like a midsummer lake,
     Transparent with the sun therein,
 When waves no murmur dare to make,
     And heaven beholds her face within
 A cheek and lip—but why proceed?
     I loved her then—I love her still,
 And such as I am, love indeed
     In fierce extremes—in good and ill
 But still we love even in our rage,
 And haunted to our very age
 With the vain shadow of the past,
 As is Mazeppa to the last

VI

“We met—we gazed—I saw, and sigh’d,
 She did not speak, and yet replied,

(1) [MS — “Until it proves a joy to die”]

There are ten thousand tones and signs
We hear and see, but none defines —
Involuntary sparks of thought,
Which strike from out the heart o'erwrought,
And form a strange intelligence,
Alike mysterious and intense,
Which link the burning chain that binds,
Without their will, young hearts and minds,
Conveying, as the electric wire,
We know not how, the absorbing fire —
I saw, and sigh'd—in silence wept,
And still reluctant distance kept,
Until I was made known to her,
And we might then and there confer
Without suspicion—then, even then,
    I long'd, and was resolved to speak,
But on my lips they died again,
    The accents tremulous and weak,
Until one hour — There is a game,
    A frivolous and foolish play,
    Wherewith we while away the day,
It is—I have forgot the name—
And we to this, it seems, were set,
By some strange chance, which I forget
I reck'd not if I won or lost,
    It was enough for me to be
    So near to hear, and oh! to see
The being whom I loved the most —
I watch'd her as a sentinel,
(May ours this dark night watch as well!)
Until I saw, and thus it was,

That she was pensive, nor perceived
 Her occupation, nor was grieved
 Nor glad to lose or gain, but still Play'd on for hours, as if her will Yet bound her to the place, though not
 That hers might be the winning lot <sup>(1)</sup>
 Then through my brain the thought did pass
 Even as a flash of lightning there,
 That there was something in her air
 Which would not doom me to despair,
 And on the thought my words broke forth,
     All incoherent as they were—
 Their eloquence was little worth,
 But yet she listen'd—'tis enough—
     Who listens once will listen twice,
     Her heart, be sure, is not of ice,
 And one refusal no rebuff.

VII

“ I loved, and was beloved again—
     They tell me, Sire, you never knew
     Those gentle frailties, if 'tis true,
 I shorten all my joy or pain,
 To you 'twould seem absurd as vain,
 But all men are not born to reign,
 Or o'er their passions, or as you
 Thus o'er themselves and nations too.
 I am—or rather was—a prince,
     A chief of thousands, and could lead
     Them on where each would fore and oft bleed,
 But could not o'er myself evince

(1) [MS — ——— “ but not
 For that which we had both forgot ”]

The like control—But to resume
I loved, and was beloved again,
In sooth, it is a happy doom,
But yet where happiest ends in pain.—
We met in secret, and the hour
Which led me to that lady's bower
Was fiery Expectation's dower
My days and nights were nothing—all Except that hour which doth recall
In the long lapse from youth to age
No other like itself—I'd give
The Ukraine back again to live
It o'er once more—and be a page,
The happy page, who was the lord
Of one soft heart, and his own sword,
And had no other gem nor wealth
Save nature's gift of youth and health—
We met in secret—doubly sweet,
Some say, they find it so to meet,
I know not that—I would have given
My life but to have call'd her mine
In the full view of earth and heaven,
For I did oft and long repine
That we could only meet by stealth.

VIII

“For lovers there are many eyes,
And such there were on us,—the devil
On such occasions should be civil—
The devil!—I'm loth to do him wrong,
It might be some untoward saint,
Who would not be at rest too long,

But to his pious bile gave vent—
But one fair night, some lurking spies
Surprised and seized us both.
The Count was something more than wroth—
I was unarm'd, but if in steel,
All cap-à-pie from head to heel,
What 'gainst their numbers could I do?—
'Twas near his castle, far away
From city or from succour near,
And almost on the break of day,
I did not think to see another,
My moments seem'd reduced to few,
And with one prayer to Mary Mother,
And, it may be, a saint or two,
As I resigned me to my fate,
They led me to the castle gate.
Theresa's doom I never knew,
Our lot was henceforth separate.—
An angry man, ye may opine,
Was he, the proud Count Palatine,
And he had reason good to be,
But he was most enraged lest such An accident should chance to touch
Upon his future pedigree,
Nor less amazed, that such a blot
His noble 'scutcheon should have got,
While he was highest of his line,
Because unto himself he seem'd
The first of men, nor less he deem'd
In others' eyes, and most in mine.
'Sdeath! with a page—perchance a king
Had reconciled him to the thing,

But with a strippling of a page—
I felt—but cannot paint his rage

IX

“ ‘Bring forth the horse!’—the horse was brought,
In truth, he was a noble steed,
A Tatar of the Ukraine breed,
Who look’d as though the speed of thought
Were in his limbs, but he was wild,
Wild as the wild deer, and untaught,
With spur and bridle undefiled—
’Twas but a day he had been caught,
And snorting, with erected mane,
And struggling fiercely, but in vain,
In the full foam of wrath and dread
To me the desert-born was led
They bound me on, that menial throng,
Upon his back with many a thong,
Then loosed him with a sudden lash—
Away!—away!—and on we dash!—
Torrents less rapid and less dash

X

“ Away!—away!—My breath was gone—
I saw not where he hurried on
’Twas scarcely yet the break of day,
And on he foam’d—away!—away!—
The last of human sounds which rose,
As I was darted from my foes,
Was the wild shout of savage laughter,
Which on the wind came roaring after
A moment from that rabble rout.

With sudden wiath I wrench'd my head,
And snapp'd the coid, which to the mane
Had bound my neck in lieu of rein,
And, writhing half my form about,
Howl'd back my curse, but 'midst the tread,
The thunder of my courser's speed,
Perchance they did not hear nor heed
It vexes me—for I would fain
Have paid then insult back again
I paid it well in after days
There is not of that castle gate,
Its drawbridge and portcullis' weight,
Stone, bar, moat, bridge, or bairrier left,
Nor of its fields a blade of grass,
Save what grows on a ridge of wall,
Where stood the hearth-stone of the hall,
And many a time ye there might pass,
Nor dream that e'er that fortress was
I saw its turrets in a blaze,
Then crackling battlements all cleft,
And the hot lead pour down like rain
From off the scorch'd and blackening roof,
Whose thickness was not vengeance-proof
They little thought that day of pain,
When launch'd, as on the lightning's flash,
They bade me to destruction dash,
That one day I should come again,
With twice five thousand horse, to thank
The Count for his uncourteous ride
They play'd me then a bitter prank,
When, with the wild horse for my guide,

They bound me to his foaming flank
 At length I play'd them one as frank—
 For time at last sets all things even—
     And if we do but watch the hour,
     There never yet was human power
 Which could evade, if unforgiven,
 The patient search and vigil long
 Of him who treasures up a wrong

XI

“ Away, away, my steed and I,
     Upon the pinions of the wind,
     All human dwellings left behind,
 We sped like meteors through the sky,
 When with its crackling sound the night
 Is chequer'd with the northern light
 Town—village—none were on our track,
     But a wild plain of' far extent,
 And bounded by a forest black,
     And, save the scarce seen battlement
 On distant heights of some strong hold,
 Against the Tatars built of old,
 No trace of man   The year before
 A Turkish army had march'd o'er,
 And where the Spahr's hoof hath trod,
 The verdure flies the bloody sod —
 The sky was dull, and dim, and gray,
     And a low breeze crept moaning by—
     I could have answer'd with a sigh —
 But fast we fled, away, away—
 And I could neither sigh nor pray,

And my cold sweat-drops fell like rain
Upon the courser's bristling mane ,
But, snorting still with rage and fear,
He flew upon his far career
At times I almost thought, indeed,
He must have slacken'd in his speed ,
But no—my bound and slender frame

Was nothing to his angry might,
And merely like a spui became
Each motion which I made to free
My swoln limbs from their agony
Increased his fury and affright
I tried my voice, —'twas faint and low,
But yet he swerved as from a blow ,
And, starting to each accent, sprang
As from a sudden trumpet's clang
Meantime my cords were wet with gore,
Which, oozing through my limbs, ran o'er ,
And in my tongue the thurst became
A something fierier far than flame

XII

“ We near'd the wild wood—'twas so wide,
I saw no bounds on either side ,
'Twas studded with old sturdy trees,
That bent not to the roughest breeze
Which howls down from Siberia's waste,
And strips the forest in its haste,—
But these were few, and far between Set thick with shrubs more young and green,
Luxuriant with their annual leaves,
Ere strown by those autumnal eves

That nip the forest's foliage dead,
Discolour'd with a lifeless red,
Which stands thereon like stiffen'd gore
Upon the slain when battle's o'er,
And some long winter's night hath shed
Its frost o'er every tombless head,
So cold and stark the raven's beak
May peck unpierced each frozen cheek
'Twas a wild waste of underwood,
And here and there a chestnut stood,
The strong oak, and the hardy pine,
But far apart—and well it were,
Or else a different lot were mine—

The boughs gave way, and did not tear
My limbs, and I found strength to bear
My wounds, already scar'd with cold—
My bonds forbade to loose my hold
We rustled through the leaves like wind,
Left shrubs, and trees, and wolves behind,
By night I heard them on the track,
Their troop came hard upon our back,
With their long gallop, which can tire
The hound's deep hate, and hunter's fire
Where'er we flew they follow'd on,
Nor left us with the morning sun,
Behind I saw them, scarce a foot,
At day-break winding through the wood,
And through the night had heard their feet
Their stealing, rustling step repeat
Oh! how I wish'd for spear or sword,
At least to die amidst the horde,

And perish — if it must be so —
At bay, destroying many a foe
When first my courser's race begun,
I wish'd the goal already won,
But now I doubted strength and speed.
Vain doubt! his swift and savage breed
Had neev'd him like the mountam-roe,
Nor faster falls the blinding snow
Which whelms the peasant near the door
Whose threshold he shall cross no more,
Bewilder'd with the dazzling blast,
Than through the forest-paths he past —
Untired, untamed, and worse than wild,
All furious as a favour'd child
Balk'd of its wish, or fiercer still —
A woman piqued — who has her will

XIII<sup>f</sup>

“ The wood was past, 'twas more than noon,
But chill the air, although in June,
Or it might be my veins ran cold —
Prolong'd endurance tames the bold,
And I was then not what I seem,
But headlong as a wintry stream,
And wore my feelings out before
I well could count their causes o'er.
And what with fury, fear, and wrath,
The tortures which beset my path,
Cold, hunger, sorrow, shame, distress,
Thus bound in nature's nakedness,
Sprung from a race whose rising blood
When stirr'd beyond its calmer mood,

And trodden hard upon, is like
 The rattle-snake's, in act to strike,
 What marvel if this worn-out trunk
 Beneath its woes a moment sunk ?
 The earth gave way, the skies roll'd round,
 I seem'd to sink upon the ground,
 But err'd, for I was fastly bound
 My heart turn'd sick, my brain grew sore,
 And throb'd awhile, then beat no more
 The skies spun like a mighty wheel,
 I saw the trees like drunkards reel,
 And a slight flash sprang o'er my eyes,
 Which saw no farther he who dies
 Can die no more than then I died.
 O'ertortured by that ghastly tide,
 I felt the blackness come and go,

And strove to wake, but could not make My senses climb up from below
 I felt as on a plank at sea,
 When all the waves that dash o'er thee,
 At the same time upheave and whelm,
 And hurl thee towards a desert realm
 My undulating life was as
 The fancied lights that flitting pass
 Our shut eyes in deep midnight, when Fever begins upon the brain,
 But soon it pass'd, with little pain,

But a confusion worse than such

I own that I should deem it much,
 Dying, to feel the same again,
 And yet I do suppose we must Feel far more ere we turn to dust

No matter, I have bared my blow
Full in Death's face—before—and now (1)

XIV

“ My thoughts came back, where was I? Cold,
And numb, and giddy pulse by pulse
Life reassumed its lingering hold,
And throb by throb till grown a pang
Which for a moment would convulse,
My blood reflow'd, though thick and chill,
My ear with uncouth noises rang,
My heart began once more to thrill,
My sight return'd, though dim, alas!
And thicken'd, as it were, with glass
Methought the dash of waves was nigh,
There was a gleam too of the sky,
Studded with stars,—it is no dream,
The wild horse swims the wilder stream!
The bright broad river's gushing tide
Sweeps, winding onward, far and wide,
And we are half-way, struggling o'er
To yon unknown and silent shore
The waters broke my hollow trance,
And with a temporary strength
My stiffen'd limbs were rebaptized.
My courser's broad breast proudly braves,
And dashes off the ascending waves,

(1) [The reviewer already quoted says,—“ As the Hetman proceeds, it strikes us there is a much closer resemblance to the fiery flow of Walter Scott's chivalrous narrative, than in any of Lord Byron's previous pieces. Nothing can be grander than the sweep and torrent of the horses' speed, and the slow, unwearied, inflexible pursuit of the wolves ”]

And onward we advance !
We reach the slippery shore at length,
    A haven I but little prized,
For all behind was dark and dear,
And all before was night and fear
How many hours of night or day
In those suspended pangs I lay,
I could not tell, I scarcely knew
If this were human breath I drew

xv

“ With glossy skin, and dripping mane,
    And reeling limbs, and reeking flank,
The wild steed's sinewy nerves still strain
    Up the repelling bank
We gain the top a boundless plain
Spreads through the shadow of the night,
    And onward, onward, onward, seems,
    Like precipices in our dreams,
To stretch beyond the sight,
And here and there a speck of white,
    Or scatter'd spot of dusky green,
In masses broke into the light,
As rose the moon upon my night.
    But nought distinctly seen
In the dim waste would indicate
The omen of a cottage gate,
No twinkling taper from afar
Stood like a hospitable star,
Not even an ignis-fatuus rose
To make him merry with my woes

That very cheat had cheer'd me then !
Although detected, welcome still,
Reminding me, through every ill,
Of the abodes of men.

XVI

“ Onward we went—but slack and slow ,
His savage force at length o'erspent,
The drooping courser, faint and low,
All feebly foaming went
A sickly infant had had power
To guide him forward in that hour ;
But useless all to me.
His new-born tameness nought avail'd,
My limbs were bound , my force had fail'd,
Perchance, had they been free
With feeble effort still I tried
To rend the bonds so starkly tied—
But still it was in vain ,
My limbs were only wrung the more,
And soon the idle strife gave o'er,
Which but prolong'd their pain
The dizzy race seem'd almost done,
Although no goal was nearly won
Some streaks announced the coming sun—
How slow, alas ! he came !
Methought that mist of dawning gray
Would never dapple into day ,
How heavily it roll'd away—
Before the eastern flame

Rose crimson, and deposed the stars,
 And call'd the radiance from their cars, <sup>(1)</sup>
 And fill'd the earth, from his deep throne,
 With lonely lustre, all his own

XVII

“ Up rose the sun, the mists were curl'd
 Back from the solitary world
 Which lay around—behind—before,
 What boot'd it to traverse o'er
 Plain, forest, river? Man nor brute,
 Nor dint of hoof, nor print of foot,
 Lay in the wild luxuriant soil;
 No sign of travel—none of toil,
 The very air was mute,
 And not an insect's shrill small horn,
 Nor matin bird's new voice was borne
 From herb nor thick'et Many a weist,
 Panting as if his heart would burst,
 The weary brute still stagger'd on,
 And still we were—or seem'd—alone.
 At length, while reeling on our way,
 Methought I heard a course's neigh,
 From out yon tuft of blackening firs
 Is it the wind those branches stir?
 No, no! from out the forest prance
 A trampling troop, I see them come!
 In one vast squadron they advance!
 I strove to cry—my lips were dumb.

(1) [MS — “ Rose crimson, and forbade the stars
 To sparkle in their radiant cars ” — E ]

The steeds rush on in plunging pride,
But where are they the reins to guide?
A thousand horse—and none to ride!
With flowing tail, and flying mane,
Wide nostrils—never stretch'd by pain,
Mouths bloodless to the bit or rein,
And feet that iron never shod,
And flanks unscarr'd by spur or rod,
A thousand horse, the wild, the free,
Like waves that follow o'er the sea,
Came thickly thundering on,
As if our faint approach to meet,
The sight re-nerved my courser's feet,
A moment staggering, feebly fleet—
A moment, with a faint low neigh,
He answer'd, and then fell,
With gasps and glazing eyes he lay,
And reeking limbs immoveable,
His first and last career is done!
On came the troop—they saw him stoop,
They saw me strangely bound along
His back with many a bloody thong
They stop—they start—they snuff the air,
Gallop a moment here and there,
Approach, retire, wheel round and round,
Then plunging back with sudden bound,
Headed by one black mighty steed,
Who seem'd the patriarch of his breed,
Without a single speck or hair
Of white upon his shaggy hide,
They snort—they foam—neigh—swerve aside,

And backward to the forest fly,
By instinct, from a human eye —

They left me there to my despair,
Link'd to the dead and stiffening wretch,
Whose lifeless limbs beneath me stretch,
Relieved from that unwonted weight,
From whence I could not extricate
Nor him nor me—and there we lay

The dying on the dead !
I little deem'd another day
Would see my houseless, helpless head.

“ And there from morn till twilight bound,
I felt the heavy hours toil round,
With just enough of life to see
My last of suns go down on me,
In hopeless certainty of mind,
That makes us feel at length resign'd
To that which our foreboding years
Presents the worst and last of fears
Inevitable—even a boon,
Nor more unkind for coming soon ,
Yet shunn'd and dreaded with such care,
As if it only were a snare

That prudence might escape
At times both wish'd for and implored,
At times sought with self-pointed sword,
Yet still a dark and hideous close
To even intolerable woes,
And welcome in no shape

And, strange to say, the sons of pleasure,
They who have revell'd beyond measure
In beauty, wassail, wine, and treasure,
Die calm, or calmer, oft than he Whose heritage was misery
For he who hath in turn run through
All that was beautiful and new,

Hath nought to hope, and nought to leave,
And, save the future, (which is view'd
Not quite as men are base or good,
But as their nerves may be endued,)

With nought perhaps to grieve —
The wretch still hopes his woes must end,
And Death, whom he should deem his friend,
Appears, to his distemper'd eyes,
Arriv'd to rob him of his prize,
The tree of his new Paradise
To-morrow would have given him all,
Repaid his pangs, repaid his fall,
To-morrow would have been the first
Of days no more deplored or curs'd,
But bright, and long, and beckoning years,
Seen dazzling through the mist of tears,
Guerdon of many a painful hour,
To-morrow would have given him power
To rule, to shine, to smite, to save —
And must it dawn upon his grave ?

XVIII

“ The sun was sinking — still I lay Cham'd to the chill and stiffening steed,

I thought to mingle there our clay ,
And my dim eyes of death had need,
No hope arose of being freed
I cast my last looks up the sky,
And there between me and the sun
I saw the expecting raven fly,
Who scarce would wait till both should die,
Ere his repast begun ,
He flew, and perch'd, then flew once more,
And each time nearer than before ,
I saw his wing through twilight flit,
And once so near me he alit
I could have smote, but lack'd the strength ,
But the slight motion of my hand,
And feeble scratching of the sand,
The excited throat's faint struggling noise,
Which scarcely could be call'd a voice,
Together scared him off at length —
I know no more — my latest dream
Is something of a lovely star
Which fix'd my dull eyes from afar,
And went and came with wandering beam,
And of the cold, dull, swimming, dense Sensation of recurring sense,
And then subsiding back to death,
And then again a little breath,
A little thrill, a short suspense,
An icy sickness curling o'er
My heart, and sparks that cross'd my brain —
A gasp, a throb, a start of pain,
A sigh, and nothing more.

XIX

“ I woke — Where was I ? — Do I see
A human face look down on me ?
And doth a roof above me close ?
Do these limbs on a couch repose ?
Is this a chamber where I lie ?
And is it mortal yon bright eye,
That watches me with gentle glance ?

    I closed my own again once more,
As doubtful that the former glance

    Could not as yet be o’er.

A slender girl, long-han’d, and tall,
Sate watching by the cottage wall,
The sparkle of her eye I caught,
Even with my first return of thought,
For ever and anon she threw

    A plying, pitying glance on me

    With her black eyes so wild and free
I gazed, and gazed, until I knew

    No vision it could be, —

But that I lived, and was released
From adding to the vulture’s feast
And when the Cossack maid beheld
My heavy eyes at length unseal’d,
She smiled — and I essay’d to speak,

    But fail’d — and she approach’d, and made

    With lip and finger signs that said,
I must not strive as yet to break
The silence, till my strength should be Enough to leave my accents free,
And then her hand on mine she laid,

And smooth'd the pillow for my head,
And stole along on tiptoe tread,

And gently oped the door, and spake
In whispers — ne'er was voice so sweet !
Even music follow'd her light feet, —

But those she call'd were not awake,
And she went forth, but, ere she pass'd,
Another look on me she cast,

Another sign she made, to say,
That I had nought to fear, that all
Were near, at my command or call,

And she would not delay
Her due return — while she was gone,
Methought I felt too much alone

XX

“ She came with mother and with sire —
What need of more ? — I will not tne
With long recital of the rest,
Since I became the Cossack's guest
They found me senseless on the plain —

They bore me to the nearest hut —
They brought me into life again —
Me — one day o'er their realm to reign !

Thus the vain fool who strove to glut
His rage, refining on my pain,

Sent me forth to the wilderness,
Bound, naked, bleeding, and alone,
To pass the desert to a throne, —

What mortal his own doom may guess ? —

Let none despond, let none despair !
 To-morrow the Borysthènes
 May see our couriers graze at ease
 Upon his Turkish bank,—and never Had I such welcome for a river
 As I shall yield when safely there (1)
 Comrades, good night !” — The Hetman threw
 His length beneath the oak-tree shade,
 With leafy couch already made,
 A bed nor comfortless nor new
 To him, who took his rest whene’er
 The hour arrived, no matter where His eyes the hastening slumbers steep
 And if ye marvel Charles forgot
 To thank his tale, he wonder’d not, —
 The king had been an hour asleep (2)

(1) [“ Charles, having perceived that the day was lost, and that his only chance of safety was to retire with the utmost precipitation, suffered himself to be mounted on horseback, and with the remains of his army fled to a place called Perewolochna, situated in the angle formed by the junction of the Vorskla and the Borysthènes. Here, accompanied by Mazeppa, and a few hundreds of his followers, Charles swam over the latter great river, and proceeding over a desolate country, in danger of perishing with hunger, at length reached the Bog, where he was kindly received by the Turkish pacha. The Russian envoy at the Sublime Porte demanded that Mazeppa should be delivered up to Peter, but the old Hetman of the Cossacks escaped this fate by taking a disease which hastened his death.” — BARROW’S Peter the Great, pp. 196—203.]

(2) [The copy of Mazeppa sent to this country by Lord Byron, is in the handwriting of Theresa, Countess Guiccioli, and it is impossible not to suspect that the Poet had some circumstances of his own personal history in his mind, when he portrayed the fair Polish Theresa, her youthful lover, and the jealous rage of the old Count Palatine — E.]

ODE ON VENICE.

[This Ode was transmitted from Venice, along with Mazeppa — E.]

ODE ON VENICE.

I

OH Venice ! Venice ! when thy arble walls
 Are level with the waters, there shall be
 A cry of nations o'er thy sunken halls,
 A loud lament along the sweeping sea !
 If I, a northern wanderer, weep for thee,
 What should thy sons do ?—any thing but weep .
 And yet they only murmur in their sleep
 In contrast with their fathers—as the slime,
 The dull green ooze of the receding deep,
 Is with the dashing of the spring-tide foam,
 That drives the sailor shipless to his home,
 Are they to those that were, and thus they creep,
 Crouching and crab-like, through their sapping streets
 Oh ! agony—that centuries should reap
 No mellow harvest ! Thirteen hundred years
 Of wealth and glory turn'd to dust and tears ,
 And every monument the stranger meets,
 Church, palace, pillar, as a mourner greets ,
 And even the Lion all subdued appears,
 And the harsh sound of the barbarian drum,
 With dull and daily dissonance, repeats

The echo of thy tyrant's voice along
The soft waves, once all musical to song,
'That heaved beneath the moonlight with the throng
Of gondolas—and to the busy hum
Of cheerful creatures, whose most sinful deeds
Were but the overbeating of the heart,
And flow of too much happiness, which needs
The aid of age to turn its course apart
From the luxuriant and voluptuous flood
Of sweet sensations, battling with the blood
But these are better than the gloomy errors,
The weeds of nations in their last decay,
When Vice walks forth with her unsoften'd terrors,
And Mirth is madness, and but smiles to slay,
And Hope is nothing but a false delay,
The sick man's lightning half an hour ere death,
When Faintness, the last mortal birth of Pain,
And apathy of limb, the dull beginning
Of the cold staggering race which Death is winning,
Steals vein by vein and pulse by pulse away,
Yet so relieving the o'er-tortured clay,
To him appears renewal of his breath,
And freedom the mere numbness of his chain,—
And then he talks of life, and how again
He feels his spirits soaring—albeit weak,
And of the fresher air, which he would seek,
And as he whispers knows not that he gasps,
That his thin finger feels not what it clasps,
And so the film comes o'er him—and the dizzy
Chamber swims round and round—and shadows busy,
At which he vainly catches, flit and gleam,
Till the last rattle chokes the strangled scream,

And all is ice and blackness,—and the earth
That which it was the moment ere our birth

II

There is no hope for rations!—Search the page

Of many thousand years—the daily scene,
The flow and ebb of each recurring age,

The everlasting to be which hath been,

Hath taught us nought or little still we learn
On things that rot beneath our weight, and wear

Our strength away in wrestling with the air,

For 'tis our nature strikes us down the beasts

Slaughter'd in hourly hecatombs for feasts

Are of as high an order—they must go [slaughter

Even where their driver goads them, though to

Ye men, who pour your blood for kings as water,

What have they given your children in return?

A heritage of servitude and woes,

A blindfold bondage, where your hue is blows

What! do not yet the red-hot ploughshares burn,

O'er which you stumble in a false ideal,

And deem this proof of loyalty the real,

Kissing the hand that guides you to your scars,

And glorying as you tread the glowing bars?

All that your sires have left you, all that Time

Bequeaths of free, and History of sublime,

Spring from a different theme!—Ye see and read,

Admire and sigh, and then succumb and bleed!

Save the few spirits, who, despite of all,

And wiser than all, the sudden crimes engender'd

By the down-thundering of the prison-wall,

And thrust to swallow the sweet waters tender'd,

Gushing from Freedom's fountains—when the crowd,
 Madden'd with centuries of draught, are loud,
 And trample on each other to obtain
 The cup which brings oblivion of a chain
 Heavy and sore,—in which long yoked they plough'd
 The sand,—or if there sprung the yellow grain,
 'Twas not for them, their necks were too much bow'd,
 And their dead palates chew'd the cud of pain —
 Yes! the few spirits—who, despite of deeds
 Which they abhor, confound not with the cause
 Those momentary starts from Nature's laws,
 Which, like the pestilence and earthquake, smite
 But for a term, then pass, and leave the earth
 With all her seasons to repair the blight
 With a few summers, and again put forth
 Cities and generations—fair, when free—
 For, Tyranny, there blooms no bud for thee!

III

Gloiy and Empire! once upon these towers
 With Freedom—godlike Triad! how ye sate!
 The league of mightiest nations, in those hours
 When Venice was an envy, might abate,
 But did not quench, her spirit—in her fate
 All were enwrapp'd the feasted monarchs knew
 And loved their hostess, nor could learn to hate,
 Although they humbled—with the kingly few
 The many felt, for from all days and climes
 She was the voyager's worship,—even her crimes
 Were of the softer order—born of Love,
 She drank no blood, nor fatten'd on the dead,
 But gladden'd where her harmless conquests spread;

For these restored the Cross, that from above
 Hallow'd her sheltering banners, which incessant
 Flew between earth and the unholy Crescent,
 Which, if it waned and dwindled, Earth may thank
 The city it has clothed in chains, which clank
 Now, creaking in the ears of those who owe
 The name of Freedom to her glorious struggles,
 Yet she but shares with them a common woe,
 And call'd the "kingdom" of a conquering foe,—
 But knows what all—and, most of all, we know—
 With what set gilded terms a tyrant juggles!

IV

The name of Commonwealth is past and gone
 O'er the three fractions of the groaning globe,
 Venice is crush'd, and Holland deigns to own
 A sceptre, and endues the purple robe,
 If the free Switzer yet bestrides alone
 His chainless mountains, 'tis but for a time,
 For tyranny of late is cunning grown,
 And in its own good season tramples down
 The sparkles of our ashes    One great clime,
 Whose vigorous offspring by dividing ocean
 Are kept apart and nursed in the devotion
 Of Freedom, which then fathers fought for, and Bequeath'd—a heritage of heart and hand,
 And proud distinction from each other land,
 Whose sons must bow them at a monarch's motion,
 As if his senseless sceptre were a wand
 Full of the magic of exploded science—
 Still one great clime in full and free defiance,
 Yet rears her crest, unconquer'd and sublime,

Above the far Atlantic ! — She has taught
Her Esau-biethien that the haughty flag,
The floating fence of Albion's feeble crag,
May strike to those whose red right hands have bought

Rights cheaply earn'd with blood — Still, still, for ever
Better, though each man's life-blood were a river,
That it should flow, and overflow, than creep
Through thousand lazy channels in our veins,
Damm'd like the dull canal with locks and chains,
And moving, as a sick man in his sleep,
Three paces, and then faltering — better be
Where the extinguish'd Spartans still are free,
In their proud charnel of Thermopylæ,
Than stagnate in our marsh, — or o'er the deep
Fly, and one current to the ocean add,
One spirit to the souls our fathers had,
One freeman more, America, to thee !

THE
MORGANTE MAGGIORE
OF PULCI

[THE following translation was executed at Ravenna in February, 1820, and first saw the light in the pages of the unfortunate journal called "The Liberal" The merit of it, as Lord Byron over and over states in his letters, consists in the wonderful verbum pro verbo closeness of the version It was, in fact, an exercise of skill in this art, and cannot be fairly estimated, without continuous reference to the original Italian, which the reader will now, for the first time, find placed opposite to the text Those who want full information, and clear philosophical views, as to the origin of the Romantic Poetry of the Italians, will do well to read at length an article on that subject, from the pen of the late Ugo Foscolo, in the forty-second number of the Quarterly Review We extract from it the passage in which that learned writer applies himself more particularly to the Morgante of Pulci After showing that all the poets of this class adopted as the groundwork of their fictions, the old wild materials which had for ages formed the stock in trade of the professed story-tellers, — in those days a class of persons holding the same place in Christendom, and more especially in Italy, which their brothers still maintain all over the East, — Foscolo thus proceeds —

"The customary forms of the narrative all find a place in romantic poetry such are the sententious reflections suggested by the matters which he has just related, or arising in anticipation of those which he is about to relate, and which the story-teller always opens when he resumes his recitations, his defence of his own merits against the attacks of rivals in trade, and his formal leave taking when he parts from his audience, and invites them to meet him again on the morrow This method of winding up each portion of the poem is a favourite among the romantic poets, who constantly finish their cantos with a distich, of which the words may vary, but the sense is uniform.

'All' altro canto ve farò sentire,
Se all' altro canto mi verrete a udire.' — ARIOSTO

Or at the end of another canto, according to Harrington's translation, —

'I now cut-off abruptly here my rhyme,
And keep my tale unto another time'

"The forms and materials of these popular stories were adopted by writers of a superior class, who considered the vulgar tales of their predeceutors as blocks of marble finely tinted and variegated by the hand of nature, but which might afford a master piece, when tastefully worked and polished. The romantic poets treated the traditionary fictions just as Dante did the legends invented by the monks to maintain their mastery over weak minds. He formed them into a poem, which became the admiration of every age and nation but Dante and Petrarca were poets, who, though universally celebrated, were not universally understood. The learned found employment in writing comments upon their poems, but the nation, without even excepting the higher ranks, knew them only by name. At the beginning of the fifteenth century, a few obscure authors began to write romances in prose and in rhyme, taking for their subject the wars of Charlemagne and Orlando, or sometimes the adventures of Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table. These works were so pleasing, that they were rapidly multiplied but the bards of romance cared little about style or versification,—they sought for adventures, and enchantments, and miracles. We here obtain at least a partial explanation of the rapid decline of Italian poetry, and the amazing corruption of the Italian language, which took place immediately after the death of Petrarch, and which proceeded from bad to worse until the era of Lorenzo de' Medici.

It was then that Pulci composed his Morgante for the amusement of Madonna Lucrezia, the mother of Lorenzo, and he used to recite it at table to Ficino, and Politian, and Lorenzo, and the other illustrious characters who then flourished at Florence yet Pulci adhered strictly to the original plan of the popular story tellers, and if his successors have embellished them so that they can scarcely be recognised, it is certain that in no other poem can they be found so genuine and native as in the Morgante. Pulci accommodated himself, though sportively, to the genius of his age: classical taste and sound criticism began to prevail, and great endeavours were making by the learned to separate historical truth from the chaos of fable and tradition so that, though Pulci introduced the most extravagant fables, he affected to complain of the errors of his predecessors. 'I grieve,' he said, 'for my Emperor Charlemagne for I see that his history has been badly written and worse understood.'

'E del mio Carlo imperador m'increbbe,
E' stata questa istoria, a quel ch'io veggio,
Di Carlo, male intesa e scritta peggio.'

"And whilst he quotes the great historian Leonardo Aretino with respect, he professes to believe the authority of the holy Archbishop Turpin, who is also one of the heroes of the poem. In another passage, where he imitates the apologies of the story tellers, he makes a neat allusion to the taste of his audience. 'I know,' he says, 'that I must proceed straight forward, and not tell a single lie in the course of my tale. This is not a story of mere invention and if I go one step out of the right road, one chastises, another criticises, a third scolds—they try to drive me mad—but in fact they are out of their senses.'

"Pulci's versification is remarkably fluent. Yet he is deficient in melody, his language is pure, and his expressions flow naturally, but his phrases are abrupt and unconnected, and he frequently writes ungrammatically. His vigour degenerates into harshness, and his love of brevity prevents the development of his poetical imagery. He bears all the marks of rude genius, he was capable of delicate pleasantry, yet his smiles are usually bitter and severe. His humour never arises from points, but from unexpected situation strongly contrasted. The Emperor Charlemagne sentences King Marsilius of Spain to be hanged for high treason, and Archbishop Turpin kindly offers his services on the occasion.

‘E’ disse Io vo, Marsilio, che tu muoja
Dove tu ordinasti il tradimento
Disse Turpino Io voglio fare il boja
Carlo rispose Ed io son ben contento
Che sia trattato di questi due cani
L’opera santa con le sante mani’

“Here we have an emperor superintending the execution of a king, who is hanged in the presence of a vast multitude, all of whom are greatly edified at beholding an archbishop officiating in the character of a finisher of the law. Before this adventure took place, Caradore had despatched an ambassador to the emperor, complaining of the shameful conduct of a wicked Paladin, who had seduced the princess his daughter. The orator does not present himself with modern diplomatic courtesy—

‘Macon t’abbatta come traditore,
O disleale e ingiusto imperadore’
A Caradore è stato scritto, O Carlo,
O Carlo! O Carlo! che crollava la testa
De la tua corte, che non puoi negarlo,
De la sua figlia cosa disonesta’

“‘O Charles,’ he cried, ‘Charles, Charles’—and as he cried
He shook his head—‘a sad complaint I bring
Of shameful acts which cannot be denied
King Caradore has ascertain’d the thing,
Which comes moreover proved and verified
By letters from your own side of the water
Respecting the behaviour of his daughter’

“Such scenes may appear somewhat strange, but Caradore’s embassy, and the execution of King Marsilius, are told in strict conformity to the notions of the common people, and as they must still be described if we wished to imitate the popular story tellers. If Pulci be occasionally refined and delicate, his snatches of amenity resulted from the national character of the Florentines, and the revival of letters. But at the same time, we must trace to national character, and to the influence of his daily companions, the buffoonery which, in the opinion of foreigners, frequently disgraces the poem. M. Ginguené has criticised Pulci in the usual style of his countrymen. He attributes modern manners to ancient times, and takes it for granted that the individuals of every other nation think and act like modern Frenchmen. On these principles, he concludes that Pulci, both with respect to his subject and to his mode of treating it, intended only to write burlesque poetry, because, as he says, such buffoonery could not have been introduced into a composition recited to Lorenzo de' Medici and his enlightened guests, if the author had intended to be in earnest. In the fine portrait of Lorenzo given by Machiavelli at the end of his Florentine history, the historian complains that he took more pleasure in the company of jesters and buffoons than be seemed such a man. It is a little singular that Benedetto Varchi, a contemporary historian, makes the same complaint of Machiavelli himself. Indeed, many known anecdotes of Machiavelli, no less than his fugitive pieces, prove that it was only when he was acting the statesman that he wished to be grave, and that he could laugh like other men when he laid aside his dignity. We do not think he was in the wrong. But, whatever opinion may be formed on the subject, we shall yet be forced to conclude that great men may be compelled to blame the manners of their times, without being able to withstand their influence. In other respects, the poem of Pulci is serious, both in subject and in tone. And here we shall repeat a general observation, which we advise our readers to apply to all the romantic poems of the Italians—That their comic humour arises from the contrast between the constant endeavours of the writers to adhere to the forms and subjects of the popular story-tellers, and the efforts made at the same time by the genius of these writers to render such materials interesting and sublime.

“This simple elucidation of the causes of the poetical character of the Morgante has been overlooked by the critics, and they have therefore disputed with great earnestness during the last two centuries, whether the Morgante is written in jest or earnest, and whether Pulci is not an atheist, who wrote in verse for the express purpose of scoffing at all religion. Mr Merivale inclines, in his Orlando in Roncesvalles, to the opinion of M Ginguene, that the Morgante is decidedly to be considered as a burlesque poem, and a satire against the Christian religion. Yet Mr Merivale himself acknowledges that it is wound up with a tragical effect, and dignified by religious sentiment, and is therefore forced to ‘leave the question amongst the unexplained, and perhaps inexplicable phenomena of the human mind.’ If a similar question had not been already decided, both in regard to Shakspeare and to Ariosto, it might be still a subject of dispute whether the former intended to write tragedies, and whether the other did not mean to burlesque his heroes. It is a happy thing that, with regard to those two great writers, the war has ended by the fortunate intervention of the general body of readers, who on such occasions, form their judgment with less erudition and with less prejudice than the critics. But Pulci is little read, and his age is little known. We are told by Mr Merivale, that ‘the points of abstruse theology are discussed in the Morgante with a degree of sceptical freedom which we should imagine to be altogether remote from the spirit of the fifteenth century.’ Mr Merivale follows M Ginguene, who follows Voltaire. And the philosopher of Ferney, who was always beating up in all quarters for allies against Christianity, collected all the scriptural passages of Pulci, upon which he commented in his own way. But it is only since the Council of

Trent, that any doubt which might be raised on a religious dogma exposed an author to the charge of impiety, whilst, in the fifteenth century, a Catholic might be sincerely devout, and yet allow himself a certain degree of latitude in theological doubt. At one and the same time the Florentines might well believe in the Gospel and laugh at a doctor of divinity for it was exactly at this era that they had been spectators of the memorable controversies between the representatives of the eastern and western churches. Greek and Latin bishops from every corner of Christendom had assembled at Florence for the purpose of trying whether they could possibly understand each other, and when they separated, they hated each other worse than before. At the very time when Pulci was composing his Morgante, the clergy of Florence protested against the excommunications pronounced by Sixtus IV, and with expressions by which his holiness was anathematised in his turn. During these proceedings, an archbishop, convicted of being a papal emissary, was hanged from one of the windows of the government palace at Florence: this event may have suggested to Pulci the idea of converting another archbishop into a hangman. The romantic poets substituted literary and scientific observations for the trivial digressions of the story-tellers. This was a great improvement and although it was not well managed by Pulci, yet he presents us with much curious incidental matter. In quoting his philosophical friend and contemporary Matteo Palmeri, he explains the instinct of brutes by a bold hypothesis — he supposes that they are animated by evil spirits. This idea gave no offence to the theologians of the fifteenth century, but it excited much orthodox indignation when Father Bougeant, a French monk, brought it forward as a new theory of his own. Mr Merivale, after observing that Pulci died before the discovery of America by Columbus, quotes a passage 'which will become a very interesting document for the philosophical historian. We give it in his prose translation. — 'The water is level through its whole extent, although, like the earth, it has the form of a globe. Mankind in those ages were much more ignorant than now. Hercules would blush at this day for having fixed his columns. Vessels will soon pass far beyond them. They may soon reach another hemisphere, because every thing tends to its centre, in like manner, as by a divine mystery, the earth is suspended in the midst of the stars, here below are cities and empires, which were ancient. The inhabitants of those regions were called Antipodes. They have plants and animals as well as you, and wage wars as well as you.' — Morgante, c. xxv st. 229, &c.

"The more we consider the traces of ancient science, which break in transient flashes through the darkness of the middle ages, and which gradually re-illuminated the horizon, the more shall we be disposed to adopt the hypothesis suggested by Bailly, and supported by him with seductive eloquence. He maintained that all the acquirements of the Greeks and Romans had been transmitted to them as the wrecks and fragments of the knowledge once possessed by primordial nations, by empires of sages and philosophers, who were afterwards swept from the face of the globe by some overwhelming catastrophe. His theory may be considered as extravagant, but if the literary productions of the Romans were not yet extant, it would seem incredible, that, after the lapse of a few centuries the civilisation of the Augustan age could have been succeeded in Italy by such barbarity. The Italians were so ignorant, that they forgot their family names, and before the eleventh century individuals were known only by their Christian names. They had an indistinct idea, in the middle ages, of the existence of the antipodes, but it was a reminiscence of ancient knowledge. Dante has indicated the number and position of the stars composing the polar constellation of the Astral hemisphere. At the same time he tells us, that when Lucifer was hurled from the celestial regions, the arch devil transixed the globe, half his body remained on our side of the centre of the earth, and half on the other side. The shock given to the earth by his fall drove a great portion of the waters of the ocean to the southern hemisphere, and only one high mountain remained uncovered, upon which Dante places his purgatory. As the fall of Lucifer happened before the creation of Adam, it is evident that Dante did not admit that the southern hemisphere had ever been inhabited, but, about thirty years afterwards, Petrarch, who was better versed in the ancient writers, ventured to hint that the sun shone upon mortals who were unknown to us.

‘ Nella stagion che il ciel rapido inchina
Vers’ occidente, e che il di nostro vola
A gente che di la forse l’ aspetta.’

“ In the course of half a century after Petrarch, another step was gained. The existence of the antipodes was fully demonstrated. Pulci raises a devil to announce the fact, but it had been taught to him by his fellow-citizen Piolo Toscanelli, an excellent astronomer and mathematician, who wrote in his old age to Christopher Columbus, exhorting him to undertake his expedition. “ A few stanzas have been translated by Mr Merivale, with some slight variations, which do not wrong the original. They may be considered as a specimen of Pulci’s poetry, when he writes with imagination and feeling. Orlando bids farewell to his flying horse

‘ His faithful steed, that long had served him well
In peace and war, now closed his languid eye,
Kneel’d at his feet, and seem’d to say “ Farewell !
I’ve brought thee to the destined port, and die ”
Orlando felt anew his sorrows swell
When he beheld his Brighadoro lie
Stretch’d on the field, that crystal fount beside,
Stiffen’d his limbs, and cold his warlike pride
And, “ O my much loved steed, my generous friend, Companion of my better years ! ” he said,
“ And have I lived to see so sad an end
Of all thy toils, and thy brave spirit fled ?
O pardon me, if e’er I did offend
With hasty wrong that mild and faithful head ! ” —
Just then, his eyes a momentary light
Flash’d quick, — then closed again in endless night’

" When Orlando is expiring on the field of battle, an angel descends to him, and promises that Alda his wife shall join him in paradise

' Bright with eternal youth and fadeless bloom, Thine Aldabella thou shalt behold once more,
Partaker of a bliss beyond the tomb
With her whom Sinai's holy hills adore,
Crown'd with fresher flowers, whose colour and perfume
Surpass what Spring's rich bosom ever bore—
Thy mourning widow here she will remain,
And be in Heaven thy joyful spouse again '

" Whilst the soul of Orlando was soaring to heaven, a soft and plaintive strain was heard, and angelic voices joined in celestial harmony. They sang the psalm, ' When Israel went out of Egypt,' and the singers were known to be angels from the trembling of their wings

' Poi si senti con un suon dolce e fioco
Certa armonia con sì soavi accenti
Che ben pareva d' angelici stromenti
* * * * *

' In cantu Israhel, cantar, de Egypto,
Sent to fu dagli angeli solenne
Che sconobbe al tremolar le penne '

" Dante has inserted passages from the Vulgate in his Divina Commedia, and Petrarch, the most religious of poets, quotes Scripture even when he is courting. Yet they were not accused of impiety. Neither did Pulci incur the danger of a posthumous excommunication until after the Reformation, when Pius V (a Dominican, who was turned into a saint by a subsequent pope) promoted the welfare of holy mother church by burning a few wicked books, and hanging a few troublesome authors. The notion that Pulci was in the odour of heresy influenced the opinion of Milton, who only speaks of the Morgante as a ' sportful romance.' Milton was anxious to prove that Catholic writers had ridiculed popish divines, and that the Bible had been subjected to private judgment, notwithstanding the popes had prohibited the reading of it. His ardour did not allow him to stop and examine whether this prohibition might not be posterior to the death of Pulci. Milton had studied Pulci to advantage. The knowledge which he ascribes to his devils, their despairing repentance, the lofty sentiments which he bestows upon some of them, and, above all, the principle that, notwithstanding their crime and its punishment, they retain the grandeur and perfection of angelic nature, are all to be found in the Morgante as well as in Paradise Lost. Ariosto and Tasso have imitated other passages. When great poets borrow from their inferiors in genius, they turn their acquisitions to such advantage that it is difficult to detect their thefts, and still more difficult to blame them.

" The poem is filled with kings, knights, giant, and devils. There are many battles and many duels. Wars rise out of wars, and empires are conquered in a day. Pulci treats us with plenty of magic and enchantment. His love adventures are not peculiarly interesting, and, with the exception of four or five leading personages, his characters are of no moment. The fable turns wholly upon the hatred which Ganellon, the felon knight of Maganza, bears towards Orlando and the rest of the Christian Paladins. Charlemagne is easily practised upon by Ganellon, his prime confidant and man of business. So he treats Orlando and his friends in the most scurvy manner imaginable, and sends them out to hard service in the wars against France. Ganellon is despatched to Spain to treat with King Marsilus, being also instructed to obtain the cession of a kingdom for Orlando, but he conceals a treacherous device with the Spaniards, and Orlando is killed at the battle of Roncesvalles. The intrigues of Ganellon, his spite, his patience, his obstinacy, his dissimulation, his affected humility, and his inexhaustible powers of intrigue, are admirably depicted, and his character constitutes the chief and finest feature in the poem. Charlemagne is a worthy monarch, but easily gulled. Orlando is a real hero, chaste and disinterested, and who fights in good earnest for the propagation of the faith. He baptizes the giant Morgante, who afterwards serves him like a faithful squire. There is another giant, whose name is Margutte. Morgante falls in with Margutte, and they become sworn brothers. Margutte is a very infidel giant, ready to confess his failings, and full of drollery. He sets all a laughing, readers, giants, devils, and heroes, and he finishes his career by laughing till he bursts."

The reader is referred to Vol. IV p. 283-287 antè, for Lord Byron's letters written when he was engaged on his version of the Morgante. Great part of them is occupied with anxious endeavours to ascertain whether usbergo means a helmet or a cumass, a point on which the slightest knowledge of German would have been sufficient to make him easy. Usbergo is only another form of our own hauberk, and both are manifest corruptions of the German halsberg, i. e. covering of the neck — E.]

ADVERTISEMENT

THE Morgante Maggiore, of the first canto of which this translation is offered, divides with the Orlando Innamorato the honour of having formed and suggested the style and story of Ariosto. The great defects of Boiardo were his treating too seriously the narratives of chivalry, and his harsh style. Ariosto, in his continuation, by a judicious mixture of the gaiety of Pulci, has avoided the one, and Berni, in his reformation of Boiardo's poem, has corrected the other. Pulci may be considered as the precursor and model of Berni altogether, as he has partly been to Ariosto, however inferior to both his copyists. He is no less the founder of a new style of poetry very lately sprung up in England. I allude to that of the ingenious Whistlercraft. The serious poems on Roncesvalles in the same language, and more particularly the excellent one of Mr. Melville, are to be traced to the same source. It has never yet been decided entirely whether Pulci's intention was or was not to deride the religion which is one of his favourite topics. It appears to me, that such an intention would have been no less hazardous to the poet than to the priest, particularly in that age and country, and the permission to publish the poem, and its reception among the classics of Italy, prove that it neither was nor is so interpreted. That he intended to ridicule the monastic life, and suffered his imagination to play with the simple dulness of his converted giant, seems evident enough, but surely it were as unjust to accuse him of irreligion on this account, as to denounce Fielding for his Parson Adams, Barnabas, Thwackum, Supple, and the Ordinary in Jonathan Wild,—or Scott, for the exquisite use of his Covenanters in the “Tales of my Landlord.”

In the following translation I have used the liberty of the original with the proper names, as Pulci uses Gan, Ganellon, or Ganellone, Carlo, Carlomagno, or Carlomano, Rondel, or Rondello, &c as it suits his convenience, so has the translator. In other respects the version is faithful to the best of the translator's ability in combining his interpretation of the one language with the not very easy task of reducing it to the same versification in the other. The reader, on comparing it with the original, is requested to remember that the antiquated language of Pulci, however pure, is not easy to the generality of Italians themselves, from its great mixture of Tuscan proverbs, and he may therefore be more indulgent to the present attempt. How far the translator has succeeded, and whether or no he shall continue the work, are questions which the public will decide. He was induced to make the experiment partly by his love for, and partial intercourse with, the Italian language, of which it is so easy to acquire a slight knowledge, and with which it is so nearly impossible for a foreigner to become accurately conversant. The Italian language is like a capricious beauty, who accords her smiles to all, her favours to few, and sometimes least to those who have courted her longest. The translator wished also to present in an English dress a part at least of a poem never yet rendered into a northern language, at the same time that it has been the original of some of the most celebrated productions on this side of the Alps, as well as of those recent experiments in poetry in England which have been already mentioned.

IL
MORGANTE MAGGIORE.

CANTO PRIMO

I

IN principio era il Verbo appresso a Dio,
Ed era Iddio il Verbo, e'l Verbo lui
Questo era nel principio, al parer mio,
E nulla si può far sanz'a costui
Però, giusto Signor benigno e pio,
Mandami solo un de' gli angeli tui,
Che m'accompagni, e richiami â memoria
Una famosa antica e degna storia

II

E tu Vergine, figlia, e madre, e sposa
Di quel Signor, che ti dette le chiave
Del cielo e dell' abisso, e d'ogni cosa,
Quel dì che Gabriel tuo ti disse Ave!
Perchè tu se' de' tuo' servi pietosa,
Con dolce rìe, e stil grato e soave,
Ajuta i versi miei benignamente,
E'nfin al fine allumina la mente

THE
MORGANTE MAGGIORE.

---

CANTO THE FIRST

I.

IN the beginning was the Word next God,
 God was the Woïd, the Woïd no less was he
 This was in the beginning, to my mode
 Of thinking, and without him nought could be Therefore, just Loid ! from out thy high abode,
 Benign and pious, bid an angel flee,
 One only, to be my companion, who Shall help my famous, worthy, old song through

II

And thou, oh Virgin ! daughter, mother, bide,
 Of the same Loid, who gave to you each key
 Of heaven, and hell, and every thing beside,
 The day thy Gabriel said “ All hail ! ” to thee,
 Since to thy servants pity’s ne’er denied,
 With flowing rhymes, a pleasant style and free,
 Be to my verses then benignly kind,
 And to the end illuminate my mind.

III

Era nel tempo, quando Filomena
Con la sorella sì lamenta e plora,
Che sì ricorda di sua antica pena,
E pe' boschetti le ninfe innamora,
E Febo il cario temperato mena,
Che 'l suo Fetonte l'ammaestra ancora ,
Ed appariva appunto all'orizzonte,
Tal che Titon sì graffiava la fronte

IV.

Quand'io varai la mia baichetta, prima
Per ubbidir chi sempre ubbidir debbe
La mente, e faticarsi in prosa e in rima,
E del mio Carlo Imperador m'increbbe ,
Che so quanti la penna ha posto in cima,
Che tutti la sua gloria pievanebbe
E stata quella istoria, a quel ch' i' veggio,
Di Carlo male intesa, e scitta peggio.

V

Diceva già Lionardo Aretino,
Che s'egli avesse avuto scrittor degno,
Com'egli ebbe un Ormanno il suo Pipino
Ch'avesse diligenza avuto e ingegno ,
Sarebbe Carlo Magno un uom divino ,
Però ch'egli ebbe gran vittorie e regno,
E fece per la chiesa e per la fede
Certo assai più, che non si dice o crede

III.

'Twas in the season when sad Philomel
Weeps with her sister, who remembers and Deplores the ancient woes which both befel,
And makes the nymphs enamour'd, to the hand
Of Phaeton by Phœbus loved so well
His car (but temper'd by his sire's command)
Was given, and on the horizon's verge just now
Appear'd, so that Tithonus scratch'd his blow

IV

When I prepared my bark first to obey,
As it should still obey, the helm, my mind,
And carry prose or rhyme, and this my lay
Of Charles the Emperor, whom you will find
By several pens already praised, but they
Who to diffuse his glory were inclined,
For all that I can see in prose or verse,
Have understood Charles badly, and wrote worse

V

Leonardo Aretino said already,
That if, like Pepin, Charles had had a writer
Of genius quick, and diligently steady,
No hero would in history look brighter,
He in the cabinet being always ready,
And in the field a most victorious fighter,
Who for the church and Christian faith had wrought,
Certes, far more than yet is said or thought

VI

Guardisi ancora a san Liberatori e
Quella badia là presso a Manoppello,
Giù ne gli Abbruzzi fatta per suo onore,
Dove fu la battaglia e'l gian flaggello
D'un re pagan, che Carlo imperadore
Uccise, e tanto del suo popol fello
E vedesi tante ossa, e tanto il sanno,
Che tutte in Giusaffà poi si vedranno

VII

Ma il mondo cieco e ignorante non prezza
Le sue virtù, com'io vorrei vedere
E tu, Fiorenza, de la sua grandezza
Possiedi, e sempre potrai possedere
Ogni costume ed ogni gentilezza
Che si potesse aquistare o avere
Col senno col tesoro o con la lancia
Dal nobil sangue e venuto di Fiancia

VIII

Dodici paladini aveva in corte
Carlo, e'l più savio e famoso era Orlando
Gran traditor lo condusse a la morte
In Roncisvalle un trattato ordinando,
Là dove il corno sonò tanto forte
Dopo la dolorosa rotta, quando
Ne la sua commedia Dante qui dice,
E mettelo con Carlo in ciel felice

VI.

You still may see at Saint Liberatoie
The abbey, no great way from Manopell,
Erected in the Abruzzi to his glory,
Because of the great battle in which fell
A pagan king, according to the story,
And felon people whom Charles sent to hell
And there are bones so many, and so many,
Near them Giusaffa's would seem few, if any

VII

But the world, blind and ignorant, don't prize
His virtues as I wish to see them thou,
Florence, by his great bounty don't arise,
And hast, and may have, if thou wilt allow,
All proper customs and true courtesies
Whate'er thou hast acquired from then till now,
With knightly courage, treasure, or the lance,
Is sprung from out the noble blood of France

VIII.

Twelve paladins had Charles in court, of whom
The wisest and most famous was Orlando ;
Him traitor Gan conducted to the tomb
In Roncesvalles, as the villain plann'd too,
While the horn rang so loud, and knell'd the doom
Of then sad rout, though he did all knight can do ,
And Dante in his comedy has given
To him a happy seat with Charles in heaven.

IX

Eia per Pasqua quella dì nataie
 Carlo la corte avea tutta in Parigi
 Orlando, com'io dico, il principale
 Evvi, il Danese, Astolfo, e Ansuigi
 Fannosi feste e cose trionfale,
 E molto celebravan San Dionigi,
 Angiolin di Bajona, ed Ulivieri
 V'era venuto, e'l gentil Beilinghieri

X

Eiavi Avolio ed Avino ed Ottone,
 Di Normandia, Riccardo Paladino,
 E'l savio Namo, e'l vecchio Salamone,
 Gualtier da Monlione, e Baldovino
 Ch'era figliuol del tusto Ganellone
 Troppo lieto era il figliuol di Pipino,
 Tanto che spesso d'allegrezza geme
 Veggendo tutti i paladini insieme

XI

Ma la fortuna attenta sta nascosa,
 Per guastar semple ciascun nostio effetto,
 Mentre che Carlo così si riposa,
 Orlando governava in fatto e in detto
 La corte e Carlo Magno ed ogni cosa.
 Gan per invidia scoppia il maladetto,
 E cominciava un dì con Carlo a dire
 Abbiám noi semple Orlando ad ubbidire?

IX.

'Twas Christmas-day, in Paris all his court
 Charles held, the chief, I say, Orlando was,
 The Dane, Astolfo there too did resort,
 Also Ansuigi, the gay time to pass
 In festival and in triumphal sport,
 The much-renown'd St Dennis being the cause,
 Angiolin of Bayonne, and Oliver,
 And gentle Belinghieri too came there

X

Avolio, and Aimo, and Othone
 Of Normandy and Richard Paladin,
 Wise Hamo, and the ancient Salemon,
 Walter of Lion's Mount and Baldwin,
 Who was the son of the sad Ganellone,
 Were there, exciting too much gladness in
 The son of Pepin — when his knights came hither,
 He groan'd with joy to see them altogether

XI

But watchful Fortune, luring, takes good heed
 Ever some bait 'gainst our intents to bring While Charles reposed him thus, in word and deed,
 Orlando ruled court, Charles, and every thing,
 Guist Gan, with envy bursting, had such need
 To vent his spite, that thus with Charles the king
 One day he openly began to say,
 "Orlando must we always then obey?"

XII

Io ho creduto mille volte dirti
Orlando ha in se troppa presunzione
Noi siam qui conti, re, duchi a serviti,
E Namò, Ottone, Uggiéri e Salamone,
Per onorarti ognun, per ubbidirti
Che costui abbi ogni reputazione
Nol sofferrem, ma siam deliberati
Da un fanciullo non esser governati

XIII

Tu cominciasti insino in Aspiamonte
A dargli a intender che fusse gagliardo,
E facesse gran cose a quella fonte,
Ma se non fusse stato il buon Gherardo,
Io so che la vittoria era d'Almonte
Ma egli ebbe sempre l'occhio a lo stendardo
Che si voleva quel dì coronarlo
Questo è colui ch'ha meritato, Carlo

XIV

Se ti ricorda già sendo in Guascogna,
Quando e' vi venne la gente di Spagna,
Il popol de' cristiani avea vergogna,
Se non mostrava la sua forza magna
Il ver convien pur dir, quando e'bisogna.
Sappi ch'ognuno imperador si lagna
Quant'io per e, ripasserò que' monti
Ch'io passai 'n qua con sessantaduo conti

XII

“ A thousand times I’ve been about to say,
    Orlando too presumptuously goes on,
Here are we, counts, kings, dukes, to own thy sway,
    Hamo, and Otho, Ogier, Solomon,
Each have to honour thee and to obey,
    But he has too much credit near the throne,
Which we won’t suffer, but are quite decided By such a boy to be no longer guided

XIII

“ And even at Aspramont thou didst begin
    To let him know he was a gallant knight,
And by the fount did much the day to win,
    But I know who that day had won the fight
If it had not for good Gherardo been
    The victory was Almonte’s else, his sight
He kept upon the standard, and the laurels
In fact and fairness are his earning, Charles

XIV

“ If thou rememberest being in Gascony,
    When there advanced the nations out of Spain,
The Christian cause had suffer’d shamefully,
    Had not his valour driven them back again
Best speak the truth when there’s a reason why
    Know then, oh emperor ! that all complain :
As for myself, I shall repass the mounts
O’er which I cross’d with two and sixty counts

XV

La tua grandezza dispensai sì vuole,
E far che ciascun abbi la sua parte
La corte tutta quanta se ne duole
Tu credi che costui sia forse Marte?
Orlando un giorno udì queste parole,
Che sì sedeva soletto in disparte
Dispiacquegli di Gan quel che diceva,
Ma molto più che Carlo gli credeva

XVI

E volle con la spada uccider Gano,
Ma Ulivieri in quel mezzo si mise,
E Durlindana gli trasse di mano,
E così il me' che seppe gli divise
Orlando si sdegnò con Carlo Mano,
E poco men che quivi non l'uccise,
E dipartissi di Parigi solo,
E scoppia e'mpazza di sdegno e di duolo.

XVII.

Ad Emellina moglie del Danese
Tolse Cortana, e poi tolse Rondello,
E'n verso Brara il suo cammin poi prese
Alda la bella, come vide quello,
Per abbracciarlo le braccia distese
Orlando, che ismarrito avea il cervello,
Com'ella disse ben venga il mio Orlando.
Gli volle in su la testa dar col brando.

XV.

“ ’Tis fit thy grandeun should dispense relief,
So that each here may have his proper part,
For the whole court is more or less in grief
Perhaps thou deem’st this lad a Mars in heart ?”
Orlando one day heard this speech in brief,
As by himself it chanced he sate apart
Displeased he was with Gan because he said it,
But much more still that Charles should give him credit

XVI.

And with the sword he would have murder’d Gan,
But Oliver thrust in between the pair,
And from his hand extracted Durlindan,
And thus at length they separated were Orlando angry too with Carloman,
Wanted but little to have slain him there,
Then forth alone from Paris went the chief,
And burst and madden’d with disdain and grief

XVII

From Eimellina, consort of the Dane,
He took Cortana, and then took Rondell,
And on towards Brara pick’d him o’er the plain,
And when she saw him coming, Aldabelle
Stretch’d forth her arms to clasp her lord again
Orlando, in whose brain all was not well,
As “ Welcome, my Orlando, home,” she said,
Raised up his sword to smite her on the head

XVIII

Come colui che la furia consiglia,
Egli pareva a Gan dar veramente
Alda la bella sì fe' maraviglia
Orlando sì ravvide prestamente
E la sua sposa pigliava la briglia,
E scese dal caval subitamente
Ed ogni cosa narrava a costei,
E riposossi alcun giorno con lei

XIX

Poi si partì portato dal furore,
E terminò passare in Paganía,
E mentre che cavalca, il traditore
Di Gan sempre ricorda per la via:
E cavalcando d'uno in altro errore,
In un deserto tiuova una badía
In luoghi oscuri e paesi lontani,
Ch'era a' confin' tra cristiani e pagani

XX

L'abate si chiamava Chiaramonte,
Era del sangue disceso d'Anglante
Di sopra a la badía v'era un gran monte,
Dove abitava alcun fiero gigante,
De' quali uno avea nome Passamonte,
L'altro Alabastro, e'l terzo era Morgante
Con certe fiombe gittavan da alto,
Ed ogni dì facevan qualche assalto.

XVIII

Like him a fury counsels, his revenge

On Gan in that rash act he seem'd to take,
Which Aldabella thought extremely strange,

But soon Orlando found himself awake,
And his spouse took his bridle on this change,

And he dismounted from his horse, and spake
Of every thing which pass'd without demur,
And then repos'd himself some days with her

XIX

Then full of wrath departed from the place,

And far as pagan countries roam'd astray,
And while he rode, yet still at every pace

The traitor Gan remember'd by the way,
And wandering on in error a long space,

An abbey which in a lone desert lay,
'Midst glens obscure, and distant lands, he found,
Which form'd the Christian's and the pagan's bound

XX

The abbot was call'd Cleimont, and by blood

Descended from Angiante under cover
Of a great mountain's brow the abbey stood,

But certain savage giants look'd him over,
One Passamont was foremost of the brood,

And Alabaster and Morgante hover
Second and third, with certain slings, and throw
In daily jeopardy the place below.

XXI

I monachetti non potieno uscire
Del monistero o per legne o per acque
Orlando picchia, e non volieno aprire,
Fin che a l'abate a la fine pur piacque,
Entrato drento cominciava a dire,
Come colui, che di Maria già nacque
Adora, ed era cristian battezzato,
E com' egli era a la badia arrivato

XXII

Disse l'abate il ben venuto sia
Di quel ch'io ho volentieri ti daremo,
Poi che tu credi al figliuol di Maria,
E la cagion, cavalier, ti diremo,
Acciò che non l'imputa a villania,
Perchè a l'entiar resistenza facemo,
E non ti volle aprir quel monachetto
Così intevien chi vive con sospetto

XXIII

Quando ci venni al principio abitare
Queste montagne, benchè sieno oscure
Come tu vedi, pur si potea stare
Sanza sospetto, ch' ell' eran sicure
Sol da le fiere t'avevi a guardare,
Fernoci spesso di brutte paure.
Or ci bisogna, se vogliamo starci,
Da le bestie dimestiche guardarci.

XXI

The monks could pass the convent gate no more,
Nor leave their cells for water or for wood,
Orlando knock'd, but none would ope, before
Unto the prison it at length seem'd good,
Enter'd, he said that he was taught to adore
Him who was born of Mary's holiest blood,
And was baptized a Christian, and then show'd
How to the abbey he had found his road.

XXII

Said the abbot, " You are welcome, what is mine
We give you freely, since that you believe With us in Mary Mother's Son divine,
And that you may not, cavalier, conceive
The cause of our delay to let you in
To be rusticity, you shall receive
The reason why our gate was barr'd to you
Thus those who in suspicion live must do

XXIII

" When hither to inhabit first we came
These mountains, albeit that they are obscure,
As you perceive, yet without fear or blame
They seem'd to promise an asylum sure
From savage brutes alone, too fierce to tame,
'Twas fit our quiet dwelling to secure,
But now, if here we'd stay, we needs must guard Against domestic beasts with watch and ward

XXIV

Queste ci fan piuttosto stare a segno
Sonci appariti tie fieri giganti,
Non so di quel paese o di qual regno,
Ma molto son feroci tutti quanti
La foirza e'l malvoler giunt'a lo'ngegno
Sai che può 'l tutto, e noi non siam bastanti,
Questi perturban sì l'orazion nostra,
Che non so più che far, s'altri nol mostia

XXV

Gli antichi padri nostri nel deserto,
Se le lor opie sante erano e giuste,
Del ben servii da Dio n'avean buon merto,
Nè creder sol vivessin di locuste
Piovea dal ciel la manna, questo è certo,
Ma qui convien che spesso assaggi e gusti
Sassi che piovon di sopra quel monte,
Che gettano Alabastro e Passamonte

XXVI

E'l teizo ch'è Morgante, assai più fiero,
Isvegli e pini e faggi e ceri e gli oppi,
E gettagli infin qui questo è pui vero,
Non posso far che d'ua non iscoppi
Menti e che parlan così in cimitero,
Un sasso pai che Rondel quasi sgioppi,
Che da' giganti giù venne da alto
Tanto, ch'e' prese sotto il tetto un salto

XXIV

“ These make us stand, in fact, upon the watch,
For late there have appear'd three giants rough,
What nation or what kingdom bore the batch
I know not, but they are all of savage stuff,
When force and malice with some genius match,
You know, they can do all—we are not enough
And these so much our onisons derange,
I know not what to do, till matters change

XXV

“ Our ancient fathers living the desert in,
For just and holy works were duly fed,
Think not they lived on locusts sole, 'tis certain
That manna was rain'd down from heaven instead,
But here 'tis fit we keep on the alert in Our bounds, or taste the stones shower'd down for bread,
From off yon mountain daily raining faster,
And flung by Passamont and Alabaster

XXVI

“ The third, Morgante, 's savagest by far, he Plucks up pines, beeches, poplar-trees, and oaks,
And flings them, our community to bury,
And all that I can do but more provokes ”
While thus they parley in the cemetery,
A stone from one of their gigantic strokes,
Which nearly crush'd Rondell, came tumbling over,
So that he took a long leap under cover.

XXVII.

Tirati drento, cavalièr, per Dio,
Disse l'abate, che la manna casca
Risponde Orlando caro abate mio,
Costui non vuol che'l mió caval più pasca
Veggio che lo guarrebbe del restìo
Quel sasso par che di buon braccio nasca.
Rispose il santo padre io non t'inganno,
Credo che'l monte un giorno gitteranno.

XXVIII

Orlando governar fece Rondello,
E ordinar per se da colazione
Poi disse abate, io voglio andare a quello
Che dette al mio caval con quel cantone
Disse l'abate come car fratello
Consiglietotti senza passione ?
Io ti sconforto, baron, di tal gita ,
Ch'io so che tu vi lascerai la vita

XXIX

Quel Passamonte porta in man tre daidi .
Chi fiombe, chi baston, chi mazzafiusti ;
Sai che giganti più di noi gagliardi
Son per ragion, che son anco più giusti ,
E pui se vuoi andar fa che ti guardi,
Che questi son villan molto e robusti
Rispose Orlando io lo vedrò per certo ,
Ed avviossi a piè su pel deserto

XXVII

“ For God-sake, cavalier, come in with speed ,
The manna’s falling now,” the abbot cried
“ This fellow does not wish my horse should feed,
Dear abbot,” Roland unto him replied
“ Of restiveness he’d cure him had he need,
That stone seems with good will and aim applied ”
The holy father said, “ I don’t deceive , They’ll one day fling the mountain, I believe ”

XXVIII.

Orlando bade them take care of Rondello,
And also made a breakfast of his own
“ Abbot,” he said, “ I want to find that fellow Who flung at my good horse yon corner-stone ”
Said the abbot, “ Let not my advice seem shallow ,
As to a brother dear I speak alone ,
I would dissuade you, baron, from this strife,
As knowing sure that you will lose your life.

XXIX

“ That Passamont has in his hand three darts—
Such slings, clubs, ballast-stones, that yield you must ,
You know that giants have much stouter hearts
Than us, with reason, in proportion just
If go you will, guard well against their arts,
For these are very barbarous and robust ”
Orlando answer’d, “ This I’ll see, be sure,
And walk the wild on foot to be secure .”

XXX

Disse l'abate col segnarlo in fronte
Va, che da Dio e me sia benedetto
Orlando, poi che salito ebbe il monte
Si dirizzò, come l'abate detto
Gli avea, dove sta quel Passamonte ,
Il quale Orlando veggendo soletto,
Molto lo squadria di dietro e davanti ,
Poi domandò, se star volea per fante

XXXI

E' prometteva di farlo godere
Orlando disse pazzo saracino,
Io vengo a te, com'è di Dio volere,
Per darti morte, e non per ragazzino ,
A' monaci suoi fatto hai dispiacere ,
Non può più comportarti can mastino
Questo gigante aimai si coise a fuaia,
Quando sentì ch'e'gli diceva ingiuria,

XXXII.

E intornato ove aspettava Orlando,
Il qual non s'era partito da bomba ,
Subito venne la corda guando,
E lascia un sasso andar fuor de la fiomba,
Che in su la testa giugnea rotolando
Al conte Orlando, e l'elmetto rimbomba ,
E' cadde per la pena tiamortito ,
Ma più che morto par, tanto è stordito

XXX

The abbot sign'd the great cross on his front,
 " Then go you with God's benison and mine "
 Orlando, after he had scaled the mount,
 As the abbot had directed, kept the line
 Right to the usual haunt of Passamont,
 Who, seeing him alone in this design,
 Survey'd him fore and aft with eyes observant,
 Then ask'd him, " If he wish'd to stay as servant ? "

XXXI.

And promised him an office of great ease
 But, said Orlando, " Saracen insane !
 I come to kill you, if it shall so please
 God, not to serve as footboy in your train,
 You with his monks so oft have broke the peace—
 Vile dog ! 'tis past his patience to sustain "
 The giant ran to fetch his arms, quite furious,
 When he received an answer so injurious

XXXII

And being return'd to where Orlando stood,
 Who had not moved him from the spot, and swinging
 The cord, he hurl'd a stone with strength so rude,
 As show'd a sample of his skill in slinging,
 It roll'd on Count Orlando's helmet good
 And head, and set both head and helmet ringing,
 So that he swooned with pain as if he died,
 But more than dead, he seem'd so stupified

XXXIII

Passamonte pensò che fusse morto,
 E disse io voglio andarmi a disainare.
 Questo poltton per chi m'aveva scorto?
 Ma Cristo i suoi non suole abbandonare,
 Massime Orlando, ch'egli avrebbe il torto.
 Mentre il gigante l'arme va a spogliare,
 Orlando in questo tempo si risente,
 E invocava e la forza e la mente

XXXIV

E gridò forte gigante, ove vai?
 Ben ti pensasti d'avermi ammazzato!
 Volgiti a dietro, che, s'ale non hai,
 Non puoi da me fuggir, can innegato
 A tradimento ingiuriato m'hai
 Donde il gigante alor maravigliato
 Si volse a dietro, e riteneva il passo,
 Poi si chinò per tor di terra un sasso

XXXV.

Orlando avea Cortana ignuda in mano,
 Trasse a la testa e Cortana tagliava
 Per mezzo il teschio partì del pagano,
 E Passamonte morto rovinava
 E nel cadere il superbo e villano
 Divotamente Macon bestemmiava;
 Ma mentre che bestemmia il crudo e acerbo,
 Orlando ingraziava il Padre e'l Verbo

XXXIII.

Then Passamont, who thought him slain outright,
Said, "I will go, and while he lies along,
Disarm me why such craven did I fight?"

But Christ his servants ne'er abandons long,
Especially Orlando, such a knight,

As to, desert would almost be a wrong.
While the giant goes to put off his defences,
Orlando has recall'd his force and senses

XXXIV.

And loud he shouted, "Giant, where dost go?"

Thou thought'st me doubtless for the bier outlaid,
To the right about—without wings thou'rt too slow

To fly my vengeance—curish renegade!
'Twas but by treachery, thou laid'st me low."

The giant his astonishment betray'd,
And turn'd about, and stopp'd his journey on,
And then he stopp'd to pick up a great stone

XXXV.

Orlando had Cortana bare in hand,

To split the head in twain was what he schemed —
Cortana clave the skull like a true brand,

And pagan Passamont died unredeem'd,
Yet harsh and haughty, as he lay he bann'd,

And most devoutly Macon still blasphemed,
But while his crude, rude blasphemies he heard,
Orlando thank'd the Father and the Word,—

XXXVI

Dicendo quanta grazia oggi m'ha 'data !
Sempie ti sono, o signor mio, tenuto ,
Per te conosco la vita salvata ,
Peiò che dal gigante eîa abbattuto
Ogni cosa a ragion fai misurata ,
Non val nostro poter senza il tuo ajuto
Piegoti, sopra me tenga la mano,
Tanto che ancoi ritorni a Carlo Mano

XXXVII

Poi ch'ebbe questo detto sen' andòe,
Tanto che troua Alabastro più basso
Che si sforzava, quando e'lo trovòe,
Di sveghier d'una ripa fuori un masso
Orlando, com'e' giunse a quel, gridòe
Che pensi tu, ghiotton, gittai quel sasso ?
Quando Alabastro questo grido intende,
Subitamente la sua fromba prende

XXXVIII

E'trasse d'una pietra molto grossa,
Tanto ch'Orlando bisognò schermisse ,
Che se l'avesse giunto la percossa,
Non bisognava il medico venisse
Orlando adopeiò poi la sua possa ,
Nel pettignon tutta la spada misse .
E moito cadde questo babalone,
E non dimenticò peiò Macone

XXXVI

Saying, "What grace to me thou'st this day given!
And I to thee, oh Lord! am ever bound
I know my life was saved by thee from heaven,
Since by the giant I was fairly down'd
All things by thee are measured just and even,
Our power without thine aid would nought be
I pray thee take heed of me, till I can [found.
At least return once more to Carloman "

XXXVII.

And having said thus much, he went his way,
And Alabaster he found out below,
Doing the very best that in him lay
To root from out a bank a rock or two.
Orlando, when he reach'd him, loud 'gan say,
"How think'st thou, glutton, such a stone to throw?"
When Alabaster heard his deep voice ring,
He suddenly betook him to his sling,

XXXVIII

And hurl'd a fragment of a size so large,
That if it had in fact fulfill'd its mission,
And Roland not avail'd him of his targe,
There would have been no need of a physician
Orlando set himself in turn to charge,
And in his bulky bosom made incision
With all his sword The lout fell, but o'erthrown, he However by no means forgot Macone

XXXIX

Morgante aveva al suo modo un palagio
Fatto di frasche e di schegge e di terra
Quivi, secondo lui, si posa ad agio ,
Quivi la notte si rinchiede e seria
Orlando picchia, e daragli disagio,
Perchè il gigante dal sonno si sferia ,
Vennegli apir come una cosa matta ,
Ch'un' aspra visione aveva fatta

XL

E'gli pareva ch'un feroce serpente
L'avea assalito, e chiamai Macometto ,
Ma Macometto non valea niente
On'è' chiamava Gesù benedetto ,
È liberato l'avea finalmente
Venne alla porta, ed ebbe così detto ,
Chi buzza qua ? poi sempi e boibottando
Tu 'l saprai tosto, gli rispose Orlando

XLI

Vengo per fatti, come a'tuo' fratelli,
Far de' peccati tuoi la penitènzia,
Da' monaci mandato, cattivelli,
Come stato è divina provvidenzia ,
Pel mal ch'avete fatto a torto a quelli,
E dato in ciel così questa sentenza ,
Sappi, che freddo gi' più ch'un pilastro
Lasciato ho Passamonte e'l tuo Alabastro,

XXXIX

Morgante had a palace in his mode,
 Composed of branches, logs of wood, and earth,
 And stretch'd himself at ease in this abode,
 And shut himself at night within his birth
 Orlando knock'd, and knock'd again, to goad
 The giant from his sleep, and he came forth,
 The door to open, like a crazy thing,
 For a rough dream had shook him slumbering

XL

He thought that a fierce serpent had attack'd him,
 And Mahomet he call'd, but Mahomet
 Is nothing worth, and not an instant back'd him,
 But praying blessed Jesu, he was set
 At liberty from all the fears which rack'd him,
 And to the gate he came with great regret—
 "Who knocks here?" grumbling all the while, said he
 "That," said Orlando, "you will quickly see

XLI

"I come to preach to you, as to your brothers,
 Sent by the miserable monks—repentance,
 For Providence divine, in you and others,
 Condemns the evil done my new acquaintance
 'Tis writ on high—your wrong must pay another's,
 From heaven itself is issued out this sentence.
 Know then, that colder now than a pilaster
 I left you Passamont and Alabaster "

XLII

Disse Morgante o gentil cavaliere,
Per lo tuo Dio non mi dir villania
Di grazia il nome tuo vorrei sapere ;
Se se' Cristian, deh dillo in cortesia
Rispose Orlando di cotal mastiere
Contenterotti per la fede mia .
Adoro Cristo, ch'è Signor verace ,
E puoi tu adorarlo, se ti piace

XLIII

Rispose il saracin con umil voce
Io ho fatto una strana visione,
Che m'assaliva un serpente feroce
Non mi valeva per chiamar Macone ,
Onde al tuo Dio che fu confitto in croce
Rivolsti presto la mia intenzione
E' mi soccorse, e fui libero e sano,
E son disposto al tutto esser Cristiano.

XLIV

Rispose Orlando . baion giusto e pio,
Se questo buon voler tienai nel core,
L'anima tua aià quel vero Dio
Che ci può sol gradir d'eterno onore
E s'tu vorrai, sarai compagno mio,
E amerotti con perfetto amore .
Gl'idoli vostri son bugiardi e vani
Il vero Dio è lo Dio de' Cristiani

XLII

Morgante said, " Oh gentle cavalier !
Now by thy God say me no villany ,
The favour of your name I fain would hear,
And if a Christian, 'speak for courtesy "
Replied Orlando, " So much to your ear
I by my faith disclose contentedly ,
Christ I adore, who is the genuine Lord,
And, if you please, by you may be adored "

XLIII.

The Saracen rejoin'd in humble tone,
" I have had an extraordinary vision ,
A savage serpent fell on me alone,
And Macon would not pity my condition ,
Hence to thy God, who for ye did atone
Upon the cross, preferr'd I my petition ,
His timely succour set me safe and free,
And I a Christian am disposed to be "

XLIV

Orlando answer'd, " Baron just and pious,
If this good wish your heart can really move
To the true God, who will not then deny us
Eternal honour, you will go above,
And, if you please, as friends we will ally us,
And I will love you with a perfect love
Your idols are vain lies, full of fraud
The only true God is the Christian's God

XLV.

Venne questo Signor senza peccato
Ne la sua madre vergine pulzella.
Se conoscessi quel Signor beato,
Sanza'l qual non risplendẽ sole o stella,
Aresti gia Macon tuo rinnegato,
E la sua fede iniqua ingiusta e fella
Battezzati al mio Dio di buon talento
Morgante gli risposo io son contento

XLVI

E corse Orlando subito abbracciare
Orlando gran carezze gli facea,
E disse a la badia ti vo' menare
Morgante, andianci presto, respondea.
Co'monaci la pace ci vuol faie.
De la qual cosa Orlando in se godea,
Dicendo, fiatel mio divoto e buono,
Io vò che chiegga a l'abate perdono.

XLVII

Da poi che Dio rilluminato t'ha,
Ed accettato per la sua umiltade,
Vuolsi che tu ancor usi umiltà
Disse Morgante per la tua bontade,
Poi che il tuo Dio mio sempre omai sarà,
Dimmio del nome tuo la veritade,
Poi di me dispor puoi al'tuo comando,
Ond'e' gli disse, com 'egli era Orlando

XLV

“ The Lord descended to the virgin breast
Of Mary Mother, sinless and divine,
If you acknowledge the Redeemer blest,
Without whom neither sun nor star can shine,
Abjure bad Macon’s false and felon test,
Your renegado god, and worship mine,— Baptize yourself with zeal, since you repent ”
To which Morgante answer’d, “ I’m content.”

XLVI.

And then Orlando to embrace him flew,
And made much of his convert, as he cried,
“ To the abbey I will gladly marshal you ”
To whom Morgante, “ Let us go,” replied,
“ I to the friars have for peace to sue ”
Which thing Orlando heard with inward pride, aying, “ My brother, so devout and good,
Ask the abbot pardon, as I wish you would .

XLVII.

“ Since God has granted your illumination,
Accepting you in mercy for his own,
Humility should be your first oblation ”
Morgante said, “ For goodness’ sake, make known—
Since that your God is to be mine—your station,
And let your name in verity be shown ,
Then will I every thing at your command do ”
On which the other said, he was Orlando

XLVIII.

Disse il gigante Gesù benedetto
 Per mille volte ingraziato sia ,
 Sentito t'ho nomar, baron perfetto,
 Per tutti i tempi de la vîa, ia
 E, com'io dissi, sempremai soggetto
 Esser ti vo' per la tua gagliardia
 Insieme molte cose ragionaro,
 E 'n verso la badia poi s'inviaio

XLIX

E per la via da què' giganti morti
 Orlando con Morgante sì ragiona :
 De la lor morte vo' che ti conforti ,
 E poi che piace a Dio, a me perdona ,
 A' monaci avean fatto mille torti ,
 E la nostra scrittura aperto suona
 Il ben remunerato, e'l mal punito ;
 E mai non ha questo Signor fallito,

L

Però ch'egli ama la giustizia tanto,
 Che vuol, che sempre il suo giudicio morda
 Ognun ch'abbî peccato tanto o quanto ,
 E così il ben ristorar si ricorda
 E non saria senza giustizia santo Adunque al suo voler presto t'accorda .
 Che debbe ognun voler quel che vuol questo,
 Ed accordarsi volentieri e presto.

XLVIII.

“ Then,” quoth the giant, “ blessed be Jesu
 A thousand times with gratitude and praise !
 Oft, perfect baron ! have I heard of you
 Through all the different periods of my days
 And, as I said, to be your vassal too
 I wish, for your great gallantry always ”
 Thus reasoning, they continued much to say,
 And onwards to the abbey went their way.

XLIX

And by the way about the giants dead
 Orlando with Morgante reason'd. “ Be,
 For their decease, I pray you, comforted,
 And, since it is God's pleasure, pardon me,
 A thousand wrongs unto the monks they bled,
 And our true Scripture soundeth openly,
 Good is rewarded, and chastised the ill,
 Which the Lord never faileth to fulfil

L.

“ Because his love of justice unto all
 Is such, he wills his judgment should devour
 All who have sin, however great or small,
 But good he well remembers to restore
 Nor without justice holy could we call Him, whom I now require you to adore.
 All men must make his will their wishes sway,
 And quickly and spontaneously obey

LI.

E sonsi i nostri dottori accordati,
 Pigliando tutti una conclusione,
 Che que' che son nel ciel glorificati,
 S'avessin nel pensier compassione
 De' miseri parenti, che dannati
 Son ne lo inferno in gran confusione,
 La lor felicità nulla sarebbe ,
 E vedi che qui ingiusto Iddio parrebbe

LII

Ma egli anno postò in Gesù ferma spene ,
 E tanto pare a loi, quanto a lui pare ,
 Afferman ciò ch'e'fa, che facci bene,
 E che non possi in nessun modo eriaie
 Se padre o madre è nell' eterne pene,
 Di questo non si posson conturbare
 Che quel che piace a Dio, sol piace a loro
 Questo s'osserva ne l'eterno coio.

LIII

Al savio suol bastai poche parole,
 Disse Morgante , tu il potrai vedere,
 De' miei fiatelli, Orlando, se mi duole,
 E s' io m'accorderò di Dio al volere,
 Come tu di' che in ciel servai si suole .
 Morti co' morti , or pensiam di godere ,
 Io vo tagliar le mani a tutti quanti,
 E porterolle a que' monaci santi,

LI.

“ And here our doctors are of one accord,
 Coming on this point to the same conclusion,—
 That in their thoughts who praise in heaven the Lord
 If pity e’er was guilty of intrusion
 For their unfortunate relations stored
 In hell below, and damn’d in great confusion,—
 Their happiness would be reduced to nought,
 And thus unjust the Almighty’s self be thought

LII.

“ But they in Christ have firmest hope, and all
 Which seems to him, to them too must appear
 Well done, nor could it otherwise befall
 He never can in any purpose err
 If sire or mother suffer endless thralldom,
 They don’t disturb themselves for him or her,
 What pleases God to them must joy inspire,—
 Such is the observance of the eternal choir ”

LIII.

“ A word unto the wise,” Morgante said,
 “ Is wont to be enough, and you shall see How much I grieve about my brethren dead,
 And if the will of God seem good to me,
 Just, as you tell me, ’tis in heaven obey’d—
 Ashes to ashes,—merry let us be !
 I will cut off the hands from both their trunks,
 And carry them unto the holy monks

LIV.

Acciò ch'ognun sia più sicuro e certo,
 Com' e' son morti, e non abbin paura
 Andar soletti per questo deserto,
 E perchè veggan la mia mente pura
 A quel Signor che m'ha il suo regno aperto
 E tratto fuori di tenebre sì oscura
 E poi tagliò le mani a' due fratelli,
 E lasciagli a le fiere ed agli uccelli.

LV

A la badia insieme se ne vanno,
 Ove l'abate assai dubbioso aspetta
 I monaci che'l fatto ancor non sanno,
 Correvano a l'abate tutti in fretta,
 Dicendo paurosi e piep' d'affanno
 Volete voi costui dentro sì metta?
 Quando l'abate vedeva il gigante,
 Si turbò tutto nel primo semblante

LVI

Orlando che turbato così il vede,
 Gli disse presto abate, datti pace,
 Questo è Cristiano, e in Cristo nostro crede,
 E rinnegato ha il suo Macon fallace
 Morgante i moncherin mostiò per fede,
 Come i giganti ciascun morto giace,
 Donde l'abate ringraziava Iddio,
 Dicendo, or m' hai contento, Signor mio.

LIV

“ So that all peisons may be sure and certain
That they are dead, and have no further fear
To wander solitay this desert in,
And that they may perceive my spirit clear
By the Lord's grace, who hath withdrawn the curtain
Of darkness, making his bight realm appear ”
He cut his brethren's hands off at these words
And left them to the savage beasts and buds

LV.

Then to the abbey they went on together,
Where waited them the abbot in great doubt
The monks who knew not yet the fact, ran thither
To their superior, all in breathless rout, Saying with tremor, “ Please to tell us whether You wish to have this person in or out ? ”
The abbot, looking through upon the giant,
Too greatly fear'd, at first, to be compliant

LVI

Orlando seeing him thus agitated,
Said quickly, “ Abbot, be thou of good cheer,
He Christ believes, as Christian must be rated,
And hath renounced his Macon false ; ” which here
Morgante with the hands corroborated,
A proof of both the giants' fate quite clear .
Thence, with due thanks, the abbot God adored,
Saying, “ Thou hast contented me, oh Lord ! ”

LVII

E risguardava, e squadrava Moigante,
La sua grandezza e una volta e due,
E poi gli disse O famoso gigante,
Sappi ch'io non mi mai aviglio piùè,
Che tu svegliessi e gittassi le piante,
Quand'io riguardo or le fattezze tue
Tu sarai or perfetto e vero amico
A Cristo quanto tu gli eri nimico

LVIII

Un nostro apostol, Saul già chiamato,
Perseguì molto la fede di Cristo
Un giorno poi da lo spito infiammato,
Perchè pui mi persegui? disse Cristo
E' sì ravvide alior del suo peccato
Andò poi predicando sempre Cristo,
E fatto è or de la fede una tiomba,
La qual per tutto risuona e rimbomba

LIX

Così farai tu ancor, Moigante mio.
E chi s'emenda, è scritto nel Vangelo,
Che maggior festa fa d'un solo Iddio,
Che di novantanove altri su in cielo
Io ti conforto ch'ogni tuo disio
Rivolga a quel Signor con giusto zelo,
Che tu sarai felice in sèmpiteino,
Ch'eri perduto, e dannato all' inferno

LVII

He gazed , Morgante's height he calculated,
And more than once contemplated his size ,
And then he said, " Oh giant celebrated !
Know, that no more my wonder will arise,
How you could tear and fling the trees you late did,
When I behold your form with my own eyes.
You now a true and perfect friend will show
Yourself to Christ, as once you were a foe

LVIII

" And one of our apostles, Saul once named,
Long persecuted sore the faith of Christ,
Till, one day, by the Spirit being inflamed,
    ' Why dost thou persecute me thus ' said Christ,
And then from his offence he was reclaim'd,
And went for ever after preaching Christ,
And of the faith became a trump, whose sounding
O'er the whole earth is echoing and rebounding.

LIX

" So, my Morgante, you may do likewise ,
He who repents—thus writes the Evangelist—
Occasions more rejoicing in the skies
Than ninety-nine of the celestial list.
You may be sure, should each desire arise
With just zeal for the Lord, that you'll exist
Among the happy saints for evermore ,
But you were lost and damn'd to hell before !'

LX

E grande onore a Morgante faceva
L'abate, e molti dì sì son posti .
Un giorno, come ad Orlando piaceva,
A spasso in quà e in là sì sono andati
L'abate in una camera sua aveva
Molte armadure e certi archi appiccati :
Morgante gliene piacque un che ne vede ,
Onde e' sel cinse bench' oprar nol crede.

LXI

Avea quel luogo d'acqua carestia
Orlando disse come buon fratello
Morgante, vo' che di piacer ti sia
Andar per l'acqua , ond' e' rispose a quello
Comanda ciò che vuoi, che fatto sia ,
E posesi in ispalla un gran tinello,
Ed avviossi là verso una fonte
Dove solea ber sempre appiè del monte

LXII

Giunto a la fonte, sente un gran fracasso
Di subito venir per la foresta
Una saetta cavò del turcasso,
Posela a l'arco, ed alzava la testa ,
Ecco apparire un gran giegge al passo
Di porci, e vanno con molta tempesta ,
E arrivorno alla fontana appunto
Donde il gigante è da lor sopraggiunto

LX

And thus great honour to Morgante paid
The abbot many days they did repose
One day, as with Orlando they both stay'd,
And saunter'd here and there, where'er they chose,
The abbot show'd a chamber, where array'd
Much armour was, and hung up certain bows,
And one of these Morgante for a whim
Girt on, though useless, he believed, to him

LXI

There being a want of water in the place,
Orlando, like a worthy brother, said,
"Morgante, I could wish you in this case
To go for water " " You shall be obey'd
In all commands," was the reply, " straightways "
Upon his shoulder a great tub he laid,
And went out on his way unto a fountain,
Where he was wont to drink below the mountain

LXII.

Arrived there, a prodigious noise he hears,
Which suddenly along the forest spread,
Whereat from out his quiver he prepares
An arrow for his bow, and lifts his head,
And lo! a monstrous head of swine appears,
And onward rushes with tempestuous tread,
And to the fountain's brink precisely pours,
So that the giant's join'd by all the boars

LXIII

Morgante a la ventura a un saetta ,
 Appunto ne l'orecchio lo 'ncarnava
 Da l'altio lato passò la verretta ,
 Onde il cinghial giù morto gambettava ,
 Un altro, quasi per farne vendetta,
 Addosso al gran gigante irato andava ,
 E perchè e' giunse troppo tosto al varco
 Non fu Morgante a tempo a trai con l'arco.

LXIV

Vedendosi venuto il porco adosso,
 Gli dette in su la testa un gran punzone <sup>(1)</sup>
 Per modo che gl'infranse insino a l'osso,
 E morto allato a quell'altro lo pone
 Gli altri porci veggendo quel percosso,
 Si misson tutti in fuga pel vallone ,
 Morgante si levò il tinello in collo,
 Ch'era pien d'acqua, e non si muove un ciollo

LXV

Da l'una spalla il tinello avea posto,
 Da l'altra i porci, e spacciava il terreno ,
 E torna a la badia, ch'è pur discosto,
 Ch' una gocciola d'acqua non va in seno
 Oilando che'l vedea tornar sì tosto
 Co' porci morti, e con quel vaso pieno ,
 Maravigliossi che sia tanto forte ,
 Così l'abate , e spalancan le porte

(1) " Gli dette in su la testa un gran punzone " It is strange that Pulci should have literally anticipated the technical terms of my old friend and master, Jackson, and the art which he has carried to its highest pitch

LXIII

Morgante at a venture shot an arrow,
 Which pierced a pig precisely in the ear,
 And pass'd unto the other side quite thorough,
 So that the boar, defunct, lay tripp'd up near Another, to revenge his fellow farrow,
 Against the giant rush'd in fierce career,
 And reach'd the passage with so swift a foot,
 Morgante was not now in time to shoot

LXIV

Perceiving that the pig was on him close,
 He gave him such a punch upon the head
 As floor'd him so that he no more arose,
 Smashing the very bone, and he fell dead
 Next to the other. Having seen such blows,
 The other pigs along the valley fled,
 Morgante on his neck the bucket took,
 Full from the spring, which neither swerved nor shook

LXV

The ton was on one shoulder, and there were
 The hogs on t'other, and he brush'd apace
 On to the abbey, though by no means near,
 Nor spilt one drop of water in his race
 Orlando, seeing him so soon appear
 With the dead boars, and with that brimful vase, Marvell'd to see his strength so very great,
 So did the abbot, and set wide the gate

---

"A punch on the head," or "a punch in the head," — "un punzone in su la testa," — is the exact and frequent phrase of our best pugilists, who little dream that they are talking the purest Tuscan

LXVI

I monaci veggendo l'acqua fresca
Si rallegrorno, ma più de' cinghiali ,
Ch'ogni animal si rallegra de l'esca ,
E posano a dormire i bréviai
Ognun s'affanna, e non par che gl'incresca,
Acciò che questa carne nog s'insali,
E che poi secca sapesse di victo .
E la digiune si restorno a dietro

LXVII

E ferno a scoppia corpo per un tratto,
E scuffian, che parien de l'acqua usciti ,
Tanto che'l cane sen doleva e 'l gatto,
Che gli ossi rimanean troppo puliti
L'abate, poi che molto onoro ha fatto
A tutti, un dì dopo questi conviti
Dette a Morgante un destrier molto bello,
Che lungo tempo tenuto avea quello

LXVIII

Morgante in su 'n un prato il caval mena,
E vuol che corra, e che facci ogni pruova,
E pensa che di ferro abbi la schiena,
O forse non credeva schiacciar l'uova .
Questo caval s'accoscia per la pena,
E scoppia, e 'n su la terra si ritruova.
Dicca Morgante lieva 'su, rozzone ,
E va pur punzecchiando co lo sprone

LXVI

The monks, who saw the water fresh and good,
Rejoiced, but much more to perceive the pork, —
All animals are glad at sight of food
They lay their breviaies to sleep, and work
With greedy pleasure, and in such a mood,
That the flesh needs no salt beneath their fork
Of rankness and of rot there is no fear,
For all the fasts are now left in anear.

LXVII

As though they wish'd to burst at once, they ate,
And gorged so that, as if the bones had been
In water, sorely grieved the dog and cat,
Perceiving that they all were pick'd too clean
The abbot, who to all did honour great,
A few days after this convivial scene,
Gave to Morgante a fine horse, well train'd,
Which he long time had for himself maintam'd.

LXVIII

The horse Morgante to a meadow led,
To gallop, and to put him to the proof,
Thinking that he a back of iron had,
Or to skim eggs unbroke was light enough,
But the horse, sinking with the pam, fell dead,
And burst, while cold on earth lay head and hoof.
Morgante said, "Get up, thou sulky cur!"
And still continued pricking with the spur

LXIX

Ma finalmente convien ch' egli smonte,
E disse io son pur leggièr come penna,
Ed è scoppiato, che ne di' tu, conte ?
Rispose Orlando . un arboie d'antenna
Mi par piuttosto, e la gaggia la fronte
Lascialo andar, che la fortuna accenna
Che meco appiede ne venga, Morgante
Ed io così verrò, disse il gigante

LXX

Quando serà mestier, tu mi vedrai
Com'io mi proverò ne la battaglia
Orlando disse io ciedo tu farai
Come buon cavalier, se Dio mi vaglia,
Ed anco me dormir non mirerai
Di questo tuo caval non te ne caglia
Vorrebbe si portailo in qualche bosco,
Ma il modo nè la via non ci conosco

LXXI

Disse il gigante io il porterò ben io,
Da poi che portar me non ha voluto,
Per render ben per mal, come fa Dio,
Ma vo' che a porlo addosso mi dia ajuto.
Orlando gli dicea Morgante mio,
S'al mio consiglio ti sarai attenuto,
Questo caval tu non ve 'i porteresti,
Che ti farà come tu a lui facesti,

LXIX

But finally he thought fit to dismount,
 And said, " I am as light as any feather,
 And he has burst, — to this what say you, count ?"
 Orlando answer'd, ' Like a ship's mast rather
 You seem to me, and with the truck for front —
 Let him go, Fortune wills that we together Should march, but you on foot Morgante still "
 To which the giant answer'd, " So I will.

LXX.

" When there shall be occasion, you will see How I approve my courage in the fight " Orlando said, " I really think you'll be,
 If it should prove God's will, a goodly knight,
 • Nor will you napping there discover me
 • But never mind your horse, though out of sight
 • Twere best to carry him into some wood,
 If but the means or way I understood "

LXXI

The giant said, " Then carry him I will,
 Since that to carry me he was so slack —
 To render, as the gods do, good for ill,
 But lend a hand to place him on my back " Orlando answer'd, " If my counsel still May weigh Morgante, do not undertake
 To lift or carry this dead courser, who,
 As you have done to him, will do to you.

LXXII.

Guarda che non facesse la vendetta.
Come fece già Nesso così morto •
Non so se la sua istoria hai inteso o letta ,
E' ti farà scoppiar , dattl' conforto
Disse Morgante ajuta ch'io me 'l metta
Addosso, e poi vedrai s'io ve lo porto
Io porterei, Orlando mio gentile,
Con le campane la quel campanile

LXXIII

Disse l'abate il campanil v'è bene ,
Ma le campane voi l'avete rotte,
Dicea Morgante, e' ne porton le pene
Color che morti son là in quelle grotte ,
E levossi il cavallo in su le schiene,
E disse . guarda s'io sento di gotte,
Orlando, nelle gambe, e s' io lo posso ,
E fe' duo salti col cavallo addosso.

LXXIV.

Era Morgante come una montagna
Se facea questo, non è maraviglia
Ma pure Orlando con seco si lagna ,
Perchè pur era omai di sua famiglia
Temenza avea non pigliasse magagna
Un' altra volta costui riconsiglia
Posalo ancor, nol portare al deserto
Disse Morgante il porterò per certo

LXXII

“ Take care he don’t revenge himself, though dead,
 As Nessus did of old beyond all cure
 I don’t know if the fact you’ve heaid or read,
 But he will make you burst, you may be sure ”
 “ But help him on my back,” Morgante said,
 “ And you shall see what weight I can endure
 In place, my gentle Roland, of this palfrey,
 With all the bells, I’d carry yonder belfry ”

LXXIII.

The abbot said, “ The steeple may do well,
 But, for the bells, you’ve broken them, I wot ” Morgante answer’d, “ Let them pay in hell
 The penalty who lie dead in yon grot,”
 • And hoisting up the horse from where he fell,
 He said, “ Now look if I the gout have got,
 Orlando, in the legs—or if I have force,”—
 And then he made two gambols with the horse.

LXXIV

Morgante was like any mountain framed ;
 So if he did this, ’tis no prodigy,
 But secretly himself Orlando blamed,
 Because he was one of his family,
 And fearing that he might be hurt or maim’d,
 Once more he bade him lay his burden by “ Put down, nor bear him further the desert in ” Morgante said, “ I’ll carry him for certain.”

LXXV.

E portollo, e gittollo in luogo strano,
E tornò a la badìa subitamente
Diceva Orlando . or che più dimoriano ?
Morgante, qui non facciâm noi niente ,
E prese un gioino l'abate per mano,
E disse a quel molto discretamente,
Che vuol partir de la sua reverenzia,
E domandava e perdono e licenzia.

LXXVI.

E de gli onor ricevuti da questi,
Qualche volta pôtendo, aia buon merito ,
E dice io intendo ristorare e presto
I peisi giorni del tempo preterito
E' son più dì che licenziaarei chiesto,
Benigno padre, se non ch' io mi peito ,
Non so mostrarvi quel che diento sento ,
Tanto vi veggo del mio stai contento

LXXVII.

Io me ne porto per sempre nel core
L'abate, la badìa, questo deserto ,
Tanto v'ho posto in picciol tempo amore
Rendavi su nel ciel per me buon merto
Quel vero Dio, quello eterno Signore
Che vi serba il suo regno al fine apeito
Noi aspettiam vostra benedizione,
Raccomandiamci a le vostre orazione.

LXXV

He did, and stow'd him in some nook away,
 And to the abbey then return'd with speed
 Orlando said, " Why longer do we stay?
 " Morgante, here is nought to do indeed "
 The abbot by the hand he took one day,
 And said, with great respect, he had agreed
 To leave his reverence, but for this decision
 He wish'd to have his pardon and permission

LXXVI

The honours they continued to receive
 Perhaps exceeded what his merits claim'd
 He said, " I mean, and quickly, to retrieve
 The lost days of time past, which may be blamed,
 Some days ago I should have ask'd your leave,
 Kind father, but I really was ashamed,
 And know not how to show my sentiment,
 So much I see you with our stay content

LXXVII

" But in my heart I bear through every clime
 The abbot, abbey, and this solitude—
 So much I love you in so short a time,
 For me, from heaven reward you with all good
 The God so true, the eternal Lord sublime!
 Whose kingdom at the last hath open stood.
 Meantime we stand expectant of your blessing,
 And recommend us to your prayers with pressing."

LXXVIII

Quando l'abate il conte Orlando intese,
Rintenerè nel cor per la dolcezza,
Tanto fervor nel petto se gli accese,
E disse cavalier, se a tua prodezza
Non sono stato benigno e cortese,
Come conviensi a la gran gentilezza,
Che so che ciò ch'i'ho fatto è stato poco,
Incolpa la ignoranzia nostra e il loco.

LXXIX

Noi ti potremo di messe onorare,
Dì prediche di laude e paternostri,
Piuttosto che da cena o desinare,
O d'altri convenevol che da chiostri
Tu m'hai di te sì fatto innamorare
Per mille alte eccellenzie che tu mostri,
Ch'io me ne vengo ove tu andrai con teco
E d'altra parte tu resti quì meco

LXXX

Tanto ch'a questo pai contraddizione,
Ma so che tu se' savio, e 'ntendi e gusti,
E intendi il mio parlar per descrizione,
De' beneficj tuoi pietosi e giusti
Renda il Signore a te munerazione,
Da cui mandato in queste selve fosti,
Per le virtù del qual libèri siamo,
E grazie a lui e a te noi ne rendiamo

LXXVIII.

Now when the abbot Count Orlando heard,
 His heart grew soft with inner tenderness,
 Such fervour in his bosom bred each word,
 And, "Cavalier," he said, "if I have less
 Courteous and kind to your great worth appear'd,
 Than fits me for such gentle blood to express,
 I know I have done too little in this case,
 But blame our ignorance, and this poor place

LXXIX

"We can indeed but honour you with masses,
 And sermons, thanksgivings, and pater-nosters,
 Hot suppers, dinners (fitting other places
 In verity much rather than the cloisters),
 But such a love for you my heart embraces,
 For thousand virtues which your bosom fosters,
 That whereso'er you go I too shall be,
 And, on the other part, you rest with me

LXXX

"This may involve a seeming contradiction,
 But you I know are sage, and feel, and taste,
 And understand my speech with full conviction
 For your just pious deeds may you be graced
 With the Lord's great reward and benediction,
 By whom you were directed to this waste
 To his high mercy is a freedom due,
 For which we render thanks to him and you.

LXXI.

Tu ci hai salvato l'anima e la vita
Tanta perturbazion già que' giganti
Ci detton, che la strada era smarrita
Da ritrovar Gesù con gl' altri santi
Però troppo ci duol la tua partita,
E sconsolati restiam tutti quanti ,
Nè ritener possiamti i mesi e gli anni
Che tu non se' da vesti questi panni,

LXXXII

Ma da portar la lancia e l'armadura
E puossi meritare con essa, come
Con questa cappa , e leggi la scrittura Questo gigante al ciel diizzò le some Per tua virtù , va in pace a tua ventura
Chi tu ti sia, ch'io non ricerco il nome ,
Ma dirò sempre, s'io son domandato,
Ch' un angiol qui da Dio fussi mandato

LXXXIII

Se c'è armadura o cosa che tu voglia,
Vattene in zambra e pigliane tu stessi,
E cuopri a questo gigante le scoglia
Rispose Orlando se armadura avessi
Prima che noi uscissim de la soglia
Che questo mio compagno difendessi
Questo accetto io, e sarèmmi piacere
Disse l'abate venite a vedere

LXXXI

“ You saved at once our life and soul such fear
The giants caused us, that the way was lost
By which we could pursue a fit career
In search of Jesus and the saintly host,
And your departure breeds such sorrow here,
That comfortless we all are to our cost,
But months and years you would not stay in sloth,
Nor are you form'd to wear our sober cloth,

LXXXII

“ But to bear arms, and wield the lance, indeed,
With these as much is done, as with this cowl,
In proof of which the Scripture you may read
This giant up to heaven may bear his soul
By your compassion now in peace proceed
Your state and name I seek not to unroll,
But, if I'm ask'd, this answer shall be given,
That here an angel was sent down from heaven

LXXXIII

“ If you want armour or aught else, go in,
Look o'er the wardrobe, and take what you choose,
And cover with it o'er this giant's skin ”
Orlando answer'd, “ If there should lie loose
Some armour, ere our journey we begin,
Which might be turn'd to my companion's use,
The gift would be acceptable to me ”
The abbot said to him, “ Come in and see ”

LXXXIV

E in certa cameletta entiatì sono,
 Che d'armadure vecchie era copiosa,
 Dice l'abate tutte ve le dono,
 Morgante va rovistando ogni cosa,
 Ma solo un certo sbergo gli fu buono,
 Ch'avea tutta la maglia rugginosa
 Mai avigliossi che lo cuopra appunto
 Che mai più gnun foise glien' era aggiunto

LXXXV.

Questo fu d'un gigante smisurata,
 Ch'a la badia fu morto per antico
 Dal gran Milon d'Angiante, ch' arrivato ?
 V' era, s'appunto questa istoria dico,
 Ed era ne le mura istoriato,
 Come e' fu morto questo gran nimico
 Che fece a la badia già lunga gueira
 E Milon v'è com 'e' l'abbatte in terra

LXXXVI.

Veggendo questa istoria il conte Orlando,
 Fra suo cor disse o Dio, che sai sol tutto,
 Come venne Milon qui capitando,
 Che ha questo gigante quì distrutto
 E lesse certe lettere lacrimando,
 Che non potè tenir piu il viso asciutto,
 Com'io dirò ne la seguente istoria.
 Di mal vi guardi il Re de l'alta gloria

LXXXIV

And in a certain closet, where the wall

Was cover'd with old armour like a crust,
The abbot said to them, " I give you all "

Morgante rummaged piecemeal from the dust
The whole, which, save one curass, was too small,

And that too had the ail inlaid with rust
They wonder'd how it fitted him exactly,
Which ne'er has suited others so compactly

LXXXV.

'Twas an immeasurable giant s, who

By the great Milo of Agrate fell
Before the abbey many years ago

The story on the wall was figured well,
In the last moment of the abbey's foe,
Who long had waged a war implacable
Precisely as the war occurred they drew him,
And there was Milo as he overthrew him

LXXXVI.

Seeing this history, Count Orlando said

In his own heart, " Oh God, who in the sky
Know'st all things ! how was Milo hither led ?

Who caused the giant in this place to die ? "

And certain letters, weeping, then he read,
So that he could not keep his visage dry, —
As I will tell in the ensuing story
From evil keep you the high King of glory !

THE
PROPHECY OF DANTE.

“ 'Tis the sunset of life gives me mystical lore,
And coming events cast their shadows before ”

CAMPBELL

[This poem which Lord Byron, in sending it to Mr Murray, called "the best thing he had ever done, if not unintelligible," was written, in the summer of 1819, at " that place

Of old renown, once in the Adrian sea,
Ravenna '— where from Dante's sacred tomb
He had so oft, as many a verse declares,
Drawn inspiration " — ROGERS

The Prophecy, however, was first published in May, 1821 It is dedicated to the Countess Guiccioli, who thus describes the origin of its composition — " On my departure from Venice, Lord Byron had promised to come and see me at Ravenna Dante's tomb, the classical pine wood*, the relics of antiquity which are to be found in that place, afforded a sufficient pretext for me to invite him to come, and for him to accept my invitation He came in the month of June, 1819, arriving at Ravenna on the day of the festival of the Corpus Domini Being deprived at this time of his books, his horse, and all that occupied him at Venice, I begged him to gratify me by writing something on the subject of Dante, and, with his usual facility and rapidity, he composed his Prophecy " — E ]

* " 'Twas in a grove of spreading pines he strayed," &c
DRAIDEN'S Theodore and Honoria

DEDICATION.

LADY ! if for the cold and cloudy clime
 Where I was born, but where I would not die,
 Of the great Poet-Sire of Italy
 I dare to build the imitative rhyme,
 Harsh Runic copy of the South's sublime,
 THOU art the cause, and howsoever I
 Fall short of his immortal harmony,
 Thy gentle heart will pardon me the crime
 THOU, in the pride of Beauty and of Youth,
 Spakest, and for thee to speak and be obey'd
 Are one, but only in the sunny South
 Such sounds are utter'd, and such charms display'd,
 So sweet a language from so fair a mouth—
 Ah ! to what effort would it not persuade ?

Ravenna, June 21 1819

PREFACE.

---

IN the course of a visit to the city of Ravenna in the summer of 1819, it was suggested to the author that having composed something on the subject of Tasso's confinement, he should do the same on Dante's exile,—the tomb of the poet forming one of the principal objects of interest in that city, both to the native and to the stranger

“On this hint I spake,” and the result has been the following four cantos, in terza rima, now offered to the reader. If they are understood and approved, it is my purpose to continue the poem in various other cantos to its natural conclusion in the present age. The reader is requested to suppose that Dante addresses him in the interval between the conclusion of the Divina Commedia and his death, and shortly before the latter event, fortelling the fortunes of Italy in general in the ensuing centuries. In adopting this plan I have had in my mind the Cassandra of Lycophron, and the Prophecy of Neireus by Horace, as well as the Prophecies of Holy Writ. The measure adopted is the terza rima of Dante, which I am not aware to have seen hitherto tried in our language, except it may be by Mr Hayley, of whose translation I never saw but one extract, quoted in the notes to Caliph Vathek, so that—if I do not err—this poem may be considered as a metrical experiment. The cantos are short, and about the same length of those of the poet, whose name I have borrowed, and most probably taken in vain.

Amongst the inconveniences of authors in the present day, it is difficult for any who have a name, good or bad, to escape translation. I have had the fortune to see the fourth canto of Childe Harold translated into Italian versi sciolti,—that is, a poem written in the Spenserian stanza into blank verse, without regard to the natural divisions of the stanza or of the sense. If the present poem, being on a national topic, should chance to undergo the same fate, I would request the Italian reader to remember that when I have failed in the imitation of his great “Padre Alighier,” I have failed in imitating that which all study and few understand, since to this very day it is not yet settled what was the meaning of the allegory in the first canto of the Inferno, unless Count Marchetti’s ingenious and probable conjecture may be considered as having decided the question.

He may also pardon my failure the more, as I am not quite sure that he would be pleased with my success, since the Italians, with a pardonable nationality, are particularly jealous of all that is left them as a nation—their literature, and in the present bitterness of the classic and romantic war, are but ill disposed to permit a foreigner even to approve or imitate them, without finding some fault with his ultramontane presumption. I can easily enter into all this, knowing what would be thought in England of an Italian imitator of Milton, or if a translation of Monti, or Pindemonte, or Arici, should be held up to the rising generation as a model for their future poetical essays. But I perceive that I am deviating into an address to the Italian reader, when my business is with the English one, and be they few or many, I must take my leave of both.

THE
PROPHECY OF DANTE.<sup>(1)</sup>

CANTO THE FIRST

ONCE more in man's frail world! which I had left
 So long that 't was forgotten, and I feel
 The weight of clay again,—too soon bereft
 Of the immortal vision which could heal
 My earthly sorrows, and to God's own skies
 Let me from that deep gulf without repeal,

(1) [Dante Alighieri was born in Florence in May, 1265, of an ancient and honourable family. In the early part of his life he gained some credit in a military character, and distinguished himself by his bravery in an action where the Florentines obtained a signal victory over the citizens of Arezzo. He became still more eminent by the acquisition of court honours, and at the age of thirty-five he rose to be one of the chief magistrates of Florence, when that dignity was conferred by the suffrages of the people. From this exaltation the poet himself dated his principal misfortunes. Italy was at that time distracted by the contending factions of the Ghibelines and Guelphs,—among the latter Dante took an active part. In one of the proscriptions he was banished, his possessions confiscated, and he died in exile in 1321. Boccaccio thus describes his person and manners:—"He was of the middle stature, of a mild disposition, and, from the time he arrived at manhood, grave in his manner and deportment. His clothes were plain, and his dress always conformable to his years: his face was long, his nose aquiline, his eyes rather large than otherwise. His complexion was dark, melancholy, and pensive. In his meals he was extremely moderate, in his manners most courteous and civil, and, both in public and private life, he was admirably decorous"—E.]•

Where late my ears rung with the damned cries
 Of souls in hopeless bale, and from that place
 Of lesser torment, whence men may arise
 Pure from the fire to join the angelic race,
 Midst whom my own bright Beatrice bless'd (1)
 My spirit with her light, and to the base
 Of the eternal Triad! first, last, best,
 Mysterious, three, sole, infinite, great God!
 Soul universal! led the mortal guest,
 Unblasted by the glory, though he trod
 From star to star to reach the almighty throne
 Oh Beatrice! whose sweet limbs the sod
 So long hath press'd, and the cold marble stone,
 Thou sole pure seraph of my earliest love,
 Love so ineffable, and so alone,
 That nought on earth could more my bosom move,
 And meeting thee in heaven was but to meet
 That without which my soul, like the arkless dove,
 Had wander'd still in search of, nor her feet
 Relieved her wing till found, without thy light
 My paradise had still been incomplete (2)
 Since my tenth sun gave summer to my sight
 Thou wert my life, the essence of my thought,
 Loved ere I knew the name of love (3), and bright

(1) The reader is requested to adopt the Italian pronunciation of Beatrice, sounding all the syllables

(2) "Che sol per le belle opre
 Che fanno in Cielo il sole e l' altre stelle
 Dentro di lui' se crede il Paradiso,
 Così se guardi fiso
 Pensar ben dèi ch' ogni terren' piacere"

Canzone, in which Dante describes the person of Beatrice, Strophe third

(3) [According to Boccaccio, Dante was a lover long before he was a soldier, and his passion for the Beatrice whom he has immortalised com

Still in these dim old eyes, now overwrought
With the world's wai, and years, and banishment,
And tears for thee, by other woes untaught,
For mine is not a nature to be bent
By tyrannous faction, and the brawling crowd,
And though the long, long conflict hath been spent
In vain, and never moie, save when the cloud
Which overhangs the Apennine, my mind's eye
Pierces to fancy Florence, once so proud
Of me, can I return, though but to die,
Unto my native soil, they have not yet
Quench'd the old exile's spirit, stern and high.
But the sun, though not overcast, must set,
And the night cometh, I a old in days,
And deeds, and contemplation, and have met
Destruction face to face in all his ways.
The world hath left me, what it found me, pure,
And if I have not gather'd yet its praise,
I sought it not by any base lure,
Man wrongs, and Time avenges, and my name
May form a monument not all obscure,
Though such was not my ambition's end or aim,
To add to the vain-glorious list of those Who dabble in the pettiness of fame,
And make men's fickle breath the wind that blows
Their sail, and deem it glory to be class'd
With conquerors, and virtue's other foes,
In bloody chronicles of ages past

---

menaced while he was in his ninth year, and she in her eighth year. It is said that their first meeting was at a banquet in the house of Folco Portinari, her father, and certain it is, that the impression then made on the susceptible and constant heart of Dante was not obliterated by her death, which happened after an interval of sixteen years — CARY ]

I would have had my Florence great and free • (1)
 Oh Florence ! Florence ! unto me thou wast Like that Jerusalem which the Almighty He Wept over, "but thou wouldst not," as the bird
 Gathers its young, I would have gather'd thee
 Beneath a parent pinion, hadst thou heard
 My voice, but as the adder, deaf and fierce,
 Against the breast that cherish'd thee was stirr'd
 Thy venom, and my state thou didst amerce,
 And doom this body forfeit to the fire
 Alas ! how bitter is his country's curse
 To him who for that country would expire,
 But did not merit to expire by her,
 And loves her, loves her even in her ire
 The day may come when she will cease to err,
 The day may come she would be proud to have
 The dust she dooms to scatter, and transfer (2)
 Of him, whom she denied a home, the grave.
 But this shall not be granted, let my dust Lie where it falls, nor shall the soil which gave

(1) "L'Esilio che m'è dato onor mi tegno

* * * * *
 Cader tra' buoni è pur di lode degno "

Sonnet of Dante,

in which he represents Right, Generosity, and Temperance as banished from among men, and seeking refuge from Love, who inhabits his bosom

(2) "Ut si quis predictorum ullo tempore in fortiam dicti communis perveniret, talis perveniens igne comburatur, sic quod moriatur" Second sentence of Florence against Dante, and the fourteen accused with him The Latin is worthy of the sentence — [On the 27th of January, 1302, Dante was mulcted eight thousand lire, and condemned to two years banishment, and in case the fine was not paid, his goods were to be confiscated On the eleventh of March, the same year, he was sentenced to a punishment due only to the most desperate of malefactors The decree, that he and his associates in exile should be burned, if they fell into the hands of their enemies, was first discovered, in 1772, by the Conte Ludovico Savioli See Tiraboschi, where the sentence is given at length — E ]

Me breath<sup>1</sup>, but in her sudden fury thrust
Me forth to breathe elsewhere, so reassume
My indignant bones, because her angry gust
Forsooth is over, and repeal'd her doom,
No, — she denied me what was mine — my roof,
And shall not have what is not hers — my tomb
Too long her armed wiath hath kept aloof
The breast which would have bled for her, the heart
That beat, the mind that was temptation proof,
The man who fought, toil'd, travell'd, and each part
Of a true citizen fulfill'd, and saw
For his reward the Guelf's ascendant art
Pass his destruction even into a law.
These things are not made for forgetfulness,
Florence shall be forgotten first, too raw
The wound, too deep the wrong, and the distress
Of such endurance too prolong'd to make My pardon greater, her injustice less,
Though late repented, yet — yet for her sake
I feel some fonder yearnings, and for thine,
My own Beatificē, I would hardly take Vengeance upon the land which once was mine,
And still is hallow'd by thy dust's return,
Which would protect the murderess like a shrine,
And save ten thousand foes by thy sole urn
Though, like old Marius<sup>(1)</sup> from Minturnæ's marsh

(1) [Proconsul of Africa — After the expiration of his government, he was prosecuted by the province for extortion and cruelty, convicted on the clearest evidence, fined, and banished from Italy. Yet, reserving the greater part of his former spoils, he lived in a wanton exile, while the Africans returned home with the wretched consolation of having defrayed their own expenses, and seen the money levied on their oppressor carried to the Roman treasury — E]

And Carthage ruins, my lone breast may burn
 At times with evil feelings hot and harsh,
 And sometimes the last pangs of a vile foe
 Writhe in a dream before me, and o'er each
 My brow with hopes of triumph, — let them go !
 Such are the last infirmities of those Who long have suffer'd more than mortal woe,
 And yet being mortal still, have no repose
 But on the pillow of Revenge — Revenge,
 Who sleeps to dream of blood, and waking glows
 With the oft-baffled, slakeless thirst of change,
 When we shall mount again, and they that trod
 Be trampled on, while Death and Até range
 O'er humbled heads and sever'd necks — Great God !
 Take these thoughts from me — to thy hands I yield
 My many wrongs, and thine almighty rod
 Will fall on those who smote me, — be my shield !
 As thou hast been in peril, and in pain,
 In turbulent cities, and the tented field —
 In toil, and many troubles borne in vain
 For Florence (1) — I appeal from her to Thee !
 Thee, whom I late saw in thy loftiest reign,
 Even in that glorious vision, which to see
 And live was never granted until now,
 And yet thou hast permitted this to me

* (1) [In one so highly endowed by nature, and so consummate by instruction, we may well sympathise with a resentment which exile and poverty rendered perpetually fresh. But the heart of Dante was naturally sensible, and even tender — his poetry is full of comparisons from rural life, and the sincerity of his early passion for Beatrice pierces through the veil of allegory that surrounds her. But the memory of his injuries pursued him into the immensity of eternal light, and, in the company of saints and angels, his unforgiving spirit darkens at the name of Florence — HALLAM.]

Alas ! with what a weight upon my brow
The sense of earth and earthly things come back,
Corrosive passions, feelings dull and low,
The heart's quick throb upon the mental rack,
Long day, and dreary night, the retrospect
Of half a century bloody and black,
And the frail few years I may yet expect
Hoary and hopeless, but less hard to bear,
For I have been too long and deeply wreck'd
On the lone rock of desolate Despair
To lift my eyes more to the passing sail
Which shuns that reef so horrible and bare,
Nor raise my voice—for who would heed my wail?
I am not of this people, nor this age,
And yet my harpings will unfold a tale
Which shall preserve these times when not a page
Of then perturbed annals could attract
An eye to gaze upon their civil rage,
Did not my verse embalm full many an act
Worthless as they who wrought it 'tis the doom
Of spirits of my order to be rack'd
In life, to wear their hearts out, and consume
Their days in endless strife, and die alone,
Then future thousands crowd around their tomb,
And pilgrims come from climes where they have known
The name of him—who now is but a name,
And wasting homage o'er the sullen stone,
Spread his—by him unheard, unheeded—fame,
And mine at least hath cost me dear to die
Is nothing, but to wither thus—to tame

My mind down from its own infinity —
 To live in narrow ways with little men,
 A common sight to every common eye,
 A wanderer, while even wolves can find a den,
 Ripp'd from all kindred, from all home, all things
 That make communion sweet, and soften pain —
 To feel me in the solitude of kings
 Without the power that makes them bear a crown —
 To envy every dove his nest and wings
 Which waft him where the Apennine looks down
 On Aino, till he perches, it may be,
 Within my all inexorable town,
 Where yet my boys are, and that fatal she, <sup>(1)</sup>
 Then mother, the cold partner who hath brought Destruction for a dowry <sup>(2)</sup> — this to see

(1) This lady, whose name was Gemma, sprung from one of the most powerful Guelph families, named Donatig Corso Donati was the principal adversary of the Ghibellines. She is described as being "Adm̃tum morosa, ut de Xantippe Socratis philosophi conjugē scriptum esse legimus," according to Giannozzo Manetti. But Lionardo Aretino is scandalised with Boccaccio, in his life of Dante, for saying that literary men should not marry. "Qui il Boccaccio non ha pazienza, e dice, le mogli esser contrarie agli studj, e non si ricorda che Socrate il più nobile filosofo che mai fosse, ebbe moglie e figliuoli e uffici della Repubblica nella sua Città, e Aristotele che, &c &c ebbe due mogli in varj tempi, ed ebbe figliuoli, e ricchezze assai — E Marco Tullio — e Catone — e Varrone — e Seneca — ebbero moglie," &c &c. It is odd that honest Lionardo's examples, with the exception of Seneca, and, for any thing I know, of Aristotle, are not the most felicitous. Tully's Terentia, and Socrates' Xantippe, by no means contributed to their husbands' happiness, whatever they might do to their philosophy — Cato gave away his wife — of Varro's we know nothing — and of Seneca's, only that she was disposed to die with him, but recovered, and lived several years afterwards. But, says Lionardo, "L'uomo è animale civile, secondo piace a tutti i filosofi" And thence concludes that the greatest proof of the animal's civism is "la prima congiunzione, dalla quale multiplicata nasce la Città."

(2) [The violence of Gemma's temper proved a source of the bitterest suffering to Dante, and in that passage of the Inferno, where one of the characters says —

And feel, and know without repair, hath taught
A bitter lesson, but it leaves me free :
I have not vilely found, nor basely sought,
They made an Exile—not a slave of me

---

‘ La fiera moglie più ch’ altro, mi nuoce,

‘ me, my wife,

Of savage temper, more than aught beside,

Hath to this evil brought,’ his own conjugal unhappiness must have recurred forcibly and painfully to his mind. — CANTO I ]

THE
PROPHECY OF DANTE

---

CANTO THE SECOND

---

THE Spirit of the fervent days of Old,
 When words were things that came to pass, and thought
 Flash'd o'er the future, bidding men behold
 THEN children's children's doom already brought Forth from the abyss of time which is to be,
 The chaos of events, where lie half-wrought
 Shapes that must undergo mortality,
 What the great Seers of Israel wore within,
 That spirit was on them, and is on me,
 And if, Cassandra-like, amidst the din
 Of conflict none will hear, or heaving heed
 This voice from out the Wilderness, the sin
 Be thens, and my own feelings be my meed,
 The only guerdon I have ever known
 Hast thou not bled? and hast thou still to bleed, Italia? Ah! to me such things, foreshown
 With dim sepulchral light, bid me forget
 In thine unrepairable wrongs my own,

We can have but one country, and even yet
Thou'rt mine—my bones shall be within thy breast,
My soul within thy language, which once set
With our old Roman sway in the wide West,
But I will make another tongue arise
As lofty and more sweet, in which express'd
The hero's ardour, or the lover's sighs,
Shall find alike such sounds for every theme
That every word, as brilliant as thy skies,
Shall realise a poet's proudest dream,
And make thee Europe's nightingale of song,
So that all present speech to thine shall seem
The note of meaner birds, and every tongue
Confess its barbarism when compared with thine
This shalt thou owe to him thou didst so wrong,
Thy Tuscan Bard, the banish'd Ghibelline
Woe! woe! the veil of coming centuries
Is rent,—a thousand years which yet supine
Lie like the ocean waves ere winds arise,
Heaving in dark and sullen undulation,
Float from eternity into these eyes,
The storms yet sleep, the clouds still keep their station,
The unborn earthquake yet is in the womb,
The bloody chaos yet expects creation,
But all things are disposing for thy doom,
The elements await but for the word,
“Let there be darkness!” and thou grow'st a tomb!
Yes! thou, so beautiful, shalt feel the sword,
Thou, Italy! so fair that Paradise,
Revived in thee, blooms forth to man restored
Ah! must the sons of Adam lose it twice?

Thou, Italy! whose ever golden fields,
Plough'd by the sunbeams solely, would suffice
For the world's granary, thou, whose sky heaven gilds
With brighter stars, and robes with deeper blue,
Thou, in whose pleasant places Summer builds
Her palace, in whose cradle Empire grew,
And form'd the Eternal City's ornaments
From spoils of kings whom freemen overthrew,
Birthplace of heroes, sanctuary of saints,
Where earthly first, then heavenly glory made
Her home; thou, all which fondest fancy paints,
And finds her prior vision but portray'd
In feeble colours, when the eye—from the Alp
Of hoarid snow, and rock, and shaggy shade
Of desert-loving pine, whose emerald scalp
Nods to the storm—dilates and votes o'er thee,
And wistfully implores, as 'twere, for help
Thee thy sunny fields, my Italy,
Nearer and nearer yet, and dearer still
The more approach'd, and dearest were they flee, Thou—Thou must wither to each tyrant's will
The Goth hath been,—the German, Frank, and Hun
Are yet to come,—and on the imperial hill
Ruin, already proud of the deeds done
By the old barbarians, there awaits the new,
Throned on the Palatine, while lost and won
Rome at her feet lies bleeding, and the hue
Of human sacrifice and Roman slaughter
Troubles the clotted air, of late so blue,
And deepens into red the saffron water
Of Tiber, thick with dead, the helpless priest,
And still more helpless nor less holy daughter,

Vow'd to their God, have shrieking fled, and ceased
 Their ministry the nations take their prey,
 Iberian, Almain, Lombard, and the beast
 And bud, wolf, vulture, more humane than they Aie, these but gorge the flesh and lap the gore
 Of the departed, and then go their way,
 But those, the human savages, explore
 All paths of torture, and insatiate yet,
 With Ugolino hunger prowl for more
 Nine moons shall rise o'er scenes like this and set,<sup>(1)</sup>
 The chiefless army of the dead, which late
 Beneath the traitor Prince's banner met,
 Hath left its leader's ashes at the gate,
 Had but the royal Rebel lived, perchance
 Thou hadst been spared, but his involved thy fate.
 Oh! Rome, the spoiler of the spoil of France,
 From Biennus to the Bourbon, never, never Shall foreign standard to thy walls advance
 But Tiber shall become a mournful river
 Oh! when the strangers pass the Alps and Po, Crush them, ye rocks! floods overwhelm them, and for ever!
 Why sleep the idle avalanches so,
 To topple on the lonely pilgrim's head?
 Why doth Eridanus but overflow
 The peasant's harvest from his turbid bed?

(1) See "Sacco di Roma," generally attributed to Guicciardini. There is another written by a Jacopo Buonaparte. — [The original MS. of the latter work is preserved in the Royal Library at Paris. It is entitled, "Ragguaglio Storico di tutto l'occorso, giorno per giorno, nel Sacco di Roma dell'anno MDXXVII scritto da Jacopo Buonaparte, gentiluomo Samminatese, che vi si trovò presente." An edition of it was printed at Cologne in 1756, to which is prefixed a genealogy of the Buonaparte family.]

Weie not each barbarous hoide a nobler prey?
Over Cambyse's host the desert spiead
Her sandy ocean, and the sea waves' sway
Roll'd over Pharaoh and his thousands,—why,
Mountains and waters, do ye not as they?
And you, ye men! Romans, who dare not die,
Sons of the conquerors who overthrew
Those who overthrew proud Xerxes, where yet lie
The dead whose tomb Oblivion never knew,
Are the Alps weaker than Thermopylæ?
Then passes more alluring to the view
Of an invader? is it they, or ye,
That to each host the mountain-gate unbair,
And leave the march in peace, the passage free?
Why, Nature's self detains the victor's car,
And makes your land impregnable, if earth
Could be so, but alone she will not war,
Yet aids the warrior worthy of his birth
In a soil where the mothers bring forth men
Not so with those whose souls are little worth,
For them no fortress can avail,—the den
Of the poor reptile which preserves its sting
Is more secure than walls of adamant, when
The hearts of those within are quivering
Are ye not brave? Yes, yet the Ausonian soil Hath hearts, and hands, and arms, and hosts to bring
Against Oppression, but how vain the toil,
While still Division sows the seeds of woe
And weakness, till the stranger reaps the spoil.
Oh! my own beauteous land! so long laid low,

So long the grave of thy own children's hopes,
When there is but required a single blow
To break the cham, yet—yet the Avenger stops,
And Doubt and Discord step 'twixt thine and thee,
And join their strength to that which with thee
copes,
What is there wanting then to set thee free,
And show thy beauty in its fullest light?
To make the Alps impassable, and we,
Her sons, may do this with one deed. Unite

THE
PROPHECY OF DANTE

---

CANTO THE THIRD

---

FROM out the mass of never-dying ill,      [Sword,
     The Plague, the Prince, the Stranger, and the Vials of wrath but emptied to refill
 And flow again, I cannot all record
     That crowds on my prophetic eye the earth
     And ocean written o'er would not afford
 Space for the antial, yet it shall go forth,
     Yes, all, though not by human pen, is graven,
     There where the farthest suns and stars have birth,
 Spread like a banner at the gate of heaven,
     The bloody scroll of our millennial wrongs
     Waves, and the echo of our groans is driven
 Athwart the sound of archangelic songs,
     And Italy, the martyr'd nation's gore,
     Will not in vain arise to where belongs
 Omnipotence and mercy evermore
     Like to a harpstring stricken by the wind,
     The sound of her lament shall, rising o'er

The seraph voices, touch the Almighty Mind.
Meantime I, humblest of thy sons, and of Earth's dust by immortality refined
To sense and suffering, though the vain may scoff,
And tyrants threat, and meeke victims bow
Before the storm because its breath is rough,
To thee, my country<sup>1</sup> whom before, as now,
I loved and love, devote the mournful lyre
And melancholy gift high powers allow
To read the future, and if now my fire
Is not as once it shone o'er thee, forgive!
I but foretell thy fortunes—then expire,
Think not that I would look on them and live.
A spirit forces me to see and speak,
And for my guerdon grants not to survive;
My heart shall be pou'd over thee and break
Yet for a moment, ere I must resume
Thy sable web of sorrow, let me take Over the gleams that flash athwart thy gloom
A softer glimpse, some stars shine through thy night,
And many meteors, and above thy tomb
Leans sculptured Beauty, which Death cannot blight,
And from thine ashes boundless spirits rise
To give thee honour, and the earth delight,
Thy soil shall still be pregnant with the wise,
The gay, the lean'd, the generous, and the brave,
Native to thee as summer to thy skies,
Conquerois on foreign shores, and the far wave, (1)

(1) Alexander of Parma, Spinola, Pescara, Eugene of Savoy, Montecucco

Discoverers of new worlds, which take their name, (1)
For thee alone they have no arm to save,
And all thy recompense is in their fame,
A noble one to them, but not to thee—
Shall they be glorious, and thou still the same?
Oh! more than these illustrious far shall be
The being—and even yet he may be born—
The mortal saviour who shall set thee free,
And see thy diadem so changed and worn
By flesh barbarians, on thy brow replaced;
And the sweet sun replenishing thy morn,
Thy mortal morn, too long with clouds defaced
And noxious vapours from Avernus risen,
Such as all they must breathe who are debased
By servitude, and have the mind in prison
Yet through this centuried eclipse of woe
Some voices shall be heard, and earth shall listen,
Po shall follow in the path I show,
And make it broader, the same brilliant sky
Which cheers the buds to song shall bid them glow,
And raise then notes as natural and high,
Tuneful shall be their numbers, they shall sing
Many of love, and some of liberty,
But few shall soar upon that eagle's wing,
And look in the sun's face with eagle's gaze,
All free and fearless as the feather'd king,
But fly more near the earth, how many a phrase
Sublime shall lavish'd be on some small prince
In all the prodigality of praise!
And language, eloquently false, evince

(1) Columbus, Americus Vesputius, Sebastian Cabot.

The harlotry of genius, which, like beauty,
 Too oft forgets its own self-reverence,
 And looks on prostitution as a duty
 He who once enters in a tyrant's hall <sup>(1)</sup>
 As guest is slave, his thoughts become a booty,
 And the first day which sees the chain enthral
 A captive, sees his half of manhood gone — <sup>(2)</sup>
 The soul's emasculation saddens all
 His spirit, thus the Bard too near the throne
 Quails from his inspiration, bound to please, —
 How servile is the task to please alone!
 To smooth the verse to suit his sovereign's ease
 And royal leisure, nor too much prolong
 Aught save his eulogy, and find, and seize,
 Or force, or forge fit argument of song! [troubles,
 Thus trammell'd, thus condemn'd to Flattery's
 He toils through all, still trembling to be wrong
 For fear some noble thoughts, like heavenly rebels,
 Should rise up in high treason to his brain,
 He sings, as the Athenian spoke, with pebbles In's mouth, lest truth should stammer through his stam

But out of the long file of sonneteers
 There shall be some who will not sing in vain,
 And he, their prince, shall rank among my peers, <sup>(3)</sup>
 And love shall be his torment, but his grief
 Shall make an immortality of tears,
 And Italy shall hail him as the Chief

(1) A verse from the Greek tragedians, with which Pompey took leave of Cornelia on entering the boat in which he was slain

(2) The verse and sentiment are taken from Homer

(3) Petrarch

Of Poet-lovers, and his higher song
 Of Freedom wreath him with as green a leaf
 But in a farther age shall rise along
 The banks of Po two greater still than he,
 The world which s<sup>l</sup>ed on him shall do them wrong
 Till they are ashes, and repose with me.
 The first will make an epoch with his lyre,
 And fill the earth with feats of chivalry
 His fancy like a rainbow, and his fire,
 Like that of Heaven, immortal, and his thought
 Borne onward with a wing that cannot tire
 Pleasure shall, like a butterfly new caught,
 Flutter her lovely pinions o'er his theme,
 And Art itself seem into N<sup>u</sup>re wrought
 By the transparency of his bright dream —
 The second, of a tenderer, sadder mood,
 Shall pour his soul out o'er Jerusalem,
 He<sup>re</sup>, too, shall sing of arms, and Christian blood Shed where Christ bled for man, and his high harp
 Shall, by the willow over Jordan's flood,
 Revive a song of Sion, and the sharp
 Conflict, and final triumph of the brave
 And pious, and the strife of hell to warp
 Their hearts from their great purpose, until wave
 The red-cross banners where the first red Cross
 Was crimson'd from his veins who died to save,
 Shall be his sacred argument, the loss
 Of years, of favour, freedom, even of fame
 Contested for a time, while the smooth gloss
 Of courts would slide o'er his forgotten name,
 And call captivity a kindness, meant
 To shield him from insanity or shame,

Such shall be his meet guerdon ! who was sent
 To be Christ's Laureate—they knew and him well !
 Florence dooms me but death or banishment,
 Ferrara him a pittance and a cell,
 Harder to bear and less deserved, for I
 Had stung the factions which I strove to quell,
 But this meek man, who with a lover's eye
 Will look on earth and heaven, and who will deign
 To embalm with his celestial flattery
 As poor a thing as e'er was spawn'd to reign,
 What will he do to merit such a doom ?
 Perhaps he'll love,—and is not love in vain
 Torture enough without a living tomb ?
 Yet it will be so—he and his compeer,
 The Bard of Chivalry, will both consume
 In penury and pain too many a year,
 And, dying in despondency, bequeath
 To the kind world, which scarce will yield a ~~man~~
 A heritage enriching all who breathe
 With the wealth of a genuine poet's soul,
 And to their country a redoubled wreath
 Unmatch'd by time, not Hellas can unroll
 Through her olympiads two such names, though one
 Of hers be mighty,—and is this the whole
 Of such men's destiny beneath the sun ? (1)

(1) ["Why is it necessary to adopt the invidious and too common practice of weighing the transcendent talents of Ariosto and Tasso in opposite, and as it were contending, scales ? Reader ! if you have already had the delight of perusing the last production of Lord Byron's muse, how must you have admired those exquisitely beautiful and affecting portraits of the two matchless poets which conclude the third canto of the 'Prophecy of Dante' ! We there see them contrasted without such invidious comparison, or depreciation of the one to exalt the other, and characterised in numbers, style, and sentiment, so wonderfully Dantesque, that—"]

Must all the finer thoughts, the thrilling sense,
 The electric blood with which their arteries run,
 Their body's self turn'd soul with the intense Feeling of that which is, and fancy of That which should be, to such a recompense
 Conduct? shall their bright plumage on the rough Storm be still scatter'd? Yes, and it must be,
 For, form'd of far too penetrable stuff,
 These birds of Paradise but long to flee
 Back to their native mansion, soon they find Earth's mist with their pure pinions not agree,
 And die or are degraded, for the mind
 Succumbs to long infection, and despair,
 And vulture passions flying close behind,
 Await the moment to assail and tear,
 And when at length the winged wanderers stoop,
 Then is the prey-birds' triumph, then they share
 The spoil, o'erpower'd at length by one fell swoop
 Yet some have been untouch'd who learn'd to bear,
 Some whom no power could ever force to droop,
 Who could resist themselves even, hardest care!
 And task most hopeless, but some such have been,
 And if my name amongst the number were,
 That destiny austere, and yet serene,
 Were prouder than more dazzling fame unblest'd,
 The Alp's snow summit nearer heaven is seen
 Than the volcano's fierce eruptive crest,
 Whose splendour from the black abyss is flung,

---

mastering our uncongenial language, and habitual modes of thought as well as expression — they seem to have been inspired by the very genius of the inarrabile Dante himself' — GLENBELVIEW, Illegio detto, p 106 ]

While the scorch'd mountain, from whose burning breast

A temporary torturing flame is wrung,
Shines for a night of terror, then repels
Its fire back to the hell from whence it sprung,
The hell which in its entrails ever dwells.

THE
PROPHECY OF DANTE.

---

CANTO THE FOURTH

---

MANY are poets who have never penn'd
 Their inspiration, and perchance the best
 They felt, and loved, and died, but would not lend
 Their thoughts to meaner beings, they compress'd
 The god within them, and rejoin'd the stars
 Unlaunch'd upon earth, but far more bless'd
 Than those who are degraded by the jais
 Of passion, and then frailties link'd to fame,
 Conquerors of high renown, but full of scars
 Many are poets but without the name,
 For what is poesy but to create
 From overfeeling good or ill, and aim
 At an external life beyond our fate,
 And be the new Prometheus of new men,
 Bestowing fire from heaven, and then, too late,
 Finding the pleasure given repaid with pain,
 And vultures to the heart of the bestower,
 Who, having lavish'd his high gift in vain,

Lies chain'd to his lone rock by the sea-shore?
So be it we can bear — But thus all they Whose intellect is an o'er-mastering power
Which still recoils from its encumbering clay
Or lightens it to spurn it, whatsoe'er
The form which their creations may essay,
Are bards, the kindled marble's bust may wear
More poesy upon its speaking brow
Than aught less than the Homeric page may bear,
One noble stroke with a whole life may glow,
Or deify the canvass till it shine
With beauty so surpassing all below,
That they who kneel to idols so divine
Break no commandment, for high heaven is there
Transfused, transfigured and the line
Of poesy, which peoples but the air
With thought and beings of our thought reflected,
Can do no more — then let the artist share
The palm, he shares the peril, and dejected
Faints o'er the labour unapproved — Alas!
Despair and Genius are too oft connected
Within the ages which before me pass
Art shall resume and equal even the sway
Which with Apelles and old Phidias
She held in Hellas' unforgetten day
Ye shall be taught by Rum to revive
The Grecian forms at least from their decay,
And Roman souls at last again shall live
In Roman works wrought by Italian hands,
And temples, loftier than the old temples, give
New wonders to the world, and while still stands
The austere Pantheon, into heaven shall soar

A dome<sup>(1)</sup>, its image, while the base expands
 Into a fane surpassing all before,
 Such as all flesh shall flock to kneel in ne'er
 Such sight hath been unfolded by a door
 As this, to which all nations shall repair,
 And lay their sins at this huge gate of heaven
 And the bold Architect unto whose care
 The daring charge to raise it shall be given,
 Whom all arts shall acknowledge as their lord,<sup>(2)</sup>
 Whether into the marble chaos driven
 His chisel bid the Hebrew<sup>(3)</sup>, at whose word

(1) The cupola of St Peter's

(2) ["If," says Sir Joshua Reynolds, "the high admiration and esteem in which Michael Angelo has been held by all nations, and in all ages, should be put to the account of prejudice, it must still be granted that those prejudices could not have been entertained without a cause the ground of our prejudice then becomes the source of our admiration. But from whatever it proceeds, or whatever it is called, it will not, I hope, be thought presumptuous in me to appear in the train, I cannot say of his imitators, but of his admirers. I have taken another course, one more suited to my abilities, and to the taste of the times in which I live. Yet, however unequal I feel myself to that attempt, were I now to begin the world again I would tread in the steps of that great master. To kiss the hem of his garment, to catch the slightest of his perfections, would be glory and distinction enough for an ambitious man"—SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS' Discourses, vol. II. p. 216.]

(3) The statue of Moses on the monument of Julius II

SONETTO

Di Giovanni Battista Zappi

Chi è costui, che in dura pietra scolto,
 Siede gigante, e le più illustre, e conte
 Opere dell'arte avvanza, e ha vive, e pronte
 Le labbra sì, che le parole ascolto?
 Quest'è Mosè, ben me 'l diceva il folto
 Onor del mento, e 'l doppio raggio in fronte, Quest'è Mosè, quando scendea dal monte,
 E gran parte del Numi avea nel volto

Israel left Egypt, stop the waves in store,
 O! hues of Hell be by his pencil pour'd
 Over the damn'd before the Judgment throne, (1)
 Such as I saw them, such as all shall see,
 Or fanes be built of grandeur yet unknown,

Tal era allor, che le sonanti, e vaste
 Aequa ci sospese i sed d' intorno, e tale
 Quando il mar chiuse, e ne fè tomba altrui
 L' voi sue tombe un rio vitello alzate
 Alzati veste margo i questi cefuile
 Ch' erimen fillo l' adorar coster

"And who is he that, shap'd in sculptured stone,
 Sits giant like a stern monument of art
 Upon illud'd, while in usage seem to start
 From his prompt lips, and we his precept own?
 — His Moses, by his beard's thick honours known,
 And the twin beams that from his temples dart,
 'His Moses, seated on the mount apart,
 Whilst yet the Godhead o'er his features shone
 Such once he look'd, when once in sounding wave
 Suspended hung, and such amidst the storm,
 When o'er his toes the reflux waters roar'd
 An idol call his followers did engrave,
 But had they rais'd this awe-commanding form,
 Then had they with less guilt their work ador'd' — HOODERS

(1) The Last Judgment, in the Sistine Chapel — ["It is obvious, throughout Michael Angelo's works, that the poetical mind of Dante influenced his feeling. The demons in the Last Judgment, with all their mixed and various passions, may find a prototype in 'La Divina Commedia'. The figures rising from the grave mark his study of 'L' Inferno e il Purgatorio', and the subject of the Frozen Serpent, in the Sistine Chapel, must remind every reader of canto xxxi dell' Inferno, where the flying serpents, the writhings and contortions of the human body from envenomed wounds, are described with pathos and horror, and the execution of Haman, in the opposite angle of the same ceiling, is doubtless designed from these lines, —

'Poi piove dentro all' altra fantasia
 Un crocifisso dispettoso e fiero
 Nella sua vista, e cotai si morì
 Intorno ed esso ci 'l grande Assueo
 Ester sua sposa, e 'l giusto Mardocheo,
 Che fu al dire ed al far così intero' " — DUPPA ]

The stream of his great thoughts shall spring from me, (1) ¶

The Ghibelline, who traversed the three realms
Which form the empire of eternity
Amidst the clash of swords, and clang of helms,
The age which I anticipate, no less
Shall be the Age of Beauty, and while wheels
Calamity the nations with distress,
The genius of my country shall arise,
A Cedar towering o'er the Wilderness,
Lovely in all its branches to all eyes,
Fragrant as fair, and recognised afar,
Wafting its native incense through the skies
Sovereigns shall pause amidst their sport of wail,
Wean'd for an hour from blood, to turn and gaze
On canvass or on stone, and they who may
All beauty upon earth, compell'd to praise,
Shall feel the power of that which they destroy,
And Art's mistaken gratitude shall raise
To tyrants who but take her for a toy
Emblems and monuments, and prostitute

(1) I have read somewhere (if I do not err, for I cannot recollect where,) that Dante was so great a favourite of Michael Angelo's, that he had designed the whole of the Divina Commedia, but that the volume containing these studies was lost by sea — ["Michael Angelo's copy of Dante," says Duppa, "was a large folio, with Landino's commentary, and upon the broad margin of the leaves he designed, with a pen and ink, all the interesting subjects. This book was possessed by Antonio Montauti, a sculptor and architect of Florence, who, being appointed architect to St Peter's, removed to Rome, and shipped his effects at Leghorn for Civitavecchia, among which was this edition of Dante in the voyage the vessel foundered at sea, and it was unfortunately lost in the wreck."]

Her charms to pontiffs proud, (1) who but employ
 The man of genius as the meanest brute
 To bear a burthen, and to serve a need,
 To sell his labours, and his soul to boot
 Who toils for nations may be poor indeed,
 But free, who sweats for monarchs is no more
 Than the gilt chamberlain, who, clothed and fee'd.
 Stands sleek and slavish, bowing at his door
 Oh, Power that rulest and inspirest ! how Is it that they on earth, whose earthly power
 Is likest thine in heaven in outward show,

(1) See the treatment of Michael Angelo by Julius II., and his neglect by Leo X. — [Julius II. was no sooner seated on the papal throne than he was surrounded by men of genius, and Michael Angelo was among the first invited to his court. The pope had a personal attachment to him, and conversed with him upon every subject, as well as sculpture, with familiarity and friendship, and, that he might visit him frequently, and with perfect convenience, caused a covered bridge to be made from the Vatican palace to his study, to enable him to pass it all times without being observed. On paying his visit one morning, Michael Angelo was rudely interrupted by the person in waiting, who said, ' I have in order not to let you enter.' Michael felt with indignation this unmerited disgrace, and, in the warmth of resentment, desired him to tell the Pope, "from that time forward, if his Holiness should want him, he should have to seek him in another place." On his return home, he ordered his servants to sell the furniture in his house to the Jews, and to follow him to Florence. Himself, the same evening, took post, and arrived at Poggibonzi castle, in Tuscany, before he rested. The Pope despatched five couriers with orders to conduct him back, but he was not overtaken until he was in a foreign state. A reconciliation was, however, a few months after, effected at Bologna, through the mediation of the gonfaloniere. As Michael Angelo entered the presence chamber, the Pope gave him an unkind look of displeasure, and after a short pause saluted him, "In the stead of your coming to us, you seem to have expected that we should wait upon you." Michael Angelo replied, with submission, that his error arose from too hastily feeling a disgrace that he was unconscious of meriting, and hoped his Holiness would pardon what was past. The Pope thereupon gave him his benediction, and restored him to his friendship. The whole reign of Leo X. was a blank in the life of Michael Angelo. — DUFFA.]

Least like to thee in attributes divine,
 Tread on the universal necks that bow,
 And then assure us that their rights are thine ?
 And how is it that they, the sons of fame,
 Whose inspiration seems to them to shine
 From high, they whom the nations ofttest name,
 Must pass their days in penury or pain,
 Or step to grandeur through the paths of shame,
 And wear a deeper brand and gaudier chain ?
 Or if then destiny be born aloof
 From lowliness, or tempted thence in vain,
 In their own souls sustain a harder proof,
 The inner war of passions deep and fierce ?
 Florence ! when thy harsh sentence razed my roof,
 I loved thee , but the vengeance of my verse,
 The hate of injuries which every year
 Makes greater, and accumulates my curse,
 Shall live, outliving all thou holdest dear,
 Thy pride, thy wealth, thy freedom, and even that,
 The most infernal of all evils here,
 The sway of petty tyrants in a state,
 For such sway is not limited to kings,
 And demagogues yield to them but in date
 As swept off sooner , in all deadly things
 Which make men hate themselves, and one another,
 In discord, cowardice, cruelty, all that springs
 From Death the Sin-born's incest with his mother,
 In rank oppression in its rudest shape,
 The faction Chief is but the Sultan's brother,
 And the worst despot's far less human ape
 Florence ! when this lone spirit, which so long,
 Yearn'd, as the captive toiling at escape,

To fly back to thee in despite of wrong,
 An exile, saddest of all prisoners, <sup>(1)</sup>
 Who has the whole world for a dungeon strong,
 Seas, mountains, and the horizon's verge for bars,
 Which shut him from the sole small spot of earth
 Where—whatsoever his fate—he still were heirs,
 His country's, and might die where he had birth—
 Florence! when this lone spirit shall return
 To kindred spirits, thou wilt feel my worth,
 And seek to honour with an empty urn
 The ashes thou shalt never obtain <sup>(2)</sup>—Alas!

(1) [In his "Convito," Dante speaks of his banishment, and the poverty and distress which attended it, in very affecting terms. "Alas!" said he, "had it pleased the Dispenser of the Universe that the occasion of this exile had never existed, that neither otherish had committed wrong against me, nor I suffered unjustly, suffered, I say, the punishment of exile and of poverty, since it was the pleasure of the citizens of that fairest and most renowned daughter of Rome, Florence, to cast me forth out of her sweet bosom, in which I had my birth and nourishment, even to the ripeness of my age, and in which, with her good will, I desire, with all my heart, to rest this wearied spirit of mine, and to terminate the time allotted to me on earth. Wandering over almost every part, to which this our language extends, have gone about like a mendicant, showing to all what my will the wound with which fortune has smitten me, and which is often imputed to his ill-deserving on whom it is inflicted. I have, indeed, been a vessel without sail and without steering, carried about to divers ports, and round, and shores, by the dry wind that pursues out of sad poverty, and have appeared before the eyes of many who perhaps from some report that had reached them, had imagined me of a different form, in whose sight not only my person was disparaged, but every action of mine became of less value, as well already performed, as those which yet remained for me to attempt"]

(2) [About the year 1306, the friends of Dante succeeded in obtaining his restoration to his country and his possessions, on condition that he should pay a certain sum of money, and, entering a church, there avow himself guilty, and ask pardon of the republic. The following was his answer, on this occasion, to one of his kinsmen.—"I read your letter, which I received with due respect and affliction, I observe how much you have at heart my restoration to my country. I am bound to you the more gratefully, that an exile freely finds a friend. But, after mature consideration, I must, by my answer, disappoint the wishes of some little

"What have I done to thee, my people?" (1) Stern
 Are all thy dealings, but in this they pass
 The limits of man's common malice, for All that a citizen could be I was,

---

minds, and I confide in the judgment to which your impartiality and prudence will lead you Your nephew and mine has written to me, what indeed had been mentioned by many other friends, that, by a decree concerning the exiles, I am allowed to return to Florence, provided I pay a certain sum of money, and submit to the humiliation of asking and receiving absolution wherein, my Father, I see two propositions that are ridiculous and impertinent I speak of the impetunence of those who mention such conditions to me for in your letter, dictated by judgment and discretion, there is no such thing Is such an invitation to return to his country glorious for Dante, after suffering in exile almost fifteen years? Is it thus, then, they would recompense innocence which all the world knows, and the labour and fatigue of unremitting study? Far from the man who is familiar with philosophy, be the senseless buseness of a heart of earth, that could do like a little sciolist, and imitate the infamy of some others, by offering himself up as it were in chains Far from the man who cries aloud for justice, this compromise, by his money, with his persecutors? No, my Father, this is not the way that shall lead me back to my country But I shall return with hasty steps, if you or any other can open to me a way that shall not derogate from the fame and honour of Dante, but if by no such way Florence can be entered, then Florence I shall never enter What! shall I not every where enjoy the sight of the sun and stars? and may I not seek and contemplate, in every corner of the earth under the canopy of heaven, consoling and delightful truth, without first rendering myself inglorious, nay infamous, to the people and republic of Florence? Bread, I hope, will not fail me" Yet he continued to experience

"How salt the savour is of others' bread,
 How hard the passage to descend and climb
 By others' stairs!"

His countrymen persecuted even his memory he was excommunicated after death by the Pope — E ]

(1) "I scrissi più volte non solamente a particolari cittadini del reggimento, ma ancora al popolo, e intra l'altre una Epistola assai lunga che cominciò — 'Popule mi, quid feci tibi' —"

Vita di Dante scritta da Leonaro Aretino

Raised by thy will, all thine in peace or war,
 And for this, thou hast war'd with me — 'Tis done
 I may not overleap the eternal bar
 Built up between us, and will die alone,
 Beholding with the dark eye of a seer
 The evil days to gifted souls foreshown,
 Foretelling them to those who will not hear
 As in the old time, till the hour be come When Truth shall strike their eyes through many a tear,
 And make them own the Prophet in his tomb <sup>(1)</sup>

(1) [Dante died at Ravenna in 1321, in the palace of his patron, Guido Novello di Polenta, who testified his sorrow and respect by the sumptuousness of his obsequies, and by giving orders to erect a monument, which he did not live to complete. His countrymen showed, too late, that they knew the value of what they had lost. At the beginning of the next century, they entreated that the mortal remains of their illustrious citizen might be restored to them, and deposited among the tombs of their fathers. But the people of Ravenna were unwilling to part with the sad and honourable memorial of their own hospitality. No better success attended the subsequent negotiations of the Florentines for the same purpose, though renewed under the auspices of Leo X., and conducted through the powerful mediation of Michael Angelo.]

Never did any poem rise so suddenly into notice, after the death of its author, as the Divina Commedia. About the year 1400, Giovanni Visconti, Archbishop of Milan, selected six of the most learned men in Italy,—two divines, two philosophers, and two Florentines,—and gave them in charge to contribute their joint endeavours towards the compilation of an ample comment, a copy of which is preserved in the Laurentian library. At Florence, a public lecture was founded for the purpose of explaining a poem, which was at the same time the boast and the disgrace of the city. The decree for this institution was passed in 1452, and in that year Boccaccio was appointed, with a salary of a hundred florins, to deliver lectures in one of the churches on the first of their poets. The example of Florence was speedily followed by Bologna, Pisa, Piacenza, and Venice. It is only within a few years, that the merits of this great and original poet were attended to, and made known in this country. And this seems to be owing to a translation of the very pathetic story of Count Ugolino, to the judicious and spirited summary given of this poem, in the 31st section of the History of English Poetry, and to Mr. Hayley's translations of the three cantos of the Inferno. "Dante be lieved," says Ugo Foscolo, "that, by his sufferings on earth, he atoned for the errors of humanity—

‘Ma la bontà divina ha sì gran braccia,
Che prende ciò che si rivolge a lei’

‘So wide arms
Hath goodness infinite, that it receives
All who turn to it —

And he seems to address Heaven in the attitude of a worshipper, rather than a suppliant. Being convinced ‘that Man is then truly happy when he freely exercises all his energies,’ he walked though the world with an assured step, ‘keeping his vigils’—

‘So that, nor night nor slumber with close stealth
Convey’d from him a single step in all
The goings on of time’

He collected the opinions, the follies, the vicissitudes, the miseries, and the passions that agitate mankind, and left behind him a monument, which, while it humbles us by the representation of our own wretchedness, should make us glory that we partake of the same nature with such a man, and encourage us to make the best use of our fleeting existence”
—E.]

OCCASIONAL PIECES.

VERSICLES (1)

I READ the "Christabel,"
 Very well
 I read the "Missionary," Pretty—very
 I tried at "Ilderim," Ahem!
 I read a sheet of "Marg'ret of Anjou," (2)
Can you?
 I turn'd a page of Scott's "Waterloo," Pooh! pooh!
 I look'd at Wordsworth's milk-white "Rylstone Doe," Hillo!
 &c &c &c.

TO MR. MURRAY (3)

To hook the reader, you, John Murray,
 Have publish'd "Anjou's Margaret,"
 Which won't be sold off in a hurry
 (At least, it has not been as yet),

(1) ["I have been ill with a slow fever, which at last took to flying, and became as quick as need be. But, at length, after a week of half delirium, burning skin, thirst, hot headach, horrible pulsation, and no sleep, by the blessing of barley water, and refusing to see my physician, I recovered. It is an epidemic of the place. Here are some versicles, which I made one sleepless night." — B Letters. Venice, March, 1817]

(2) [The "Missionary" was written by Mr Bowles, "Ilderim" by Mr Gally Knight, and "Margaret of Anjou" by Miss Holford]

(3) [See Moore's Notices, ante, Vol III p 367]

And then, still further to bewilder 'em,
Without remorse you set up "Idleum,"

So mind you don't get into debt,
Because as how, if you should fail,
These books would be but baddish bail

And mind you do not let escape

These rhymes to Morning Post or Peiry,
Which would be very treacherous — very,
And get me into such a scrape !

For, firstly, I should have to sally,
All in my little boat, against a Galley,
And, should I chance to slay the Assyrian knight,
Have next to combat with the female knight

March 25 1817

EPISTLE FROM MR MURRAY TO
DR POLIDORI (1)

DEAR Doctor, I have read your play,
Which is a good one in its way, —
Purges the eyes and moves the bowels,
And drenches handkerchiefs like towels

(1) [For some particulars relating to Dr Polidori, and his tragedy, see art., Vol I p 275 "Index," says Lord Byron, "was much more disgusted with any human production than with the eternal nonsense, and tracasseries, and emptiness, and ill humour, and vanity of this young person, but he has some talent, and is a man of honour, and his dispositions of amendment. Therefore use your interest for him, for he is improved and improvable. You want a 'civil and delicate declension' for the medical tragedy. Take it" — Lord B. to M. M. August 21 1817.]

With tears, that, in a flux of grief,
 Afford hysterical relief
 To shatter'd nerves and quicken'd pulses,
 Which your catastrophe convulses

I like your moral and machinery,
 Your plot, too, has such scope for scenery,
 Your dialogue is apt and smart,
 The play's concoction full of art,
 Your hero raves, your heroine cries,
 All stab, and every body dies
 In short, your tragedy would be
 The very thing to hear and see
 And for a piece of publication,
 If I decline on this occasion,
 It is not that I am not sensible
 To merits in themselves ostensible,
 But—and I grieve to speak it—plays
 Are drugs—mere drugs, sir—now-a-days.
 I had a heavy loss by “Manuel,”— Too lucky if it prove not annual,—
 And Sotheby, with his “Orestes,” (Which, by the by, the author's best is,)
 Has lain so very long on hand
 That I despair of all demand
 I've advertised, but see my books,
 Or only watch my shopman's looks,—
 Still Ivan, Ina, and such lumber,
 My back-shop glut, my shelves encumber

There's By n too, who once did better,
 Has sent me, folded in a letter,

A sort of—it's no more a drama
 Than Darnley, Ivan, or Kehama,
 'So alter'd since last year his pen is,
 I think he's lost his wits at Venice
 In short, sir, what with one and t' other,
 I dare not venture on another
 I write in haste, excuse each blunder,
 The coaches through the street so thunder'
 My room's so full—we've Gifford here
 Reading MS, with Hookham Fiere,
 Pronouncing on the nouns and particles
 Of some of our forthcoming Articles

The Quarterly—Ah, sir, if you
 Had but the genius to review!—
 A smart critique upon St Helena,
 Or if you only would but tell in a
 Short compass what — but, to resume
 As I was saying, sir, the room—
 The room's so full of wits and bards,
 Crabbes, Campbells, Crokers, Fiercs, and Wards
 And others, neither bards nor wits —
 My humble tenement admits
 All persons in the dress of gent,
 From Mr Hammond to Dog Dent

A party dines with me to-day,
 All clever men, who make their way,
 Crabbe, Malcolm, Hamilton, and Chantrey,
 Are all partakers of my pantry
 They're at this moment in discussion
 On poor De Stael's late dissolution

Her book, they say, was in advance—
 Play Heaven, she tell the truth of France!
 Thus run our time and tongues away.—
 But, to return, sir, to your play
 Sorry, sir, but I can not deal,
 Unless 'twere acted by O'Neill
 My hands so full, my head so busy,
 I'm almost dead, and always dizzy,
 And so, with endless truth and hurry,
 Dear Doctor, I am yours,

JOHN MURRAY

EPISTLE TO MR MURRAY<sup>(1)</sup>

My dear Mr Murray,
 You're in a damn'd hurry
 To set up this ultimate Canto,<sup>(2)</sup>
 But (if they don't rob us)
 You'll see Mr. Hobhouse
 Will bring it safe in his portmanteau

For the Journal you hint of,
 As ready to print off,
 No doubt you do right to commend it,
 But as yet I have writ off
 The devil a bit of
 Our "Beppo"—when copied, I'll send it

(1) [See anti, Vol IV p<sup>o</sup>76]

(2) [The fourth Canto of "Childe Harold"—E]

Then you've * * * 's Tou, —
No great things, to be sure, —
You could hardly begin with a less work,
For the pompous rascallion,
Who don't speak Italian
Nor French, must have scribbled by guess-work.

You can make any loss up
With "Spence" and his gossip,
A work which must surely succeed,
Then Queen Mary's Epistle-craft,
With the new "Fytte" of "Whistlecraft,"
Must make people purchase and read

Then you've General Gordon,
Who girded his sword on,
To serve with a Muscovite master,
And help him to polish
A nation so owlsh,
They thought shaving their beards a disaster

For the man, "poor and shrewd,"
With whom you'd conclude
A compact without more delay,
Perhaps some such pen is Still extant in Venice,
But please, sir, to mention your pay

Venice, January 8 1818.

TO MR MURRAY (1)

STRAHAN, Tonson, Lintot of the times,
Patron and publisher of rhymes,
For thee the bard up Pindus climbs,
My Murray.

To thee, with hope and terror dumb,
The unfledged MS. authors come,
Thou printest all—and sellest some—
My Murray

Upon thy table's baize so green
The last new Quarterly is seen,—
But where is thy new Magazine,
My Murray?

Along thy sprucest bookshelves shine
The works thou deemest most divine—
The “Art of Cookery,” and mine,
My Murray

Tours, Travels, Essays, too, I wist,
And Sermons to thy mill bring grist,
And then thou hast the “Navy List,”
My Murray

And Heaven forbid I should conclude
Without “the Board of Longitude,” Although this narrow paper would,
My Murray!

Venice, March 25 1818

(1) [See Moore's Notices, anti., Vol. IV, p 96]

TO THOMAS MOORE (1)

What are you doing now,
 Oh Thomas Moore?
 What are you doing now,
 Oh Thomas Moore?
 Sighing or sung now,
 Rhyming or wooing now,
 Billing or cooing now,
 Which, Thomas Moore?

But the Carnival's coming,
 Oh Thomas Moore!
 The Carnival's coming,
 Oh Thomas Moore!
 Masking and humming,
 Firing and drumming,
 Guitaring and strumming,
 Oh Thomas Moore!

— — — — —

EPITAPH FOR WILLIAM PITT

With death doom'd to grapple
 Beneath this cold slab, he Who lied in the Chapel
 Now lies in the Abbey.

(1) [See Vol. III p. 319 ante.]

SONNET TO GEORGE THE FOURTH,

ON THE REPEAL OF LORD EDWARD FITZGERALD'S FORFEITURE

To be the father of the fatherless,
 To stretch the hand from the throne's height, and raise

His offspring, who expired in other days
 To take thy sire's sway by a kingdom less, —
This is to be a monarch, and repress
 Envy into unutterable praise

Dismiss thy guard, and trust thee to such traits,
 For who would lift a hand, except to bless?

Were it not easy, sn, and is't not sweet
 To make thyself beloved? and to be Omnipotent by mercy's means? for thus Thy sovereignty would grow but more complete,
 A despot thou, and yet thy people free,
 And by the heart, not hand, enslaving us

Bologna, August 12 1819 (1)

(1) ["So the prince has been repealing Lord Fitzgerald's forfeiture? I do un' sonnetto? There, you dogs! there's a sonnet for you, you won't have such as that in a hurry from Fitzgerald. You may publish it with my name, in' ye wool. He deserves all praise, bad and good. It was a very noble piece of principality." — Lord B to Mr Murray]

EPIGRAM

FROM THE FRENCH OF BULHIEPES

IF, for silver or for gold,
 You could melt ten thousand pimples
 Into half a dozen dimples,
 Then your face we might behold,
 Looking, doubtless, much more snugly,
 Yet even then 'twould be d d ugly.

ON MY WEDDING-DAY

HERE'S a happy new year! but with reason
 I beg you'll permit me to say—
 Wish me many returns of the season,
 But as few as you please of the day

EPIGRAM

IN-digging up your bones, Tom Paine,
 Will Cobbett has done well
 You visit him on earth again,
 He'll visit you in hell. •

STANZAS

WHEN a man hath no freedom to fight for at home,
 Let him combat for that of his neighbours,
 Let him think of the glories of Greece and of Rome,
 And get knock'd on the head for his labours.

To do good to mankind is the chivalrous plan,
 And is always as nobly requited,
 Then battle for freedom wherever you can,
 And, if not shot or hang'd, you'll get knighted.

EPIGRAM

THE world is a bundle of hay,
 Mankind are the asses who pull,
 Each tugs it a different way,
 And the greatest of all is John Bull

THE IRISH AVATAR

I

But the daughter of Brunswick is cold in her grave
 And her ashes still float to their home o'er the tide,
 Lo! George the triumphant speeds over the wave,
 To the long-cherish'd isle which he loved like his—bride

II.

True, the great, of her bright and brief era are gone,
The rainbow-like epoch where freedom could pause
For the few little years, out of centuries won,
Which betray'd not, or crush'd not, or wept not her cause

III

True, the chains of the Catholic clank o'er his rags,
The castle still stands, and the senate's no more,
And the famine which dwelt on her freedomless crags
Is extending its steps to her desolate shore

IV.

- To her desolate shore—where the emigrant stands
For a moment to gaze ere he flies from his hearth,
Tears fall on his chain, though it drops from his hands,
For the dungeon he quits is the place of his birth.

V

But he comes! the Messiah of royalty comes!
Like a goodly Leviathan roll'd from the waves!
Then receive him as best such an advent becomes,
With a legion of cooks, and an army of slaves!

VI

He comes in the promise and bloom of threescore,
To perform in the pageant the sovereign's part
But long live the shamrock which shadows him o'er Could the green in his hat, be transferr'd to his heart !